Sun, 100 million people smile on Rose festivities

By KRIS SHERMAN
Staff Writer

Rain clouds parted and the sun warmed Colorado Boulevard, but mechanical failures dogged several floats Saturday as an estimated 1.4 million persons gathered in Pasadena for the 88th annual Tournament of Roses Parade.

More than 100 million persons watched the spectacle on national television as the Southland served up a slice of "The Good Life" with 61 flower-covered floats, 250 equestrians and more than 4,000 bandsmen.

The Long Beach Mounted Police, dressed in red, white and blue Bicentennial costumes, led the parade astride matched palominos while carrying massed American flags.

ROY ROGERS and Dale Evans served as grand marshals, the first time a husband and wife have shared the honor. Saturday was the couple's 29th wedding anniversary.

Glendale, the parade's second oldest participant, captured the coveted Sweepstakes Trophy for the most beautiful noncommercial entry with "Life I s Beautiful," a pair of elegant floral peacocks, their tails spread wide for all to see.

The Eastman Kodak Company's "A Moment of Beauty," showing a group of huge Monarch butterflies fluttering over California's Monterey Peninsula, was awarded the Grand Prize for the most beautiful commercial float.

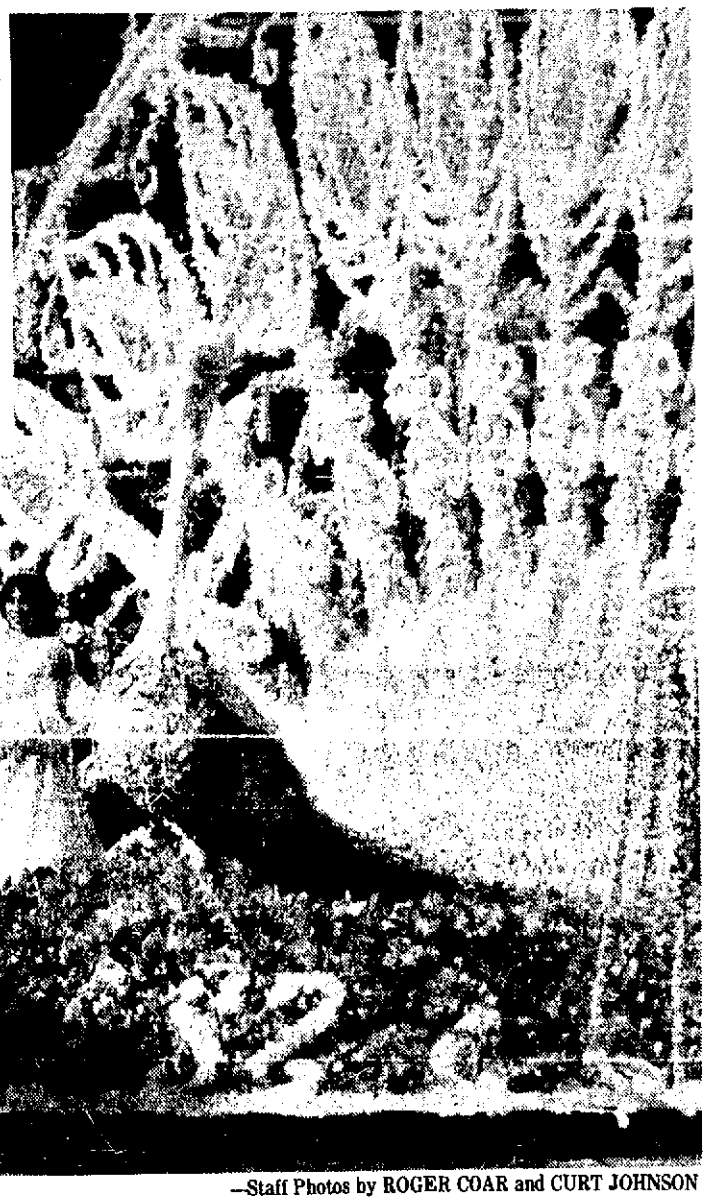

Lakewood won the Queen's Trophy for the most effective use of roses in its floral tribute to "Being in Love," and Long Beach took first place in its category for "By the Sea," an entry depicting recreational activities in the city.

Floats from the cities of Torrance, Carson and Mission Viejo also captured first place awards in their categories, based on population.

BUT DESPITE the festive atmosphere and optimistic theme, the usually smooth-running parade moved sluggishly at several points as officials gingerly negotiated balky floats around the turn from Orange Grove Boulevard to Colorado Boulevard.

A year passes—'77 begins with a 'miracle'

By JOHN SHEEHAN
Staff Writer

Though a new year arrived, life and death were, as always, a revolving door Saturday.

Less than three hours after a 17-year-old Los Angeles girl gave birth to the first baby of the new year in Lynwood, a 23-year-old Carson man became the county's first traffic fatality of 1977.

In Los Angeles, sheriff's deputies described what may have been the first miracle of the year as a young woman survived a six-floor plunge from an apartment building.

Regina Lacy, 17, delivered a 7-pound, 7-ounce daughter at 30 seconds after midnight in St. Francis Hospital in Lynwood. The 21-inch infant, Nicole Elizabeth Lacy, was reported in good condition and her mother was "alert and excited," according to hospital spokeswoman Susan Cohn.

Steven Gene Jordan, of 108 E. 227th St., Carson, was pronounced dead at the scene after his motorcycle rammed a car making a right turn at a Torrance intersection at 2:34 a.m., authorities said.

Sheriff's deputies said the auto failed to stop at the scene at Artesia Boulevard and Amie Avenue.

Reports by witnesses led deputies to the home of Michael Brett Eckman, 34, of 1720 Eastwood Ave., Torrance, who was booked on suspicion of felony hit-and-run and drunk driving.

Lillian Sanchez, a 21-year-old Los Angeles woman, walked away from a six-story fall from a Hancock Park area building, deputies said.

She was found sitting on the lawn between two apartment buildings with a fractured arm after falling from a window during a party, deputies said. Some witnesses reported that Ms. Sanchez tripped over a rug, but others told deputies she jumped.

Los Angeles police said an unidentified North Hollywood man became 1977's first victim of a violent crime after he was beaten to death about 1 a.m. for an unknown reason. Police said the man collapsed after making his way to a home in the Wilshire area.

Twenty minutes later, a 27-year-old Los Angeles woman fought off three male attackers outside her hotel by stabbing one of them in the throat, according to police.

Police booked both Maria Corrando and two of the men on suspicion of murder. The unidentified third man died shortly after at County—USC Medical Center.

An unidentified 40-year-old laborer killed himself with a gunshot in the head in front of a Pacoima home while celebrating the new year by firing a .30-caliber carbine into the air, Los Angeles police said.

Carter approves of statehood for Puerto Rico if residents want it

By LAWRENCE L. KNUTSON

PLAINS, Ga. (AP) — President-elect Jimmy Carter said Saturday that Congress should not consider making Puerto Rico the 51st state until the island's residents have expressed a clear preference for statehood.

Carter, after visiting his mother at the hopital, was asked about President Ford's proposal to Congress to make Puerto Rico a state.

"I would be perfectly willing to see Puerto Rico become a state if the people who live there prefer that," Carter said.

But he said his position remains unchanged from his stand in the recent campaign and that "until the Puerto Rican people themselves express a preference for statehood, the Congress should not act."

Ford is proposing that Congress approve statehood. Then it would be voted on by the Puerto Ricans.

In a 1967 vote, 60 per cent favored maintaining their commonwealth status. Last Nov. 2 the gubernatorial election was won by a proponent of statehood, Carlos Romero Barcello.

Asked about Carter's statement Saturday, Ford said, "I respect his opinion, and I respectfully disagree."

Carter was having lunch on the traditional Southern New Year's Day menu of hog jowls and black-eyed peas. He spent part of the day discussing top federal positions still to be filled with Hamilton Jordan, his chief talent scout and former campaign director.

Carter said he and his Cabinet appointees have agreed that they will recommend persons to fill their departments' top jobs and that Carter will have veto power.

"He's given them broad latitude in terms of these appointments," Jordan said as he arrived from Washington to meet with Carter.

"In the final analysis the process tilts in favor of the Cabinet secretary having the decision as to who the person is going to be. The governor is not going to force a deputy or an assistant secretary on a Cabinet official."

Jordan said that while no commitments are being made he thinks all White House staff members and most sub-Cabinet officials will be

New storms lift hopes that California drought is over

Associated Press

A new Pacific storm moved into Northern California Saturday, raising New Years Day hopes that a disastrous two-year drought has been snapped with the collapse of a powerful high pressure system.

The National Weather Service called for rain today in the north, with a second weather front on its heels bearing more rain and snow for the Sierra Nevada.

Forecasters said there was a 60 per cent chance of showers in the Long Beach area today and tonight with a high temperature near 62 and a low near 48. Considerable cloudiness was forecast through Monday, when possible showers are expected to be confined to the mountains.

Extended forecasts predicted continued showers as late in the week as Thursday for the northern half of the state, still drying out from the first precipitation in 46 days. Up to three inches of rain fell in some parts of the state Thursday.

California's water problems began in 1975, the third driest year in state history. Crop losses in 1976 hit $750 million, and flames sweeping across tinderdry forest and brush land charred 167,000 acres valued at an estimated $15.2 million.

Losses to the skiing industry this season alone are estimated at $5 million.

New year greeted by turmoil in N. Ireland

Combined News Services

BELFAST, Northern Ireland — Terrorists launched their 1977 guerrilla campaign Saturday, attacking British soldiers and setting a series of bombs — one of which killed a 5-month-old boy.

The infant became the 1,687th victim of sectarian warfare since Protestant and Roman Catholic militants began fighting in 1969. Violence claimed 295 lives in this predominantly Protestant British province last year.

Police said the mother was carrying her child to a waiting car in a Belfast suburb Saturday night when a bomb went off in a vehicle parked nearby. The mother was seriously injured.

A British army spokesman said 1977 was less than a minute old when gunmen opened up on the Fort Monagh army base in West Belfast. Minutes later, gunmen ambushed a patrol in the turbulent Turf Lodge district.

No casualties were reported in either attack, the British said.

A bomb planted in the golf club at Dunmurry on Belfast's outskirts severely damaged the building but no one was injured, police reported. Two other bombs exploded minutes before church bells rang in the new year at midnight.

Oil hike slated

JEDDAH, Saudi Arabia — Saudi Arabia gradually will increase its crude oil production to 11.9 million barrels a day to keep pace with foreign demand in 1977, the English-language daily newspaper Arab News reported Saturday. The paper quoted government sources as saying the production increase is aimed at neutralizing oil price hikes agreed on by 11 other members of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries — OPEC — at their meeting in Qatar last month.

Reds protest

NEW DELHI — The Indian Communist party, defying Prime Minister Indira Gandhi's government, opened a nationwide campaign of rallies and demonstrations Saturday to protest recent increases in the cost of living. The demonstrations, which were generally peaceful, marked a new low in the relationship between the Communists and Prime Minister Gandhi's Congress party, which used to be firm parliamentary allies.

18 hurt in riot

CAIRO, Egypt — A demonstration in the city of Biyala against an increase in crime turned into a riot and 18 persons were injured, the Interior Ministry reported Saturday. It said rioters set fire to the courthouse, the railway station and two police cars before police gained control in the New Year's Eve fighting. Seventeen persons were arrested, according to the announcement.

BEIRUT, Lebanon — The government of Moslem Premier Salim el-Hoss, for the first time using its power to rule by decree, ordered censorship Saturday for all publications in Lebanon.

Fires kill 18

CHICAGO — As flames rushed through the three-story apartment building, 10 children were dropped safely to outstretched arms below. But later the bodies of eight persons were pulled from the rubble.

"People were yelling and screaming to save the kids," said Patrolman Robert Drobniewski.

With smoke billowing out of the building, adults leaned out of windows on the second and third floors, shouting to people on the street to help with the children, said Carmelo Ortiz, 19, who witnessed the New Year's Eve blaze.

Adults grasped the youngsters by their hands and wrists and dangled them out of the windows.

In New York on New Year's Eve, a grandmother and three of her grandchildren were killed in a blaze apparently set off by a gas explosion. Six children were killed in a fire in Grand Rapids, Mich. Their bodies were found huddled in a bedroom, and fire officials said they died of smoke inhalation.

First baby

The first baby born in Rhode Island in 1977 was the seven-pound, eight-ounce son of Dr. and Mrs. Patrick T. Conley of Cranston, chairman of the state's Bicentennial Commission.

The father, while proud, was disappointed.

"I was hoping the baby would be born an hour earlier so 1976 would go out with a boom," said Conley.

As for the baby's mother, she thought the timing was perfect.

First baby illegitimate

Rosie Coulter, 21, holding Salt Lake City's first baby of the new year, says it doesn't bother her that the child was born out of wedlock. "It's a new generation. . . .It's the best thing that could happen," she said after giving birth to a 13 pound, 9 ounce girl who will collect hundreds of dollars in prizes from local merchants. the WORLD TODAY

New year greeted by turmoil in N. Ireland

Combined News Services

BELFAST, Northern Ireland — Terrorists launched their 1977 guerrilla campaign Saturday, attacking British soldiers and setting a series of bombs — one of which killed a 5-month-old boy.

INTERNATIONAL

The infant became the 1,687th victim of sectarian warfare since Protestant and Roman Catholic militants began fighting in 1969. Violence claimed 295 lives in this predominantly Protestant British province last year.

Police said the mother was carrying her child to a waiting car in a Belfast suburb Saturday night when a bomb went off in a vehicle parked nearby. The mother was seriously injured.

A British army spokesman said 1977 was less than a minute old when gunmen opened up on the Fort Monagh army base in West Belfast. Minutes later, gunmen ambushed a patrol in the turbulent Turf Lodge district.

No casualties were reported in either attack, the British said.

A bomb planted in the golf club at Dunmurry on Belfast's outskirts severely damaged the building but no one was injured, police reported. Two other bombs exploded minutes before church bells rang in the new year at midnight.

Oil hike slated

JEDDAH, Saudi Arabia — Saudi Arabia gradually will increase its crude oil production to 11.9 million barrels a day to keep pace with foreign demand in 1977, the English-language daily newspaper Arab News reported Saturday. The paper quoted government sources as saying the production increase is aimed at neutralizing oil price hikes agreed on by 11 other members of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries — OPEC — at their meeting in Qatar last month.

Reds protest

NEW DELHI — The Indian Communist party, defying Prime Minister Indira Gandhi's government, opened a nationwide campaign of rallies and demonstrations Saturday to protest recent increases in the cost of living. The demonstrations, which were generally peaceful, marked a new low in the relationship between the Communists and Prime Minister Gandhi's Congress party, which used to be firm parliamentary allies.

18 hurt in riot

CAIRO, Egypt — A demonstration in the city of Biyala against an increase in crime turned into a riot and 18 persons were injured, the Interior Ministry reported Saturday. It said rioters set fire to the courthouse, the railway station and two police cars before police gained control in the New Year's Eve fighting. Seventeen persons were arrested, according to the announcement.

Press censored

BEIRUT, Lebanon — The government of Moslem Premier Salim el-Hoss, for the first time using its power to rule by decree, ordered censorship Saturday for all publications in Lebanon.

Fires kill 18

CHICAGO — As flames rushed through the three-story apartment building, 10 children were dropped safely to outstretched arms below. But later the bodies of eight persons were pulled from the rubble.

"People were yelling and screaming to save the kids," said Patrolman Robert Drobniewski.

With smoke billowing out of the building, adults leaned out of windows on the second and third floors, shouting to people on the street to help with the children, said Carmelo Ortiz, 19, who witnessed the New Year's Eve blaze.

Adults grasped the youngsters by their hands and wrists and dangled them out of the windows.

In New York on New Year's Eve, a grandmother and three of her grandchildren were killed in a blaze apparently set off by a gas explosion. Six children were killed in a fire in Grand Rapids, Mich. Their bodies were found huddled in a bedroom, and fire officials said they died of smoke inhalation.

Hotel strike goes on

MIAMI BEACH, Fla. — No settlement was in sight Saturday as a strike against eight luxury hotels entered its second week. The hotels, in Miami Beach and Miami, are being picketed by striking maids, bellhops, waiters and other service employes. A sticking point has been guaranteed tips for maids, whose income the union says dropped as prepaid tours became important to Miami Beach hotels.

6 rescued off plane after crashlanding near Catalina

Six persons were rescued from a sinking airplane Saturday morning off Catalina Island after the plane lost power and ditched in the water. Injuries were minor.

The pilot, Mike Fisher, 27, of 636 W. Knepp Ave., Fullerton, told county lifeguards he was flying to Santa Catalina Island when his rented plane lost power.

Other passengers included the pilot's brother, Dave Fisher, 16, of Whittier; Norm Allison, 49, of Tustin, his wife, Norma, 46, and their two daughters, Diana, 15, and Carolyn, 13.

Authorities said Fisher rented the plane, a Cessna 210 valued at $57,900, Saturday morning from Skyhaven Aviation at Fullerton Airport.

Air controllers at the Long Beach tower said they received a distress call from the single-engine plane at 11:38 a.m. Controllers said Fisher told them he was about five miles northeast of Long Point on Catalina, flying at 800 feet and losing power.

JUST AS the Coast Guard was readying a helicopter to fly to the aid of the small plane, crewmen on the pleasure fishing boat Silver Fox radioed they had spotted an airplane dropping into the ocean nearby.

Fisher and his five passengers swam free of the sinking plane and grabbed floating seat cushions thrown to them from the boat, lifeguards said. They spent about seven minutes in the water, according to lifeguards.

The Silver Fox picked them up from the water and transferred them to the county lifeguard boat, Isthmus Baywatch. Fisher told lifeguards he developed fuel problems and landed the plane tail first near a boat.

He and his passengers were transferred to another lifeguard boat, Cabrillo Baywatch, which landed them at 1:05 p.m. at the Fort MacArthur fireboat station in San Pedro.

College course

Can Action Line explain the Electoral College process? How many electors are there, and how are they chosen? L.R., Long Beach.

When the people vote for president, they actually vote for a slate of electors chosen by the political parties and pledged to cast their electoral votes for the candidates selected at the national nominating conventions. But by law the electors, who usually are party regulars, cannot be forced to keep their pledge. (When the Electoral College met Dec. 13 to elect the president, one Ford elector voted for Ronald Reagan.) There are 538 votes in the Electoral College, and a candidate needs a simple majority to win. The electors meet at their state capitols in December following their election to vote for the president and vice president. Each state has as many electors as it has senators and representatives. Except in Maine, all of a state's electoral votes go to the party whose presidential candidate receives a plurality of the popular vote. (Maine, under a system adopted in 1969, is divided into electoral districts. The candidate winning the popular vote in each district gets that district's one electoral vote, and the winner for the state as a whole gets two additional electoral votes.) Under the Electoral College system, a party could receive a minority of popular votes and still receive a majority of electoral votes. Rutherford B. Hayes and Benjamin Harrison were "minority presidents" — they lost in the popular elections. The Electoral College was proposed by conservatives at the 1787 Constitutional Convention because they feared that the voters were unqualified for a direct democracy. They envisioned the electors' selecting the most qualified person on behalf of the voters; they apparently did not anticipate the present system of political parties' selecting electors who are pre-pledged to a specific candidate. Critics now call the Electoral College archaic and undemocratic, but repeated attempts in Congress to eliminate the system have been defeated.

Door delivery

We recently bought a new house which is one of seven new houses on the block. We have been told that we can have curb-side mail delivery only. This seems strange to us since the older homes on the block have mail delivered to their front doors. It seems unfair that we have to pay the same taxes but get only half of the mail service, plus we have the expense of putting up a rural-type mailbox. Would you look into this for us? Mr. and Mrs. C.E., Long Beach.

You and the other newcomers to your block will now have your mail delivered to your garage doors, according to Robert Lynch, customer service manager for the U.S. Postal Service in Long Beach. A law in effect since Sept. 24, and extending to next March 15, allows a new home to have either curb or door delivery if its "setback doesn't exceed 30 feet or its frontage doesn't exceed 50 feet," Lynch said. If those limits are exceeded, "it has to be curb-line." Lynch sent two men out to your neighborhood after Action Line contacted him on your behalf, and he reported back to us that their measurements showed that the setback for most of the seven houses exceeded 30 feet, but just barely. Since it was so close, the decision was made to allow delivery to the garage doors. Before Sept. 24, the Postal Service policy required that new housing tracts and apartment buildings had to have either curb-side or cluster delivery to save costs.

Steam lines

Is there a directory of the state's operating steam railroads, such as the California Western "Skunk" line in Willits, that schedule scenic trips for vacationers? I'd also like to know the name of the line and the location of the little railroad that was featured in the old television series "Petticoat Junction." J.N., Long Beach.

"The Steam Passenger Service Directory," published by the Empire State Railway Museum in Middletown, N.Y., lists all the currently operating steam railroads in the United States. You can order a copy by mail for $2.65, which includes tax and postage costs, from the Orange Empire Railway Museum, P.O. Box 548, Perris, Calif. 92370. There are several small steam railroad lines in California, but the three that are the most popular with tourists are the California Western Railroad, which runs from Fort Bragg to Willits; the Roaring Camp & Big Trees Narrow-Gauge Railroad at Felton in the Santa Cruz Mountains, and the Sierra Railroad in Jamestown, 40 miles east of Stockton. The last one was the line featured in "Petticoat Junction."

Wreckage of plane found; four dead

Wreckage of a light plane in which four persons died, was found Saturday in the desert east of Victorville, the San Bernardino County sheriff's office said.

The plane, reported missing Friday, was found by a sheriff's helicopter three miles south of Target Peak in the Rodman Mountains. A ground crew removed the bodies from the plane.

The victims were identified as Joseph Marzoa, 45, the pilot, and his son, Paul, 7, both of Cypress; and Frank Principalle, 40, and his daughter, Sandra, 10, of 5642 Richmond Ave., Garden Grove.

The California Civil Air Patrol said the plane, a twin-engine Beechcraft Baron, left Orange County Airport at 3:13 p.m. Friday for a 90-minute flight to Las Vegas.

CAP officials said the plane was tracked on radar because the pilot had filed an instrument flight plan. The CAP said the plane was at 14,700 feet and planning to climb to 15,000 feet when it started to descend and disappeared from the radar screen at about 12,000 feet.

Bad weather prevented an immediate air search and three ground rescue teams began combing the area for wreckage, authorities said.

The CAP said Mrs. Marzoa and Mrs. Principalle had flown by commercial airliner to Las Vegas.

The crash is under investigation by the Federal Aviation Administration and the National Transportation Safety Board.

Plane plunges into bay

TAMPA, Fla. (AP) — The pilot and six occupants of a twin-engine plane ditched in Hillsborough Bay at the end of a New Year's Eve pleasure flight sustained only minor injuries, police said.

The pilot, Arthur Gray of Tampa, said there was an explosion and fire when the plane hit the water Friday night, minutes before midnight.

Manson girl changed by life in prison

After six years, Van Houten will get new trial, chance at freedom

By MARY NEISWENDER
Staff Writer

The laughing, bubbling 21-year-old girl who titillated a courtroom as she described trying to join a nunnery for the love of a man, and then horrified the same courtroom as she described murdering for the love of another, will have a chance to tell her story again, this time to a new set of judges.

The Leslie Van Houten who will be re-tried beginning Jan. 20 for her part in the Tate-La Bianca murder case no longer is the arm-waving, animated, happy-go-lucky free-thinker she was when she was sentenced to die with four other members of Charles Manson's hippie family for the killings.

She has aged, mellowed and changed during her six years in prison, says her attorney, Maxwell Keith.

Changes — at least, in her outward appearance — are obvious.

SIX YEARS AGO, Leslie Van Houten was the laughing, arm-waving free-thinker pictured at left. Now after six years in prison, she is much more sober and, according to her attorney, a changed person. —AP Wirephoto

SIX YEARS in prison have left their mark on her once tanned face. Her eyes no longer sparkle. Laughter doesn't come easily and, in fact, is rare. There's no bounce to her step. Her pigtails are gone.

What is not obvious, although Keith maintains it is there, is the change of heart and mind that the former homecoming princess-turned hippie has undergone behind bars.

"She's older — a mature woman now," Keith claims. "People change their minds even when not in prison, and she's changed hers.

"She's forsaken the Manson Family. She's back with her own now."

That family, says Keith, includes her parents and brothers and sister, who have visted her regularly since she was taken to the California Institution for Women at Frontera in April of 1971, following a sensational eight-month trial.

"HER MOTHER has visited her at least once a week," Keith says, "and she is very close to her as well as to her brothers and sister. One of her brothers is in the San Francisco area, and doesn't see her often, but he was down the other day with his wife to visit."

It's not, says Keith, going to be pleasant for the Van Houten family, but the sensationalism and the lengthy time in court of the first trial are not expected in the forthcoming retrial.

Since she is charged only with the killing of market owner Leno LaBianca and his wife, Rosemary, the five murders at the home of actress Sharon Tate are not expected to be part of the trial. Trial time, according to Keith, will probably be two months — a fourth of the time taken by the original trial.

KEITH, who argued successfully before the State Appeals Court that his client was unfairly tried — in that her first attorney died before the trial had ended and there was no way a second attorney could effectively take over the case in mid-trial — says he has met at great length with the former beauty queen during the past several months.

"She's doing fine . . . and has progressed remarkably. All reports from the prison show her to be above average to superior intelligence."

Although initially housed at the state facility with her two former companions, Patricia Krenwinkle and Susan Atkins, in the past several years she has been living with the prison's general population and away from the two other girls.

Lately, Miss Atkins, whose confession led to the arrests and convictions of all the other Manson members involved in the two crimes, has been transferred to the psychiatric unit of the prison.

"LESLIE edited the inmate paper and has taken a lot of college correspondence courses while she was in prison," Keith says.

But this, according to her courtroom testimony, wasn't always her attitude.

"There were three kinds of kids at school," she explained. "One kind sat around with their heads in books, studying and writing things down; another drank and smoked cigarettes; another kind just dropped acid and looked at each other — that was me."

But that acid-dropping girl evolved two years after her selection at 15 as homecoming princess of her high school in Monrovia.

Then, she testified, she was introduced to marijuana and LSD and was no longer voted homecoming princess by the school's football players.

"It was," she told the court, "because I didn't smile at them anymore . . . I lost interest in competing . . . when I took acid I became happy with myself, so I didn't have to go out and prove myself to anyone.

"HALF THE time, I didn't go to school, anyway . . . my grades went down. I was having more fun just going out and having fun with people than hiding my nose in a book."

She straightened out, she said, when her boyfriend decided to become a monk. She tried to become a nun in the same sect, but was told they needed a secretary, instead.

"So I went to school . . . I either meditated or did shorthand for eight months," she told an engrossed courtroom. "I was like a machine."

She dropped out of the church, she said, because she found it hypocritical: "They wouldn't let hippies in without shoes, yet their gurus didn't have shoes. It didn't make sense."

And neither, she said, did the thought of a nine-to-five job.

"ALL MY life, I'd gone to school . . . a set routine . . . I finally was released from my parents, and getting a 9-to-5 job was being put back on routine . . . it was a grey thought so I abandoned it."

Now — six years after her remarks in court and six years of prison routine — she is looking forward to a quiet routine in the world.

"She wants to be a writer (she sold a short story to a national magazine while in prison) and is looking forward to coming out," Keith said.

"But she realizes now that it's a hard world . . ."

Longet manslaughter trial to open Monday

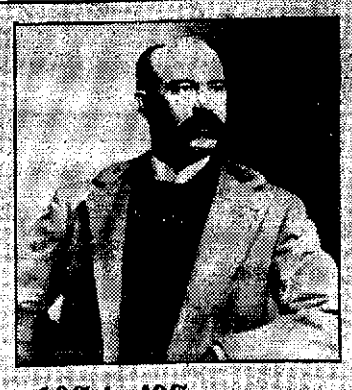

ASPEN, Colo. (AP) — The manslaughter trial of singer and actress Claudine Longet begins here Monday, nine months after professional skier Spider Sabich was shot to death in the mountain home he shared with her.

Miss Longet, the former wife of singer Andy Williams, has said the .22-caliber pistol which killed her lover fired accidentally.

An Aspen police officer said at a court hearing that Miss Longet reported she "jokingly said 'bang bang' a couple of times" after pointing the gun at Sabich.

The trial will be held in the red-brick Victorian courthouse built for Pitkin County in 1890 in this central Colorado Rockies town.

Aspen's chief industry in the 1800s was mining, but it's skiing now, and Vladimir "Spider" Sabich was among the town's most prominent citizens. He died March 21 of a gunshot wound in the abdomen.

6 rescued off plane after crashlanding near Catalina

Six persons were rescued from a sinking airplane Saturday morning off Catalina Island after the plane lost power and ditched in the water. Injuries were minor.

The pilot, Mike Fisher, 27, of 636 W. Knepp Ave., Fullerton, told county lifeguards he was flying to Santa Catalina Island when his rented plane lost power.

Other passengers included the pilot's brother, Dave Fisher, 16, of Whittier; Norm Allison, 49, of Tustin, his wife, Norma, 46, and their two daughters, Diana, 15, and Carolyn, 13.

Authorities said Fisher rented the plane, a Cessna 210 valued at $57,900, Saturday morning from Skyhaven Aviation at Fullerton Airport.

Air controllers at the Long Beach tower said they received a distress call from the single-engine plane at 11:38 a.m. Controllers said Fisher told them he was about five miles northeast of Long Point on Catalina, flying at 800 feet and losing power.

JUST AS the Coast Guard was readying a helicopter to fly to the aid of the small plane, crewmen on the pleasure fishing boat Silver Fox radioed they had spotted an airplane dropping into the ocean nearby.

Fisher and his five passengers swam free of the sinking plane and grabbed floating seat cushions thrown to them from the boat, lifeguards said. They spent about seven minutes in the water, according to lifeguards.

The Silver Fox picked them up from the water and transferred them to the county lifeguard boat, Isthmus Baywatch. Fisher told lifeguards he developed fuel problems and landed the plane tail first near a boat.

He and his passengers were transferred to another lifeguard boat, Cabrillo Baywatch, which landed them at 1:05 p.m. at the Fort MacArthur fireboat station in San Pedro.

College course

Can Action Line explain the Electoral College process? How many electors are there, and how are they chosen? L.R., Long Beach.

When the people vote for president, they actually vote for a slate of electors chosen by the political parties and pledged to cast their electoral votes for the candidates selected at the national nominating conventions. But by law the electors, who usually are party regulars, cannot be forced to keep their pledge. (When the Electoral College met Dec. 13 to elect the president, one Ford elector voted for Ronald Reagan.) There are 538 votes in the Electoral College, and a candidate needs a simple majority to win. The electors meet at their state capitols in December following their election to vote for the president and vice president. Each state has as many electors as it has senators and representatives. Except in Maine, all of a state's electoral votes go to the party whose presidential candidate receives a plurality of the popular vote. (Maine, under a system adopted in 1969, is divided into electoral districts. The candidate winning the popular vote in each district gets that district's one electoral vote, and the winner for the state as a whole gets two additional electoral votes.) Under the Electoral College system, a party could receive a minority of popular votes and still receive a majority of electoral votes. Rutherford B. Hayes and Benjamin Harrison were "minority presidents" — they lost in the popular elections. The Electoral College was proposed by conservatives at the 1787 Constitutional Convention because they feared that the voters were unqualified for a direct democracy. They envisioned the electors' selecting the most qualified person on behalf of the voters; they apparently did not anticipate the present system of political parties' selecting electors who are pre-pledged to a specific candidate. Critics now call the Electoral College archaic and undemocratic, but repeated attempts in Congress to eliminate the system have been defeated.

We recently bought a new house which is one of seven new houses on the block. We have been told that we can have curb-side mail delivery only. This seems strange to us since the older homes on the block have mail delivered to their front doors. It seems unfair that we have to pay the same taxes but get only half of the mail service, plus we have the expense of putting up a rural-type mailbox. Would you look into this for us? Mr. and Mrs. C.E., Long Beach.

You and the other newcomers to your block will now have your mail delivered to your garage doors, according to Robert Lynch, customer service manager for the U.S. Postal Service in Long Beach. A law in effect since Sept. 24, and extending to next March 15, allows a new home to have either curb or door delivery if its "setback doesn't exceed 30 feet or its frontage doesn't exceed 50 feet," Lynch said. If those limits are exceeded, "it has to be curb-line." Lynch sent two men out to your neighborhood after Action Line contacted him on your behalf, and he reported back to us that their measurements showed that the setback for most of the seven houses exceeded 30 feet, but just barely. Since it was so close, the decision was made to allow delivery to the garage doors. Before Sept. 24, the Postal Service policy required that new housing tracts and apartment buildings had to have either curb-side or cluster delivery to save costs.

Is there a directory of the state's operating steam railroads, such as the California Western "Skunk" line in Willits, that schedule scenic trips for vacationers? I'd also like to know the name of the line and the location of the little railroad that was featured in the old television series "Petticoat Junction." J.N., Long Beach.

"The Steam Passenger Service Directory," published by the Empire State Railway Museum in Middletown, N.Y., lists all the currently operating steam railroads in the United States. You can order a copy by mail for $2.65, which includes tax and postage costs, from the Orange Empire Railway Museum, P.O. Box 548, Perris, Calif. 92370. There are several small steam railroad lines in California, but the three that are the most popular with tourists are the California Western Railroad, which runs from Fort Bragg to Willits; the Roaring Camp & Big Trees Narrow-Gauge Railroad at Felton in the Santa Cruz Mountains, and the Sierra Railroad in Jamestown, 40 miles east of Stockton. The last one was the line featured in "Petticoat Junction."

Wreckage of plane found; four dead

Wreckage of a light plane in which four persons died, was found Saturday in the desert east of Victorville, the San Bernardino County sheriff's office said.

The plane, reported missing Friday, was found by a sheriff's helicopter three miles south of Target Peak in the Rodman Mountains. A ground crew removed the bodies from the plane.

The victims were identified as Joseph Marzoa, 45, the pilot, and his son, Paul, 7, both of Cypress; and Frank Principalle, 40, and his daughter, Sandra, 10, of 5642 Richmond Ave., Garden Grove.

The California Civil Air Patrol said the plane, a twin-engine Beechcraft Baron, left Orange County Airport at 3:13 p.m. Friday for a 90-minute flight to Las Vegas.

CAP officials said the plane was tracked on radar because the pilot had filed an instrument flight plan. The CAP said the plane was at 14,700 feet and planning to climb to 15,000 feet when it started to descend and disappeared from the radar screen at about 12,000 feet.

Bad weather prevented an immediate air search and three ground rescue teams began combing the area for wreckage, authorities said.

The CAP said Mrs. Marzoa and Mrs. Principalle had flown by commercial airliner to Las Vegas.

The crash is under investigation by the Federal Aviation Administration and the National Transportation Safety Board.

Plane plunges into bay

TAMPA, Fla. (AP) — The pilot and six occupants of a twin-engine plane ditched in Hillsborough Bay at the end of a New Year's Eve pleasure flight sustained only minor injuries, police said.

The pilot, Arthur Gray of Tampa, said there was an explosion and fire when the plane hit the water Friday night, minutes before midnight.

Manson girl changed by life in prison

After six years, Van Houten will get new trial, chance at freedom

By MARY NEISWENDER
Staff Writer

The laughing, bubbling 21-year-old girl who titillated a courtroom as she described trying to join a nunnery for the love of a man, and then horrified the same courtroom as she described murdering for the love of another, will have a chance to tell her story again, this time to a new set of judges.

The Leslie Van Houten who will be re-tried beginning Jan. 20 for her part in the Tate-La Bianca murder case no longer is the arm-waving, animated, happy-go-lucky free-thinker she was when she was sentenced to die with four other members of Charles Manson's hippie family for the killings.

She has aged, mellowed and changed during her six years in prison, says her attorney, Maxwell Keith.

Changes — at least, in her outward appearance — are obvious.

SIX YEARS AGO, Leslie Van Houten was the laughing, arm-waving free-thinker pictured at left. Now after six years in prison, she is much more sober and, according to her attorney, a changed person. —AP Wirephoto

SIX YEARS in prison have left their mark on her once tanned face. Her eyes no longer sparkle. Laughter doesn't come easily and, in fact, is rare. There's no bounce to her step. Her pigtails are gone.

What is not obvious, although Keith maintains it is there, is the change of heart and mind that the former homecoming princess-turned hippie has undergone behind bars.

"She's older — a mature woman now," Keith claims. "People change their minds even when not in prison, and she's changed hers.

"She's forsaken the Manson Family. She's back with her own now."

That family, says Keith, includes her parents and brothers and sister, who have visted her regularly since she was taken to the California Institution for Women at Frontera in April of 1971, following a sensational eight-month trial.

"HER MOTHER has visited her at least once a week," Keith says, "and she is very close to her as well as to her brothers and sister. One of her brothers is in the San Francisco area, and doesn't see her often, but he was down the other day with his wife to visit."

It's not, says Keith, going to be pleasant for the Van Houten family, but the sensationalism and the lengthy time in court of the first trial are not expected in the forthcoming retrial.

Since she is charged only with the killing of market owner Leno LaBianca and his wife, Rosemary, the five murders at the home of actress Sharon Tate are not expected to be part of the trial. Trial time, according to Keith, will probably be two months — a fourth of the time taken by the original trial.

KEITH, who argued successfully before the State Appeals Court that his client was unfairly tried — in that her first attorney died before the trial had ended and there was no way a second attorney could effectively take over the case in mid-trial — says he has met at great length with the former beauty queen during the past several months.

"She's doing fine . . . and has progressed remarkably. All reports from the prison show her to be above average to superior intelligence."

Although initially housed at the state facility with her two former companions, Patricia Krenwinkle and Susan Atkins, in the past several years she has been living with the prison's general population and away from the two other girls.

Lately, Miss Atkins, whose confession led to the arrests and convictions of all the other Manson members involved in the two crimes, has been transferred to the psychiatric unit of the prison.

"LESLIE edited the inmate paper and has taken a lot of college correspondence courses while she was in prison," Keith says.

But this, according to her courtroom testimony, wasn't always her attitude.

"There were three kinds of kids at school," she explained. "One kind sat around with their heads in books, studying and writing things down; another drank and smoked cigarettes; another kind just dropped acid and looked at each other — that was me."

But that acid-dropping girl evolved two years after her selection at 15 as homecoming princess of her high school in Monrovia.

Then, she testified, she was introduced to marijuana and LSD and was no longer voted homecoming princess by the school's football players.

"It was," she told the court, "because I didn't smile at them anymore . . . I lost interest in competing . . . when I took acid I became happy with myself, so I didn't have to go out and prove myself to anyone.

"HALF THE time, I didn't go to school, anyway . . . my grades went down. I was having more fun just going out and having fun with people than hiding my nose in a book."

She straightened out, she said, when her boyfriend decided to become a monk. She tried to become a nun in the same sect, but was told they needed a secretary, instead.

"So I went to school . . . I either meditated or did shorthand for eight months," she told an engrossed courtroom. "I was like a machine."

She dropped out of the church, she said, because she found it hypocritical: "They wouldn't let hippies in without shoes, yet their gurus didn't have shoes. It didn't make sense."

And neither, she said, did the thought of a nine-to-five job.

"ALL MY life, I'd gone to school . . . a set routine . . . I finally was released from my parents, and getting a 9-to-5 job was being put back on routine . . . it was a grey thought so I abandoned it."

Now — six years after her remarks in court and six years of prison routine — she is looking forward to a quiet routine in the world.

"She wants to be a writer (she sold a short story to a national magazine while in prison) and is looking forward to coming out," Keith said.

"But she realizes now that it's a hard world . . ."

Longet manslaughter trial to open Monday

ASPEN, Colo. (AP) — The manslaughter trial of singer and actress Claudine Longet begins here Monday, nine months after professional skier Spider Sabich was shot to death in the mountain home he shared with her.

Miss Longet, the former wife of singer Andy Williams, has said the .22-caliber pistol which killed her lover fired accidentally.

An Aspen police officer said at a court hearing that Miss Longet reported she "jokingly said 'bang bang' a couple of times" after pointing the gun at Sabich.

The trial will be held in the red-brick Victorian courthouse built for Pitkin County in 1890 in this central Colorado Rockies town.

Aspen's chief industry in the 1800s was mining, but it's skiing now, and Vladimir "Spider" Sabich was among the town's most prominent citizens. He died March 21 of a gunshot wound in the abdomen.

Busnap suspect reveals jail row

New York Times Service

OAKLAND — The three suspects in the Chowchilla school bus kidnaping became embroiled in a jail disturbance here, allegedly led by William Harris of the self-styled Symbionese Liberation Army, jail officials say.

Details of the Dec. 15 brawl with guards, which took place in the prisoner holding area of the Alameda County Courthouse jail, came to light at a hearing in which one of the Chowchilla suspects contested a 10-day loss of visiting privileges for his part in the disturbance.

ACCORDING to jail reports, the trouble began when Harris and another inmate persuaded a dozen prisoners in the jail's holding area to refuse to return to their cells in support of an alleged murder's refusal to make a court appearance.

Punches were thrown and obscenities hurled at guards, who used chemical Mace to regain control, the report said. Harris "also tried to accomplish the same type of disturbance on Dec. 13 but the other inmates failed to follow him," the report added.

One of the Chowchilla suspects, Frederick Newhall Woods, 24, took the witness stand briefly to tell Superior Court Judge Spurgeon Avakian that he had been given no hearing before his visiting privileges were suspended.

Woods's attorney, Herbert Yanowitz, explained to the court that Woods and the other two Chowchilla suspects, James and Richard Schoenfeld were visiting their parents in the holding area when the disturbance began. He said that they did not know what was happening and that before they could return to their cells, the guards were already using Mace.

THE JUDGE permitted Woods holiday visits and said he would rule later on whether Woods was entitled to an administrative hearing in the jail on the suspension of his visiting rights.

The three suspects are awaiting trial on charges of kidnapping 26 Chowchilla schoolchildren and their bus driver last July.

Harris and his wife, Emily, who is housed in another part of the jail, are awaiting trial May 9 on charges of kidnaping Patricia Hearst. He also received a 10-day suspension of visiting privileges and 10 days' solitary confinement. He served five days' solitary confinement last month for "insubordinate behavior," jail officials said.

Letter on SLA entered in Wendy trial

Breakdown of underground group detailed

New York Times Service

OAKLAND — A letter describing the demise of an underground group just before the arrest of Wendy Yoshimura and Patricia Hearst was among the last pieces of evidence presented this week by the prosecution as it completed its case in Miss Yoshimura's trial.

The letter, written in Miss Yoshimura's hand and addressed to "Dearest Brother," disclosed serious ruptures in the relationship between Miss Yoshimura and Miss Hearst, on the one hand, and two Symbionese Liberation Army members, William and Emily Harris, on the other.

In describing the SLA, however, the letter said: "I truly feel that what motivated them to take on armed action is very different from what motivated me and the others."

Miss Yoshimura, 33, has been charged with the illegal possession of explosives and weapons discovered in a Berkeley garage in 1972. The defense has conceded that she rented the garage but has argued that she did not know explosives and weapons were stored there.

The letter was found in the San Francisco apartment where Miss Yoshimura and Miss Hearst were arrested Sept. 18, 1975. It was read to the jury by Jeffrey Horner, Deputy District Attorney of Alameda County.

"Ever since the group came together around these people a little over a year ago," the letter said, "we've had a very trying time" because of "sensationalized media play on those people affecting our heads."

In an apparent reference to the Harrises and Miss Hearst, the letter said: "My experience during the summer made me realize that they (two in particular — not P.H.) in fact are very different from me, and personally, I did not much like them.

"In spite of it I decided to stick with it because of their fierce dedication, my knowing there were others waiting to work together, and I was under their spell."

Relationships broke down again, the letter said, "when there were a series of incidents that took place which made it very clear to particularly J., K., P.H. and me that we wanted no part of it" and had "decided to go our own way."

J. and K. were not identified in the letter. The letter said that the breakup was the fault of two people who were not named but were presumably the Harrises.

William and Emily Harris were involved with Miss Hearst in a shooting at a sporting goods store in Los Angeles after William Harris was accused of shoplifting. A short time later, six other SLA members died in a fire after a gun battle with the police.

The letter said: "P.H. was hated by our 'leader' for being so 'rebellious,'" and added: "I hope you have a chance to meet P.H. She is incredible! She amazes me! I swear only the toughest could have come out of it as she did. What an ordeal she went through!! What an ordeal all of us went through!! I can write a book about it."

The letter, which was signed only "Me," was one of 250 pieces of evidence that the prosecution introduced in its attempt to link Miss Yoshimura to the Berkeley arms cache.

A number of items bearing Miss Yoshimura's fingerprints and taken from the apartment she and Miss Hearst shared and a farmhouse in Pennsylvania, were introduced as evidence. Among them was a .38-caliber revolver discovered in Miss Yoshimura's purse when she was arrested.

The prosecution also introduced ammunition, bomb material and weapons found in the Berkeley garage, including the floor plans and 24 photos of the summer home of former Defense Secretary Robert S. McNamara.

Evader senses new tolerance

DIXON (AP)—A Californian who remained in Europe to avoid the Vietnam war draft says he thinks there's been a change in attitude about draft evaders.

"People are more tolerant, more willing to question," said Jim McKinney, 30, who returned home recently for a Christmas holiday visit. "I found very little opposition to the position I took."

McKinney was overseas when his draft notice arrived in 1970. A critic of the war, he decided to stay in Europe and not report for duty.

He now lives in Paris with his wife, Nancy, and teaches English at a private school.

McKinney was indicted for draft evasion, but the charges were dismissed by a federal judge when the government failed to show cause why it took the action it did.

Although he no longer faces any legal problems, McKinney says he strongly supports amnesty for draft evaders, Vietnam era deserters and soldiers who received less than honorable discharges.

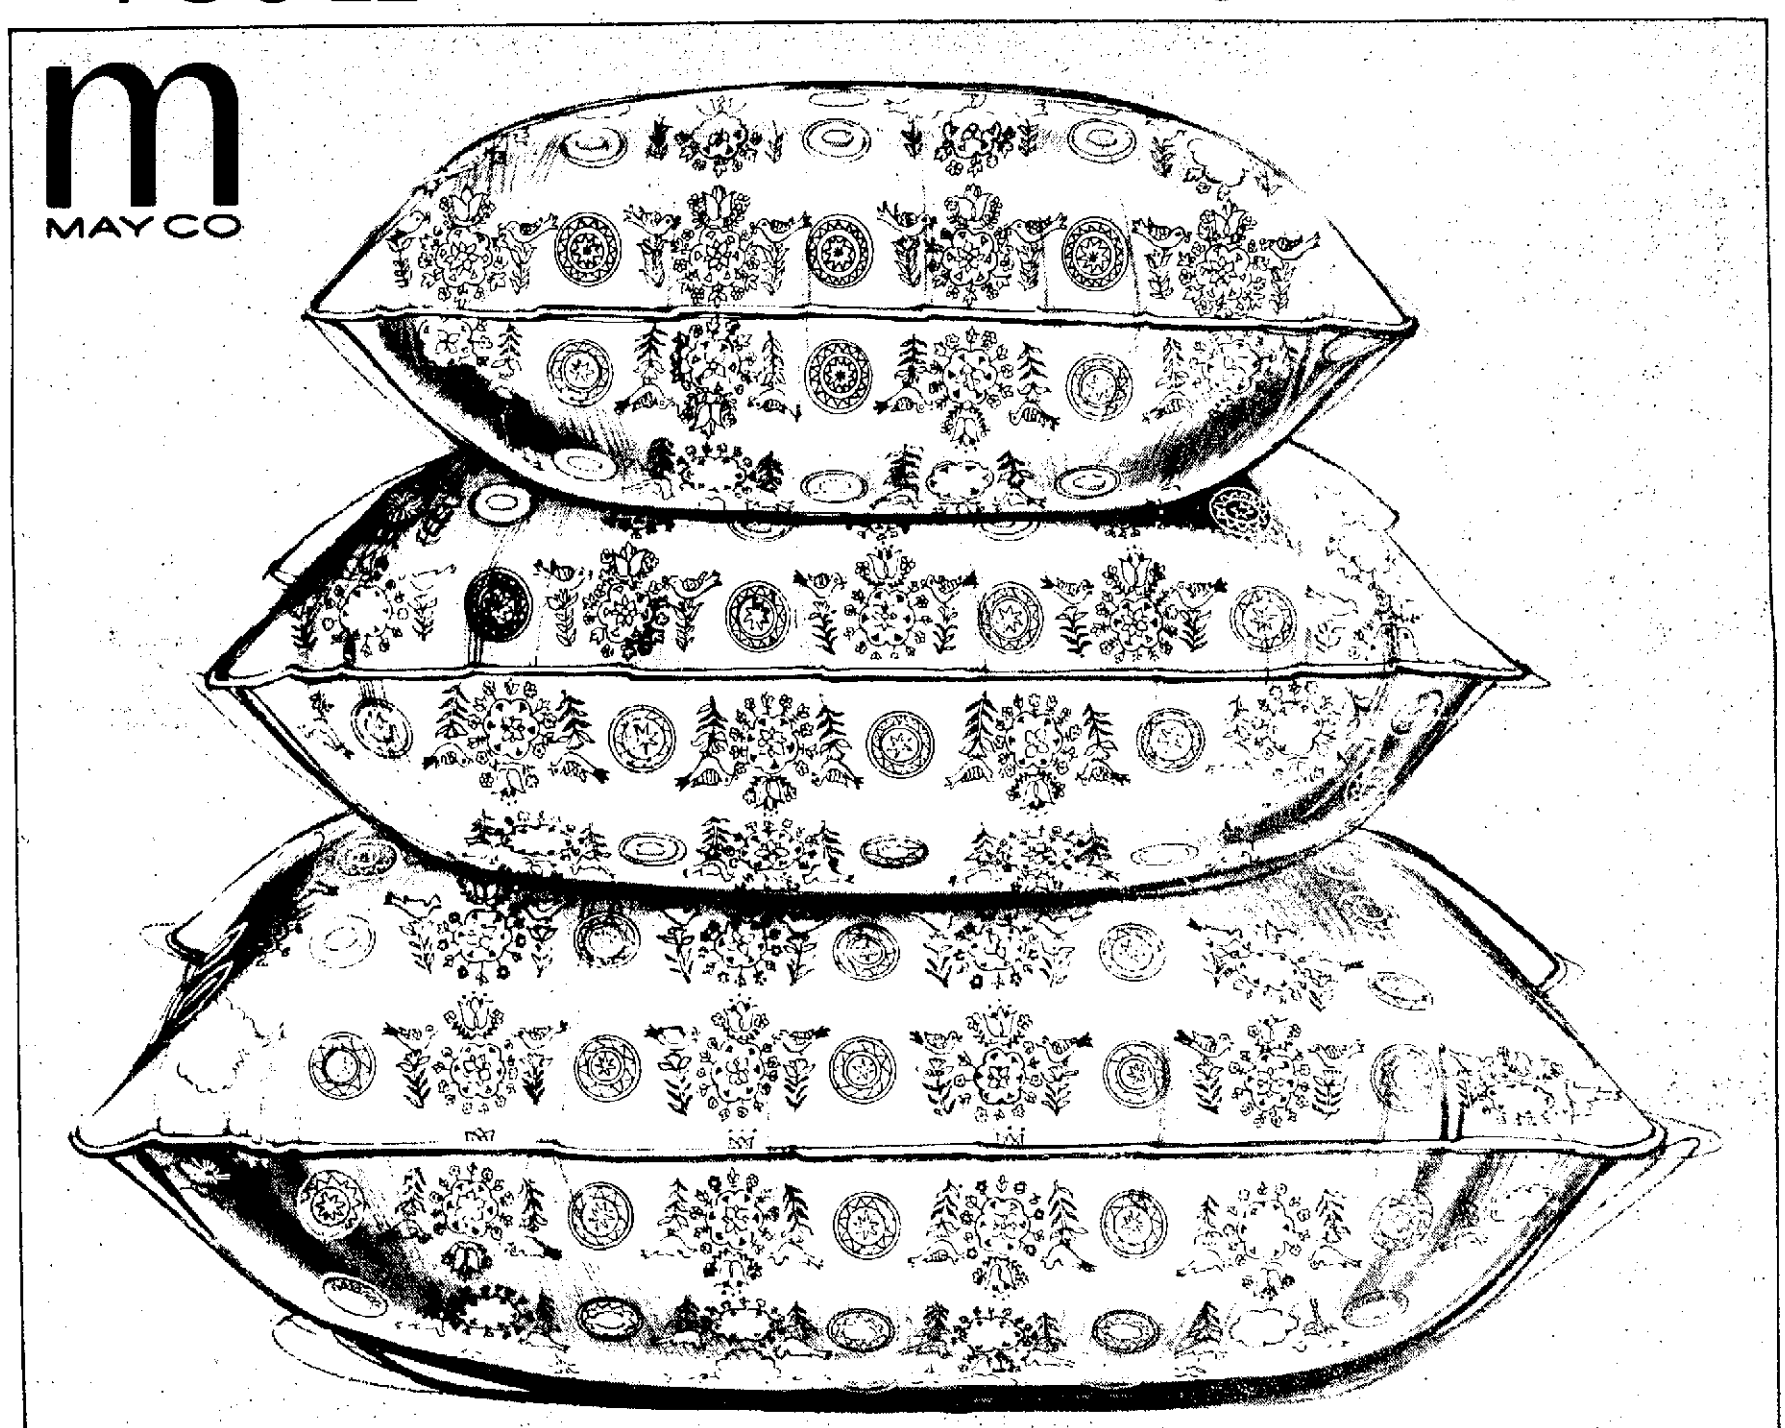

He predicts that pro-amnesty groups will "build a fire under Carter" to get a pardon for all those groups.

Sexy records on pop-disco radio mark erotic '76

By PETER J. BOYER
Associated Press

Spend an hour someday listening to your favorite Top 40 radio station, and what are you likely to get? Sex, and lots of it.

Explicit sex and subtle sex, romantic and often downright raunchy sex, sex with a beat and sex a cappella — for pop music, 1976 was the year of the erotic song.

From Donna Summer's slinky, throaty incantation, "Love to Love You, Baby," to Rod Stewart's "Tonight's the Night," sexy, suggestive songs have given shape to this year's pop music output, topping the charts and putting in lights the names of those artists willing and able to master the sensuous grunt.

"Maybe this is the year of the emergence of the sexy singer," says disc jockey Dr. John at pop-rock station KHJ. "But when it comes to writing songs, what is there besides love, war and the human condition?"

Consider some of the lyrics of "Disco Lady," Johnny Taylor's blockbuster disc that became the first single to reach platinum status (sales over 3 million) in the history of the recording business.

"SHOVE IT in, pull it out," Taylor moans, "move it in, move it out, Disco Lady."

"I thought that was highly offensive," says Dr. John, "But we never got a call on it."

A spot check of rock radio stations around the country showed that Taylor's song, in spite of the earthy lyrics, hadn't prompted many listener complaints and was on most play lists.

"'Shove it in, pull it out' is about as suggestive as you can get," says Peter Starr of Columbia Records, which distributed Taylor's hit song. "'Disco Lady' is obvious; you can't help but get the obvious suggestion of the song.

"And when you say things like that, people listen. Getting the hooks in: That's the name of the game."

To a recording artist, phrases like "getting the hooks in" don't go down very easily. To Taylor, his song was a monumental hit not only because of the suggestive lyrics but because "of the beat and the timing."

"WOULD you believe," he asks cautiously, as if he knows no one will, "that sex was the furthest thing from my mind when I did that?

"Well," he adds with a laugh, "there might have been a little bit lurking around in the back of my head, you know.

"But I saw a bad chick mentally out there on the dance floor, doing her thing. And I'm seeing such a fox, mentally in my mind. I pictured her, and she was really gettin' down. She was shovin' it in and movin' it out (moving her pelvis up and back as in the popular disco dance, the bump). And this is basically what was in my mind when I recorded the song."

Donna Summer isn't quite as shy about her music, which seems to be an out-front attempt at eroticism. Her "Love to Love You, Baby," a moaning, pleading bit of vinyl sensuality, soared to the top of the charts this year, and Miss Summer is quite eager to talk about it.

"I intended to make a sexy song," she says in the throaty voice that has made her famous. "Not a sexy song in the sense of just sexy, but erotic. I mean there are all levels of sexy. It could have been, 'Shake Your Booty.'

"BARRY White was the epitome of masculinity, voicewise, and I just figured men needed something that was comparable to that. There were people singing ballads, but there was nobody singing erotic music for men.

"I decided that was definitely a direction, and if there was a demand for it there was no reason why I shouldn't do it."

Miss Summer's song seemed to meet with more listener complaints than "Disco Lady," but only a few stations refused to play "Love to Love You." One that did was Memphis' WHBQ, a member of the RKO broadcasting chain. Program manager John Long explains why:

"It's obviously a very sexy, very suggestive record. There's a lot of sounds that could be interpreted as intimate sounds, a lot of heavy breathing. I mean she obviously wasn't baking a sweet potato pie."

But stations that refused to play the song were by far the minority. The music of Miss Summers and Johnny Taylor is "earthy and full of good, graphic metaphors," as one record executive put it. And in demand. Like most sexy music, theirs is tailor-made for the disco epoch in which pop music now finds itself.

"THE DISCO beat of 'Love to Love You' is danceable, and that is the reason my music sells well," Miss Summer says. "That and the fact it has a special atmosphere."

Rock singer Rod Stewart's music isn't exactly the disco beat, but atmosphere it has.

His "Tonight's the Night" is a sexy love ballad recounting a pair of lovers' first sexual encounter together, replete with sighs and groans. It is also the nation's top single, Stewart's first hit in a while.

"The entire record is obviously about, well, tonight's the night," Dr. John says, explaining some problems his station — another RKO station — had with the song.

"There's a verse in it that goes, 'Spread your wings and let me come inside,'" he said.

"We put the record on the air, got some complaints and pulled it. Then Warner reissued the record without that verse. It's very rare that an artist or record company will allow themselves to be censored."

"IT'S ALMOST censoring," says Warner Records spokesman Bob Merlis, "but radio plays free advertising, and they didn't like it. But they seem to be playing it now."

Merlis says his company is well aware of the "saleability of sexy music," adding, "I guess we wish we had come up with 'Disco Lady'."

There are, of course, many fringe rock-punk groups to whom sex is a central theme. But these groups— the Tubes, Queen, the Runaways and the plethora of British groups— haven't quite mastered the technique of subtlety necessary to make it really big commercially.

The humping, gyrating moves of such groups are great onstage and win hard-core fans, but it is hard to get air play when you sing of the joys of sadomasochism.

You need air play (not foreplay) to make a hit, and you need to sneak your sexy message past prudish programmers to get air play.

"I put in just enough where anybody can use their imaginations," says Taylor. "You're better off when the people use their own imaginations. Then they can make it mean whatever they want to."

HOLYOKE, Mass. (AP) — A crowd of from 15 to 20 persons watched but did not intervene as a police officer was kicked and stomped in a New Year's Day street brawl, police said. The officer died of a heart attack a short time later.

Officer James Gatzounas, 29, was pronounced dead at Holyoke Hospital shortly after he was taken unconscious to the emergency room.

Busnap suspect reveals jail row

New York Times Service

OAKLAND — The three suspects in the Chowchilla school bus kidnaping became embroiled in a jail disturbance here, allegedly led by William Harris of the self-styled Symbionese Liberation Army, jail officials say.

Details of the Dec. 15 brawl with guards, which took place in the prisoner holding area of the Alameda County Courthouse jail, came to light at a hearing in which one of the Chowchilla suspects contested a 10-day loss of visiting privileges for his part in the disturbance.

ACCORDING to jail reports, the trouble began when Harris and another inmate persuaded a dozen prisoners in the jail's holding area to refuse to return to their cells in support of an alleged murder's refusal to make a court appearance.

Punches were thrown and obscenities hurled at guards, who used chemical Mace to regain control, the report said. Harris "also tried to accomplish the same type of disturbance on Dec. 13 but the other inmates failed to follow him," the report added.

One of the Chowchilla suspects, Frederick Newhall Woods, 24, took the witness stand briefly to tell Superior Court Judge Spurgeon Avakian that he had been given no hearing before his visiting privileges were suspended.

Woods's attorney, Herbert Yanowitz, explained to the court that Woods and the other two Chowchilla suspects, James and Richard Schoenfeld were visiting their parents in the holding area when the disturbance began. He said that they did not know what was happening and that before they could return to their cells, the guards were already using Mace.

THE JUDGE permitted Woods holiday visits and said he would rule later on whether Woods was entitled to an administrative hearing in the jail on the suspension of his visiting rights.

The three suspects are awaiting trial on charges of kidnapping 26 Chowchilla schoolchildren and their bus driver last July.

Harris and his wife, Emily, who is housed in another part of the jail, are awaiting trial May 9 on charges of kidnaping Patricia Hearst. He also received a 10-day suspension of visiting privileges and 10 days' solitary confinement. He served five days' solitary confinement last month for "insubordinate behavior," jail officials said.

Letter on SLA entered in Wendy trial

Breakdown of underground group detailed

New York Times Service

OAKLAND — A letter describing the demise of an underground group just before the arrest of Wendy Yoshimura and Patricia Hearst was among the last pieces of evidence presented this week by the prosecution as it completed its case in Miss Yoshimura's trial.

The letter, written in Miss Yoshimura's hand and addressed to "Dearest Brother," disclosed serious ruptures in the relationship between Miss Yoshimura and Miss Hearst, on the one hand, and two Symbionese Liberation Army members, William and Emily Harris, on the other.

In describing the SLA, however, the letter said: "I truly feel that what motivated them to take on armed action is very different from what motivated me and the others."

Miss Yoshimura, 33, has been charged with the illegal possession of explosives and weapons discovered in a Berkeley garage in 1972. The defense has conceded that she rented the garage but has argued that she did not know explosives and weapons were stored there.

The letter was found in the San Francisco apartment where Miss Yoshimura and Miss Hearst were arrested Sept. 18, 1975. It was read to the jury by Jeffrey Horner, Deputy District Attorney of Alameda County.

"Ever since the group came together around these people a little over a year ago," the letter said, "we've had a very trying time" because of "sensationalized media play on those people affecting our heads."

In an apparent reference to the Harrises and Miss Hearst, the letter said: "My experience during the summer made me realize that they (two in particular — not P.H.) in fact are very different from me, and personally, I did not much like them.

"In spite of it I decided to stick with it because of their fierce dedication, my knowing there were others waiting to work together, and I was under their spell."

Relationships broke down again, the letter said, "when there were a series of incidents that took place which made it very clear to particularly J., K., P.H. and me that we wanted no part of it" and had "decided to go our own way."

J. and K. were not identified in the letter. The letter said that the breakup was the fault of two people who were not named but were presumably the Harrises.

William and Emily Harris were involved with Miss Hearst in a shooting at a sporting goods store in Los Angeles after William Harris was accused of shoplifting. A short time later, six other SLA members died in a fire after a gun battle with the police.

The letter said: "P.H. was hated by our 'leader' for being so 'rebellious,'" and added: "I hope you have a chance to meet P.H. She is incredible! She amazes me! I swear only the toughest could have come out of it as she did. What an ordeal she went through!! What an ordeal all of us went through!! I can write a book about it."

The letter, which was signed only "Me," was one of 250 pieces of evidence that the prosecution introduced in its attempt to link Miss Yoshimura to the Berkeley arms cache.

A number of items bearing Miss Yoshimura's fingerprints and taken from the apartment she and Miss Hearst shared and a farmhouse in Pennsylvania, were introduced as evidence. Among them was a .38-caliber revolver discovered in Miss Yoshimura's purse when she was arrested.

The prosecution also introduced ammunition, bomb material and weapons found in the Berkeley garage, including the floor plans and 24 photos of the summer home of former Defense Secretary Robert S. McNamara.

Teen-agers seen lacking in basics of government

Many surveyed know little of roles of Congress, president, courts

By GENE I. MAEROFF
New York Times Service

NEW YORK—Although they are within a year of being eligible to vote, 47 per cent of the country's 17-year-olds do not know such a basic fact as that each state has two U.S. senators, according to a survey by the National Assessment of Education Progress.

The survey of the political knowledge and attitudes of young people 13 and 17, part of the federal government's largest continuing educational research project, disclosed many gaps in the students' understanding of the fundamentals of government.

Shortcomings were found in their knowledge of the powers of the presidency and in their comprehension of the operations of the courts. Their familiarity with the role of the United Nations was limited.

But there were signs that the students strongly supported the rights of women and blacks.

Following are some of the main findings of the survey, which was administered to a representative national sampling of students in the 1975-76 school year:

—More than half the 17-year-olds and more than three-quarters of the 13-year-olds could not correctly answer a question that required an understanding of the significance of the Fifth Amendment's protection against required self-incrimination.

—One of every eight 17-year-olds believes that the president is not required to obey the law, and one of every two students at either age believes that the president can appoint members of Congress.

—Half the 13-year-olds think that it is against the law to start a new political party, and few of the students at either age know what steps Congress is empowered to take to stop a president from fighting a war without congressional approval.

—More than half the students of both ages think that the United Nations can limit the price of oil that is sold by a member nation, and that the organization can order its member countries to stop fighting a war.

—Ninety per cent of all the students questioned believe that "a family should be able to move into a part of town where people of a different skin color live," and no more than 4 per cent of the students believe that men's votes should "count more than women's votes."

Political scientists said in interviews that the survey results served to reinforce their concerns about the inadequate background that many students and adults had regarding government.

"We do know that there is a considerable lack of knowledge about government on the part of the general population, and that it is not confined to high school students," said Dr. Evon M. Kirkpatrick, executive director of the American Political Science Association. "I suspect that if the same questions were given to a sample of the students' parents, the results would be just about the same."

One way in which the students indicated that they might be different from their parents was in their attitude toward voting. They were asked to agree or disagree with the statement that "it is important to vote even if it looks like your candidate does not have a chance to win."

Eighty-four per cent of the 13-year-olds and 89 per cent of the 17-year-olds registered agreement.

Among adults, the proportion of the voting-age population casting ballots in the presidential elections has been declining, dropping from 63.1 per cent in 1960 to 55.4 per cent in 1972.

Figures for 1976 are not available.

More than 10 per cent of all the students thought, however, that "some people should not be allowed to vote in elections because these people are not smart enough."

If there were such a prohibition, some of the students tested by the National Assessment might be among the people not permitted to vote.

Among the 17-year-olds, 29 per cent did not know that local governments usually do not make laws about military services, and the same proportion did not know that local governments usually operate public elementary and high schools.

Twenty per cent of the 17-year-olds thought that the United States was the only country that had political parties, and 18 per cent did not know that a court could "decide whether a woman had been unfairly denied a job that a man had gotten."

But the 35-page report based on the survey took special note of the high performance of both the 13-year-olds and the 17-year-olds on questions dealing with criminal rights. The students were asked several questions about the following situation:

"Suppose a person has just been arrested because the police have evidence that he has stolen some money. Look at the rights listed below. Decide which rights the accused person has now that he is under arrest."

Very high proportions of the students knew that the accused person had the right to have a lawyer represent him, to know what he was accused of, could remain silent when the police questioned him and did not have the right to go free if he returned the stolen money.

Television is often blamed for educational deficiencies among the young, but in this case the report speculated that constant exposure to television programs about the police and lawyers might have had a positive effect.

Dr. Howard D. Mehlinger, director of the Social Studies Development Center at Indiana University, said that the report's hypothesis about television was probably valid, but he wondered, as well, about the impact of violence in some of the same programs.

He added that another possible explanation for the students' knowledge of criminal law was the increase of law-related education in high schools, including a program sponsored by the American Bar Association.

Mehlinger is co-director for the development of a new textbook and instructional materials that the American Political Science Association will sponsor for high school seniors to promote teaching of citizenship and government.

The National Assessment of Educational Progress, which has been studying achievement in 10 separate subjects, polled 2,500 students. The results of the scientifically draw sampling were projected for the entire student population at the two ages.

18 arrested in fracas

OXNARD (AP) — Police arrested 18 persons early Saturday after a New Year's celebration turned into a fist-swinging, rock-throwing melee.

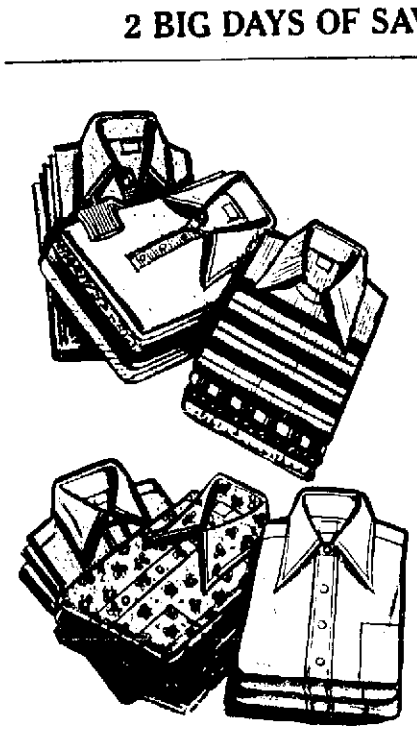

Officers were called to the Twin Center's parking lot shortly before midnight when fights broke out among several hundred revelers. The officers were assaulted with rocks and bottles. An unlawful assembly was declared and the group was broken up.

Five women were among the eighteen persons arrested in the incident.

100 million watch sunny 88th Rose Tournament

As a result, the parade lasted about 25 minutes longer than the scheduled two hours, something tournament officials said rarely happens.

Three floats, those representing Carson, Alhambra and the Occidental Life Insurance Company of California, were towed along the entire 5½-mile route.

Four other floats succumbed to mechanical problems during the parade, and the entry from Mexico briefly went out of control, knocking down a Boy Scout and frightening a horse and rider when its brakes did not hold on a hill.

There were no serious injuries, however, and the float continued along the parade route.

Earlier Saturday, an unidentified float severely damaged a traffic signal at Fair Oaks Avenue and Columbia Street as it was being moved from the float assembly area to the parade route.

Pasadena police said they were unable to determine which float damaged the signal. "We're not going to inspect the floats for loosed flower petals," added spokesman John McAlister, "but we'd sure like to present them with a bill for damages."

"I don't know exactly what the problems were (with the floats), but more than usual had mechanical difficulties this year," said committee member Albert Ellwood.

Nine of the 61 floats were disqualified from trophy competition because they arrived late at the parade formation area, he added.

Delays and the sight of tow trucks hauling some floats did not diminish the enthusiasm of spectators along the route, however, as they smiled, laughed and sighed with wonder at the lavish floral creations, constructed at costs from $18,000 to $50,000.

Brightly costumed riders drew shouts and waves from spectators, and there was an almost spontaneous clapping of hands and tapping of toes as bands struck up tunes ranging from the "Marine Corps Hymn" to "Onward, Christian Soldiers," "America the Beautiful" and a Scottish bagpipe number.

Vendors walked along the route, hawking film, food, fake roses, programs and other souvenirs. The hardy folk who spent the night saving vantage points along the parade route stifled yawns and huddled in blankets as the long-awaited parade passed by.

Pasadena police said Friday's downpour and the continued threat of rain decreased the number of persons who normally spend the night along the parade route and put a damper on New Year's Eve revelry that often results in a few fights and hundreds of arrests.

Officers reported 131 bookings, most of them for drunken behavior, before the parade began. About 300 persons were arrested last year, and previous parades have been marred by murders, robberies and gang fights.

The parade's 61 floats will be displayed at Pasadena's Victory Park, Paloma Street and Sierra Madre Boulevard, from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. today.

A list of the winning entries follows:

—Sweepstakes Award for the most beautiful noncommercial float, Glendale.

—Grand Prize, for the most beautiful float in the commercial categories, Eastman Kodak Company.

—Theme Prize, for the noncommercial float best depicting the parade theme, Credit Union National Association.

—Governor's Trophy, for the commercial category float best depicting the theme, Winchell's Donut House.

—Isabella Coleman Award, for the most effective use of color harmony, Order Sons of Italy in America.

—President's Trophy, for the most effective uses of roses on a commercial category float, Western Airlines, Inc.

—Queen's Trophy, for the most effective use of roses on a noncommercial entry, Lakewood.

—International Trophy, for the most beautiful entry outside the United States, Province of Nova Scotia.

—Ambassador's Award, for exceptional merit in an entry outside the U.S., Mexican Ministry of Tourism.

—National Trophy, for the most beautiful entry outside California, City of St. Louis.

—Pioneer's Trophy, for the best characterization of the romance of California, Arcadia.

—Grand Marshal's Trophy, for exceptional merit in noncommercial entries, American Society of Civil Engineers.

—Anniversary Award, for exceptional merit among commercial entries, Florists Transworld Delivery Association.

—Mayor's Trophy, for best display of originality, International House of Pancakes.

—Judge's Special Trophy, for the float displaying the most humor, Dr. Pepper Company.

—Princess Award, for the best display of animation, Cal Poly Universities.

—Founder's Trophy, for outstanding self-decorated entry, Burbank.

—Bicentennial Trophy, for the float most effectively representing the nation's Bicentennial celebration, Rand McNally & Company.

Of the 61 floats, 52 were judged for awards, and 51 captured a place in one category or another.

Most of the floats entered by cities or counties took first place in their respective categories because they were the only entries in those groups.

Floats were ranked first, second and third in only three classes: those for religious organizations, fraternal organizations and business firms.

The church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints took first place in its class, Al Malaikah Shrine Temple led the fraternal groups and the Occidental Life Insurance Company captured the business firm first place.

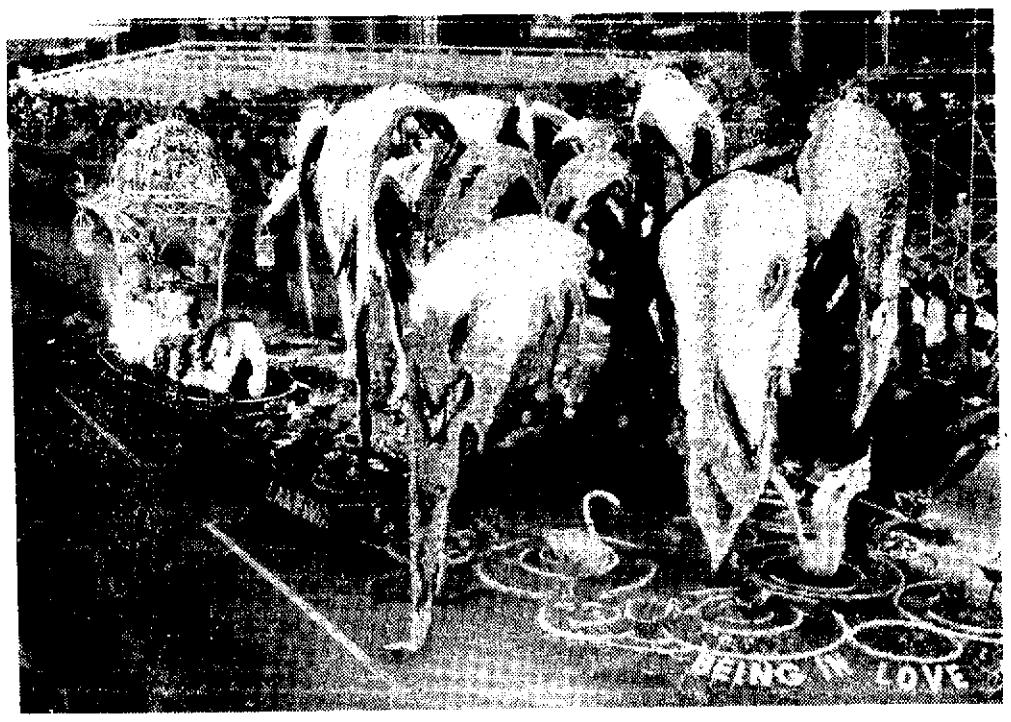

BREATHTAKING flower-covered floats, Western stars, Indians and music delighted most spectators but caught a few persons napping Saturday during the Rose Parade. Clockwise from above, floral butterflies flutter on Eastman Kodak's Grand Prize-winning float; some in the crowd estimated at 1.4 million huddle to keep warm, while others catch up on some sleep as the parade passes by; Iron Eyes Cody, who stars in an anti-pollution television commercial, sits tall atop his horse; Long Beach's entry, "By the Sea," depicts the Queen Mary, U.S. Grand Prix West and city shoreline as it glides gracefully along the 5½-mile parade route; Lakewood's "Being in Love," which captured the Queen's Trophy for the most effective use of roses, depicts a dreamlike setting, and Grand Marshals Roy Rogers and Dale Evans smile broadly from their touring car.

9 floats disqualified from parade prizes

Associated Press

Nine expensive flower-bedecked floats which participated in the New Year's Day Rose Bowl Parade were disqualified on a technicality, a spokesman for the firm which built the floats said Saturday.

Rick Chapman, president of Festival Artists Co., which built the nine floats, said delays caused by Tournament of Roses officials caused the nine floats to assemble at a staging area later than at specified time, and the floats were disqualified from winning prizes, although they did participate in the parade.

Forrest Foster, a spokesman for the Tournament, confirmed that the nine floats — most of them sponsored by large corporations — had been disqualified for arriving late at the final judging area, but he did not give any other details. Other tournament spokesmen were unavailable for comment.

CHAPMAN SAID heavy traffic on Pasadena streets and the inability of tournament officials to deliver convoy cars to escort the floats—with a combine value of $337,500—to the staging area caused the 15-minute delay.

Sponsors of the disqualified floats were Bank of America; Atlantic Richfield Co.; Occidental Life Insurance Co. of California; Sunkist Growers; Lawry's Foods; Dr. Robert Schuller's "Hour of Power;" Baskin-Robbins Ice Cream Co.; the Portland Rose Festival; and the City of Los Angeles.

Teen-agers seen lacking in basics of government

Many surveyed know little of roles of Congress, president, courts

By GENE I. MAEROFF
New York Times Service

NEW YORK—Although they are within a year of being eligible to vote, 47 per cent of the country's 17-year-olds do not know such a basic fact as that each state has two U.S. senators, according to a survey by the National Assessment of Education Progress.

The survey of the political knowledge and attitudes of young people 13 and 17, part of the federal government's largest continuing educational research project, disclosed many gaps in the students' understanding of the fundamentals of government.

Shortcomings were found in their knowledge of the powers of the presidency and in their comprehension of the operations of the courts. Their familiarity with the role of the United Nations was limited.

But there were signs that the students strongly supported the rights of women and blacks.

Following are some of the main findings of the survey, which was administered to a representative national sampling of students in the 1975-76 school year:

—More than half the 17-year-olds and more than three-quarters of the 13-year-olds could not correctly answer a question that required an understanding of the significance of the Fifth Amendment's protection against required self-incrimination.

—One of every eight 17-year-olds believes that the president is not required to obey the law, and one of every two students at either age believes that the president can appoint members of Congress.

—Half the 13-year-olds think that it is against the law to start a new political party, and few of the students at either age know what steps Congress is empowered to take to stop a president from fighting a war without congressional approval.

—More than half the students of both ages think that the United Nations can limit the price of oil that is sold by a member nation, and that the organization can order its member countries to stop fighting a war.

—Ninety per cent of all the students questioned believe that "a family should be able to move into a part of town where people of a different skin color live," and no more than 4 per cent of the students believe that men's votes should "count more than women's votes."

Political scientists said in interviews that the survey results served to reinforce their concerns about the inadequate background that many students and adults had regarding government.

"We do know that there is a considerable lack of knowledge about government on the part of the general population, and that it is not confined to high school students," said Dr. Evon M. Kirkpatrick, executive director of the American Political Science Association. "I suspect that if the same questions were given to a sample of the students' parents, the results would be just about the same."

One way in which the students indicated that they might be different from their parents was in their attitude toward voting. They were asked to agree or disagree with the statement that "it is important to vote even if it looks like your candidate does not have a chance to win."

Eighty-four per cent of the 13-year-olds and 89 per cent of the 17-year-olds registered agreement.

Among adults, the proportion of the voting-age population casting ballots in the presidential elections has been declining, dropping from 63.1 per cent in 1960 to 55.4 per cent in 1972.

Figures for 1976 are not available.

More than 10 per cent of all the students thought, however, that "some people should not be allowed to vote in elections because these people are not smart enough."

If there were such a prohibition, some of the students tested by the National Assessment might be among the people not permitted to vote.

Among the 17-year-olds, 29 per cent did not know that local governments usually do not make laws about military services, and the same proportion did not know that local governments usually operate public elementary and high schools.

Twenty per cent of the 17-year-olds thought that the United States was the only country that had political parties, and 18 per cent did not know that a court could "decide whether a woman had been unfairly denied a job that a man had gotten."

But the 35-page report based on the survey took special note of the high performance of both the 13-year-olds and the 17-year-olds on questions dealing with criminal rights. The students were asked several questions about the following situation:

"Suppose a person has just been arrested because the police have evidence that he has stolen some money. Look at the rights listed below. Decide which rights the accused person has now that he is under arrest."

Very high proportions of the students knew that the accused person had the right to have a lawyer represent him, to know what he was accused of, could remain silent when the police questioned him and did not have the right to go free if he returned the stolen money.

Television is often blamed for educational deficiencies among the young, but in this case the report speculated that constant exposure to television programs about the police and lawyers might have had a positive effect.

Dr. Howard D. Mehlinger, director of the Social Studies Development Center at Indiana University, said that the report's hypothesis about television was probably valid, but he wondered, as well, about the impact of violence in some of the same programs.

He added that another possible explanation for the students' knowledge of criminal law was the increase of law-related education in high schools, including a program sponsored by the American Bar Association.

Mehlinger is co-director for the development of a new textbook and instructional materials that the American Political Science Association will sponsor for high school seniors to promote teaching of citizenship and government.

The National Assessment of Educational Progress, which has been studying achievement in 10 separate subjects, polled 2,500 students. The results of the scientifically draw sampling were projected for the entire student population at the two ages.

Delays and the sight of tow trucks hauling some floats did not diminish the enthusiasm of spectators along the route, however, as they smiled, laughed and sighed with wonder at the lavish floral creations, constructed at costs from $18,000 to $50,000.

Brightly costumed riders drew shouts and waves from spectators, and there was an almost spontaneous clapping of hands and tapping of toes as bands struck up tunes ranging from the "Marine Corps Hymn" to "Onward, Christian Soldiers," "America the Beautiful" and a Scottish bagpipe number.

Vendors walked along the route, hawking film, food, fake roses, programs and other souvenirs. The hardy folk who spent the night saving vantage points along the parade route stifled yawns and huddled in blankets as the long-awaited parade passed by.

Pasadena police said Friday's downpour and the continued threat of rain decreased the number of persons who normally spend the night along the parade route and put a damper on New Year's Eve revelry that often results in a few fights and hundreds of arrests.

Officers reported 131 bookings, most of them for drunken behavior, before the parade began. About 300 persons were arrested last year, and previous parades have been marred by murders, robberies and gang fights.

The parade's 61 floats will be displayed at Pasadena's Victory Park, Paloma Street and Sierra Madre Boulevard, from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. today.

A list of the winning entries follows:

—Sweepstakes Award for the most beautiful noncommercial float, Glendale.

—Grand Prize, for the most beautiful float in the commercial categories, Eastman Kodak Company.

—Theme Prize, for the noncommercial float best depicting the parade theme, Credit Union National Association.

—Governor's Trophy, for the commercial category float best depicting the theme, Winchell's Donut House.

—Isabella Coleman Award, for the most effective use of color harmony, Order Sons of Italy in America.

—President's Trophy, for the most effective uses of roses on a commercial category float, Western Airlines, Inc.

—Queen's Trophy, for the most effective use of roses on a noncommercial entry, Lakewood.

—International Trophy, for the most beautiful entry outside the United States, Province of Nova Scotia.

—Ambassador's Award, for exceptional merit in an entry outside the U.S., Mexican Ministry of Tourism.

—National Trophy, for the most beautiful entry outside California, City of St. Louis.

—Pioneer's Trophy, for the best characterization of the romance of California, Arcadia.

—Grand Marshal's Trophy, for exceptional merit in noncommercial entries, American Society of Civil Engineers.

—Anniversary Award, for exceptional merit among commercial entries, Florists Transworld Delivery Association.

—Mayor's Trophy, for best display of originality, International House of Pancakes.

—Judge's Special Trophy, for the float displaying the most humor, Dr. Pepper Company.

—Princess Award, for the best display of animation, Cal Poly Universities.

—Founder's Trophy, for outstanding self-decorated entry, Burbank.

—Bicentennial Trophy, for the float most effectively representing the nation's Bicentennial celebration, Rand McNally & Company.

Of the 61 floats, 52 were judged for awards, and 51 captured a place in one category or another.

Most of the floats entered by cities or counties took first place in their respective categories because they were the only entries in those groups.

Floats were ranked first, second and third in only three classes: those for religious organizations, fraternal organizations and business firms.

The church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints took first place in its class, Al Malaikah Shrine Temple led the fraternal groups and the Occidental Life Insurance Company captured the business firm first place.

BREATHTAKING flower-covered floats, Western stars, Indians and music delighted most spectators but caught a few persons napping Saturday during the Rose Parade. Clockwise from above, floral butterflies flutter on Eastman Kodak's Grand Prize-winning float; some in the crowd estimated at 1.4 million huddle to keep warm, while others catch up on some sleep as the parade passes by; Iron Eyes Cody, who stars in an anti-pollution television commercial, sits tall atop his horse; Long Beach's entry, "By the Sea," depicts the Queen Mary, U.S. Grand Prix West and city shoreline as it glides gracefully along the 5½-mile parade route; Lakewood's "Being in Love," which captured the Queen's Trophy for the most effective use of roses, depicts a dreamlike setting, and Grand Marshals Roy Rogers and Dale Evans smile broadly from their touring car.

Associated Press

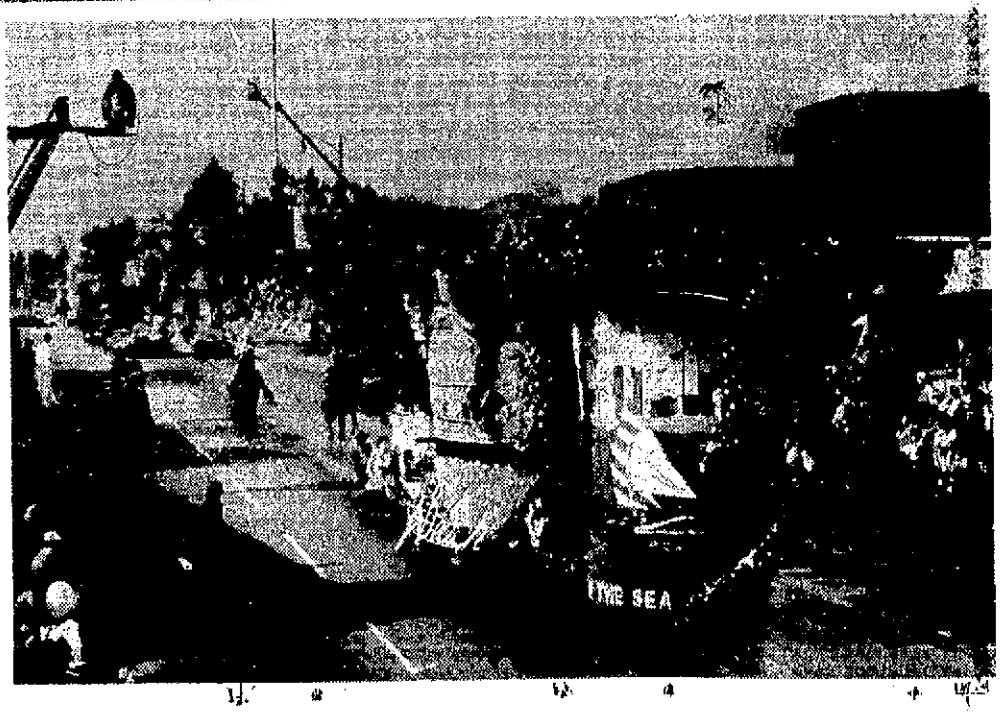

Nine expensive flower-bedecked floats which participated in the New Year's Day Rose Bowl Parade were disqualified on a technicality, a spokesman for the firm which built the floats said Saturday.

Rick Chapman, president of Festival Artists Co., which built the nine floats, said delays caused by Tournament of Roses officials caused the nine floats to assemble at a staging area later than at specified time, and the floats were disqualified from winning prizes, although they did participate in the parade.

Forrest Foster, a spokesman for the Tournament, confirmed that the nine floats — most of them sponsored by large corporations — had been disqualified for arriving late at the final judging area, but he did not give any other details. Other tournament spokesmen were unavailable for comment.

CHAPMAN SAID heavy traffic on Pasadena streets and the inability of tournament officials to deliver convoy cars to escort the floats—with a combine value of $337,500—to the staging area caused the 15-minute delay.

Sponsors of the disqualified floats were Bank of America; Atlantic Richfield Co.; Occidental Life Insurance Co. of California; Sunkist Growers; Lawry's Foods; Dr. Robert Schuller's "Hour of Power;" Baskin-Robbins Ice Cream Co.; the Portland Rose Festival; and the City of Los Angeles.

Small nations 'rule' seas

But flags of convenience running into storm

By WORTH GATEWOOD
Knight News Service

Would you believe that Liberia, with 2,300 ships, is the greatest maritime power on earth? And that Panama, Honduras and even landlocked Chad have a place on the high seas? It's true, at least on paper. These nations are the eager purveyors of the "flags of convenience" you've been reading about lately.

But now their flags are flapping in a gathering storm of public opinion generated by four accidents in two weeks in American waters, all involving tankers of Liberian registry.

Flags of convenience have been flying from the sterns of ships for many years. The maritime unions, who saw their jobs sailing away under these flags, protested over the years. Nobody was listening.

THEN came the supertankers, behemoths that carry 200,000 tons of oil, enough to supply a city of 40,000 with fuel for a year. Difficult to maneuver in crowded sea lanes and requiring up to three miles to stop, these sea monsters pose unique navigation problems and are subject to special hazards.

Nor are mishaps at sea only an occasional thing. A British survey released in 1973 disclosed that from 1959 through 1968, well before the blooming of the supertanker, accidents befell 13,379 tankers, mainly collisions and groundings.

What is a flag of convenience, and why? To the maritime unions it is a tax haven for oil companies and oil carriers that costs this country billions in ship construction and seamen's jobs; a merchant fleet that is out of control of the U.S. in the event of a national emergency, and, in the case of tankers, an increasing environmental menace.

THE unions charge that flag-of-convenience ships often are poorly, even dangerously, built; that they have lax or non-existent safety standards, are manned by untrained, irresponsible officers and crews, and lack properly-operating navigation aids required for safety at sea.

The charges of ineptness and indifferent maintenance are borne out, at least in one case, in a passage from Noel Mostert's fascinating and frightening book of two years ago, "Supership":

"After the Liberian tanker Arrow ran ashore in Chedabucto Bay (Nova Scotia), a three-man committee of inquiry ... found that Arrow, owned by Aristotle Onassis, had been operating with almost none of its navigation equipment serviceable. The radar had ceased to function an hour before the ship struck; the echo sounder had not been in working condition for two months; and the gyrocompass, which is used to steer by and to keep the ship on course, had a permanent error of two degrees west. The officer on watch at the time of the accident, the ship's third officer, had no license. The commission of inquiry said none of the crew had any navigational skill except the master, "and there are even doubts about his ability."

IS THERE a case for the flag of convenience? To Philip J. Loree, chairman of and spokesman for the Federation of American Controlled Shipping (called FACS), there is a strong one: economic survival.

FACS represents 21 U.S. firms, including most of the major oil companies, sailing 301 ships (250 of them tankers) under the Liberian and Panamanian flags.

Loree denies the unions' charge that the flag of convenience is a tax haven. Twenty-five years ago, he says, taxes were a factor. But now, with tax breaks growing out of the oil shortage, he maintains that the tax bill under the U.S. flag would not be a significant expense. In his view, it is operating costs that dictate Liberian and Panamanian registry.

"We could not survive otherwise in this fiercely competitive market," Loree says.

He cites these comparative-cost figures: to build a supertanker in the U.S., $90 million; in Japan, $42 million; annual payroll of a 32-man U.S. crew, $1,750,000; annual payroll on a Liberian-registered FACS tanker, $600,000. And, he adds, insurance costs in the U.S. are almost double.

LOREE also denies the unions' contention that these ships are beyond the control of the U.S.; FACS, under an agreement reached some years ago, would turn over its ships to the government if required.

As to the hazards of tankers, he agrees that some rustbuckets are plying the seas, but none belong to FACS.

FACS tankers, he says, although built in foreign yards, rigidly adhere to U.S. standards in construction, maintenance and, particularly, in competence of officers and crew.

Ship mate is slain at sea; suspect vanishes

MIAMI (AP) — A crewman aboard the cruise liner SS Carnivale killed the ship's food manager and disappeared as the vessel steamed from the Virgin Islands to Miami, the FBI said Saturday.

The FBI would not comment on cause of death, but members of the ship's crew said the man was clubbed to death.

Jesus Monzano Vega, 33, was killed Thursday, an FBI spokesman said in Miami. The spokesman said a thorough search of the 650-foot liner, both before and after it docked early Saturday, failed to locate the missing crewman.

The FBI spokesmen said Monzano Vega, a Spanish-born Canadian citizen, was killed "somewhere between St. Thomas in the U.S. Virgin Islands and Miami," but would not say where the ship was when the incident happened.

The spokesman would give no details of the killing, except to say that it was murder.

Many plans as bad as Medicaid

Facts hint private insurance is as inefficient

By NANCY HICKS
New York Times Service

WASHINGTON — Medicaid, the scandal-plagued government health program for poor families (Medi-Cal in California), may cost taxpayers no more than many private health plans cost their subscribers, and in some cases even less.

Despite repeated instances of indifferent administration and systematic financial abuse in the $19 billion federal-state effort, figures made available in recent interviews with a broad cross-section of experts in the field suggest that programs designed for the middle class can be as expensive as Medicaid.

The figures are significant for all Americans because of what they imply about maladministration in private insurance programs and because of what they could mean in the forthcoming debate over national health insurance.

THE DATA represent a comparison between Medicaid and a number of better-than-average private plans whose benefits would be at least as good as those made available in most states through Medicaid to welfare families and others too poor to pay medical bills.

The treatment of the aged and disabled, which represents the bulk of Medicaid costs, was excluded from these calculations because there is basically no comparable coverage in the private sector.

While Medicaid is not technically an insurance program — the federal and state governments pay for actual health care rather than putting premiums into a fund that covers claims — it is treated as one in these comparisons. The $19 billion is spread over the entire population eligible for Medicaid benefits rather than just over those receiving the treatment.

MEDICAID costs $1,080 for a poor family of three with no elderly or disabled members, while the best Blue Cross-Blue Shield insurance for federal civil servants with families the same size or larger costs $1,107. Blue Cross recently announced plans to raise its premiums 32 per cent.

The Health Insurance Association of America, whose profit-making plans cover more than half the population, says an average family premium is $840, only 16 per cent less than the cost of Medicaid. A higher quality plan has a premium of $1,008, an amount almost equal to the Medicaid cost.

The Michigan Blue Cross-Blue Shield plan, one of the most generous in the country, costs the automobile manufacturers about $1,500 annually for a family of three or more.

"MEDICAID costs are high, but they are not higher than those for everybody else," said Dr. Karen Davis, a widely respected economist at the Brookings Institution who has studied Medicaid for years.

Dr. Milton J. Paris, associate commissioner of health in New York City, made a related point: "It is a mistake to think that the abuses in Medicaid are confined to the public sector. The only difference is that you can see what is going on in Medicaid because the infusion of public money opens the program up to scrutiny. I have a deep feeling that what is going on here is symptomatic of what is going on in the whole health care system."

Medicaid plans vary from state to state, but all of them provide physician and hospital services, prescription drugs, X rays, laboratory services, skilled nursing-home care and home health care at levels higher than average insurance policies.

ONE REASON for the similarity in costs between Medicaid and most private plans with broad coverage is that both are tied to the same inflation-ridden health industry. Health costs rose 14 per cent last year to $139.3 billion, or $637.97 for every man, woman and child in the United States, according to recent Social Security Administration figures.

Dr. Paris, the New York City official, cited audits of the much-criticized Early and Periodic Screening, Detection and Treatment program, which is designed to find and correct developmental problems in poor children, as evidence of abuses in private health areas.

He said he had found that the city's most respected private hospitals completed less than half the examinations for which they had billed and received a full $80 fee.

"THESE deficiencies are taking place in the institutions that Medicare, Blue Cross and private companies have been subsidizing for years," he said.

Dr. Roger Herdman of the New York State Department of Health said that a state study of New York City Blue Cross cost controls concluded that it did not have an effective program to determine whether each hospital admission was necessary. Unnecessary admissions are related to rising health costs because institutional care eats up $9 of every $10 in public programs.

Dr. M. Keith Weikel, the commissioner of the federal Medicaid program, said that it "has more problems than the private sector programs," but added: "I do believe there is fraud and abuse in the private sector as well, and I don't believe anyone has gone after it. The private companies pay claims more efficiently, but they are not good at finding fraud, although they are better than Medicaid."

IF THIS is true, the problem of straightening out the health economy so that national health insurance can be established will involve more than reforming a single scandal-ridden government program in which costs are rising at a rate of $3 billion a year.

In his campaign speeches, President-elect Carter placed a high priority on reforming the health delivery system and enacting an expanded benefit package. His aides said that it would probably be "one of the first pieces of legislation introduced by the new president."

More recently, however, the Carter transition team's option papers have outlined a policy far narrower than a program of national health insurance, which no one is willing to propose until there is better cost control in the health sector.

PART OF the problem, according to Dr. Davis of Brookings, is uninformed policy decisions made when costs begin to rise, decisions that often exacerbate the situation.

Medicaid costs, for example, would have been $1 billion less in 1975 if unemployment had not been so high, pushing up the number of eligible recipients, she said, adding that the states, "ill-equipped to handle economic cycles," responded to the rising eligibility rolls by slashing benefits.

"The first thing they always cut is physicians' fees," Dr. Davis said, "but physicians' fees only make up 10 per cent of program costs."

WHEN THE cuts occur, doctors become unwilling to take Medicaid patients, a development that invites the creation of Medicaid mills and pushes some patients into hospital clinics, which are many times more expensive to public programs than visits to doctors' offices.

In the view of Dr. Weikel, there will be no answer to rising costs in Medicaid or any new health insurance plan until some public policy decision is made about the elderly poor, who are often in nursing homes because they have no place else to go.

"When Medicaid was conceived, there was little thinking that it would be anything more than a small program to pay for a small portion of the health costs for the welfare population," Weikel said. "It was not anticipated that 4.3 million elderly people over 65 would be part of it. Most are eligible for Medicare and have exhausted those benefits and their own resources. One million are in nursing homes.

THE POOR families for whom Medicaid was conceived, Weikel said, make up more than half of the program population but this year will spend only $6 billion, one-third of the total. Federal data also show that the permanently disabled and the blind, who have heavy medical expenses, make up 14 per cent of the recipients but spend one-quarter of the program dollars.

The elderly in nursing homes, these figures indicate, make up about 5 per cent of the eligible population and account for almost 40 per cent of the expenditures. In the Medicare program for the elderly, there is a specific medical definition for nursing home care — care that does not meet the definition does not qualify for payment — and the average length of stay is 21 to 23 days, Weikel said.

In Medicaid, which does not have such a definition, the average stay of a patient is two years or more, and death is the most common reason for discharge.

"To me, that is a very serious lesson for national health insurance," Weikel said. "If everyone is eligible for nursing home care and you don't have a medical definition of need, then for every patient there is a medical and a social need that is being charged to a health program."

He cites these comparative-cost figures: to build a supertanker in the U.S., $90 million; in Japan, $42 million; annual payroll of a 32-man U.S. crew, $1,750,000; annual payroll on a Liberian-registered FACS tanker, $600,000. And, he adds, insurance costs in the U.S. are almost double.

LOREE also denies the unions' contention that these ships are beyond the control of the U.S.; FACS, under an agreement reached some years ago, would turn over its ships to the government if required.

As to the hazards of tankers, he agrees that some rustbuckets are plying the seas, but none belong to FACS.

FACS tankers, he says, although built in foreign yards, rigidly adhere to U.S. standards in construction, maintenance and, particularly, in competence of officers and crew.

Ship mate is slain at sea; suspect vanishes

MIAMI (AP) — A crewman aboard the cruise liner SS Carnivale killed the ship's food manager and disappeared as the vessel steamed from the Virgin Islands to Miami, the FBI said Saturday.

The FBI would not comment on cause of death, but members of the ship's crew said the man was clubbed to death.

Jesus Monzano Vega, 33, was killed Thursday, an FBI spokesman said in Miami. The spokesman said a thorough search of the 650-foot liner, both before and after it docked early Saturday, failed to locate the missing crewman.

The FBI spokesmen said Monzano Vega, a Spanish-born Canadian citizen, was killed "somewhere between St. Thomas in the U.S. Virgin Islands and Miami," but would not say where the ship was when the incident happened.

The spokesman would give no details of the killing, except to say that it was murder.

Many plans as bad as Medicaid

Facts hint private insurance is as inefficient

By NANCY HICKS
New York Times Service

WASHINGTON — Medicaid, the scandal-plagued government health program for poor families (Medi-Cal in California), may cost taxpayers no more than many private health plans cost their subscribers, and in some cases even less.

Despite repeated instances of indifferent administration and systematic financial abuse in the $19 billion federal-state effort, figures made available in recent interviews with a broad cross-section of experts in the field suggest that programs designed for the middle class can be as expensive as Medicaid.

The figures are significant for all Americans because of what they imply about maladministration in private insurance programs and because of what they could mean in the forthcoming debate over national health insurance.

THE DATA represent a comparison between Medicaid and a number of better-than-average private plans whose benefits would be at least as good as those made available in most states through Medicaid to welfare families and others too poor to pay medical bills.

The treatment of the aged and disabled, which represents the bulk of Medicaid costs, was excluded from these calculations because there is basically no comparable coverage in the private sector.

While Medicaid is not technically an insurance program — the federal and state governments pay for actual health care rather than putting premiums into a fund that covers claims — it is treated as one in these comparisons. The $19 billion is spread over the entire population eligible for Medicaid benefits rather than just over those receiving the treatment.

MEDICAID costs $1,080 for a poor family of three with no elderly or disabled members, while the best Blue Cross-Blue Shield insurance for federal civil servants with families the same size or larger costs $1,107. Blue Cross recently announced plans to raise its premiums 32 per cent.

The Health Insurance Association of America, whose profit-making plans cover more than half the population, says an average family premium is $840, only 16 per cent less than the cost of Medicaid. A higher quality plan has a premium of $1,008, an amount almost equal to the Medicaid cost.

The Michigan Blue Cross-Blue Shield plan, one of the most generous in the country, costs the automobile manufacturers about $1,500 annually for a family of three or more.

"MEDICAID costs are high, but they are not higher than those for everybody else," said Dr. Karen Davis, a widely respected economist at the Brookings Institution who has studied Medicaid for years.

Dr. Milton J. Paris, associate commissioner of health in New York City, made a related point: "It is a mistake to think that the abuses in Medicaid are confined to the public sector. The only difference is that you can see what is going on in Medicaid because the infusion of public money opens the program up to scrutiny. I have a deep feeling that what is going on here is symptomatic of what is going on in the whole health care system."

Medicaid plans vary from state to state, but all of them provide physician and hospital services, prescription drugs, X rays, laboratory services, skilled nursing-home care and home health care at levels higher than average insurance policies.

ONE REASON for the similarity in costs between Medicaid and most private plans with broad coverage is that both are tied to the same inflation-ridden health industry. Health costs rose 14 per cent last year to $139.3 billion, or $637.97 for every man, woman and child in the United States, according to recent Social Security Administration figures.

Dr. Paris, the New York City official, cited audits of the much-criticized Early and Periodic Screening, Detection and Treatment program, which is designed to find and correct developmental problems in poor children, as evidence of abuses in private health areas.

He said he had found that the city's most respected private hospitals completed less than half the examinations for which they had billed and received a full $80 fee.

"THESE deficiencies are taking place in the institutions that Medicare, Blue Cross and private companies have been subsidizing for years," he said.

Dr. Roger Herdman of the New York State Department of Health said that a state study of New York City Blue Cross cost controls concluded that it did not have an effective program to determine whether each hospital admission was necessary. Unnecessary admissions are related to rising health costs because institutional care eats up $9 of every $10 in public programs.

Dr. M. Keith Weikel, the commissioner of the federal Medicaid program, said that it "has more problems than the private sector programs," but added: "I do believe there is fraud and abuse in the private sector as well, and I don't believe anyone has gone after it. The private companies pay claims more efficiently, but they are not good at finding fraud, although they are better than Medicaid."

IF THIS is true, the problem of straightening out the health economy so that national health insurance can be established will involve more than reforming a single scandal-ridden government program in which costs are rising at a rate of $3 billion a year.

In his campaign speeches, President-elect Carter placed a high priority on reforming the health delivery system and enacting an expanded benefit package. His aides said that it would probably be "one of the first pieces of legislation introduced by the new president."

More recently, however, the Carter transition team's option papers have outlined a policy far narrower than a program of national health insurance, which no one is willing to propose until there is better cost control in the health sector.

PART OF the problem, according to Dr. Davis of Brookings, is uninformed policy decisions made when costs begin to rise, decisions that often exacerbate the situation.

Medicaid costs, for example, would have been $1 billion less in 1975 if unemployment had not been so high, pushing up the number of eligible recipients, she said, adding that the states, "ill-equipped to handle economic cycles," responded to the rising eligibility rolls by slashing benefits.

"The first thing they always cut is physicians' fees," Dr. Davis said, "but physicians' fees only make up 10 per cent of program costs."

WHEN THE cuts occur, doctors become unwilling to take Medicaid patients, a development that invites the creation of Medicaid mills and pushes some patients into hospital clinics, which are many times more expensive to public programs than visits to doctors' offices.

In the view of Dr. Weikel, there will be no answer to rising costs in Medicaid or any new health insurance plan until some public policy decision is made about the elderly poor, who are often in nursing homes because they have no place else to go.

"When Medicaid was conceived, there was little thinking that it would be anything more than a small program to pay for a small portion of the health costs for the welfare population," Weikel said. "It was not anticipated that 4.3 million elderly people over 65 would be part of it. Most are eligible for Medicare and have exhausted those benefits and their own resources. One million are in nursing homes.

THE POOR families for whom Medicaid was conceived, Weikel said, make up more than half of the program population but this year will spend only $6 billion, one-third of the total. Federal data also show that the permanently disabled and the blind, who have heavy medical expenses, make up 14 per cent of the recipients but spend one-quarter of the program dollars.

The elderly in nursing homes, these figures indicate, make up about 5 per cent of the eligible population and account for almost 40 per cent of the expenditures. In the Medicare program for the elderly, there is a specific medical definition for nursing home care — care that does not meet the definition does not qualify for payment — and the average length of stay is 21 to 23 days, Weikel said.

In Medicaid, which does not have such a definition, the average stay of a patient is two years or more, and death is the most common reason for discharge.

"To me, that is a very serious lesson for national health insurance," Weikel said. "If everyone is eligible for nursing home care and you don't have a medical definition of need, then for every patient there is a medical and a social need that is being charged to a health program."

Experts look hard for any signs of a flu epidemic

By JACK STILLMAN

ATLANTA (AP) — Hardly ever have public health officials watched so closely for a possible outbreak of flu as they have this winter.

It is a frustrating watch. In the pattern of past influenza outbreaks, there were, at first, no signs of the disease. Then a few cases were reported, followed by a burst of them in various parts of the country.

"That's the frustrating thing about flu. It is so unpredictable," Dr. Walter Dowdle, director of virology at the national Center for Disease Control, said.

One reason for the close attention being given flu this winter is the federal swine flu inoculation program, which has been suspended pending a further study of a strange paralysis and its possible connection to the vaccine.

In December, two cases of swine flu (A-New Jersey) were confirmed — both in Wisconsin, and both involving persons who had some association with farm work. Another reported case of swine flu in Missouri was never fully documented.

Between August and December, there were only two confirmed cases of A-Victoria flu, another type, in the nation, Dowdle said. One was in California and the other was in Michigan.

"Both appear to have been imported," he said — the California patient coming back into the country from the Far East and the Michigan patient returning from the Middle East.

Cases of B-Hong Kong flu were reported in Pennsylvania and Tennessee.

The CDC said there is at present an outbreak of A-Victoria in Russia which world health authorities are watching closely.

In the past few months, there was a massive outbreak of A-Victoria in Guam. The virus also has been reported in the Philippines, Taiwan, Thailand, Australia, Hong Kong and Malaysia.

Dr. Michael B. Gregg, deputy director of the bureau of epidemiology at the CDC, said studies show that influenza occurs most frequently in the United States during January.

But influenza experts say it is highly unlikely that the suspended inoculation program will be resumed this winter unless there are massive outbreaks of influenza.

What makes the flu watch so frustrating?

The virus which causes influenza in man changes constantly. Most changes are minor, the experts say. But once every 10 years or so, the changes are more dramatic.

They note that the pandemic of Hong Kong flu which killed an estimated 27,900 Americans was just nine years ago. The CDC said 50 million Americans were affected by this disease, and the cost to the nation in that one epidemic year was about $3.9 million.

The Asian flu pandemic in 1957-58 caused nearly 70,000 deaths in this country. The CDC estimates that about 45 million cases of influenza occurred in this country during 1957.

Federal health officials reacted to the Ft. Dix, N.J., outbreak of swine flu last year because, they said, the virus was similar to that which killed 20 million persons in the 1918-19 pandemic.

The swine flu inoculation program was suspended last month so health officials could study it for a possible link to a usually temporary paralysis known as "French polio."

So far, 496 cases of the paralysis, officially known as the Guillain-Barre syndrome, have been reported in 47 states.

Ford said to have rejected Navy bid for new A-carrier

By JOHN W. FINNEY
New York Times Service

WASHINGTON—The Ford administration is reported by congressional sources to have rejected a Navy request for funds to construct a fifth nuclear-powered aircraft carrier.

The elimination of the carrier from the Navy's shipbuilding program was one of the major steps taken by the Ford administration to present what is regarded as a relatively tight defense budget to Congress for the next fiscal year. Before leaving office on Jan. 20, the administration will propose to Congress a defense budget of about

EXCLUSIVE

$123 billion for the fiscal year that begins next Oct.1.

At the same time, the Ford administration will be bequeathing a difficult political problem to the incoming Carter administration, particularly as it attempts to carry out President-elect Jimmy Carter's campaign pledge to reduce defense spending by $5 billion to $7 billion.

AS THE Ford administration presumably anticipated, the House and Senate Armed Services committees can be expected to move to put funds back into the military budget for construction of the $1.5 billion carrier.

The Carter administration thus will be faced with the question of whether it wants to pick a fight right at the outset with Democrats on the two committees and indirectly with Adm. Hyman G. Rickover, Carter's mentor in the Navy who has been the driving force behind construction of a nuclear-powered surface fleet.

If, alternatively, the Carter administration decides to go along with construction of the Nimitz-class carrier, it will do so at the price of increasing a defense budget which it has pledged to try to reduce.

Elimination of the carrier from the Navy's long-term shipbuilding program represents somewhat of a policy reversal for the Ford administration.

AS A RESULT of a National Security Council study into the future composition of the Navy, the administration earlier this year recommended the construction of one more super-carrier for the Navy as well as a start on construction of a new class of nuclear-powered ships known as strike cruisers.

In response to the administration proposal, Congress this year provided some $300 million to buy long lead-time items, such as the atomic reactors, for the carrier, with the expectation that the remaining construction funds of more than $1 billion would be included in the next defense budget.

At the same time, over protests from the House Armed Services Committee and Rickover, Congress declined to provide a $170 million down payment on construction of the first strike cruiser, which is expected to cost $1.3 billion.

THERE WERE conflicting reports as to what the Ford administration had decided to propose on strike cruisers in the next budget. One report was that preliminary construction funds had been eliminated, only to be restored at the last minute out of deference to Adm. James L. Holloway III, the chief of naval operations who has championed the new class of ships, which could escort carriers or operate independently.

Both from within its own ranks of advisers as well as from the Congressional Budget Office, the Carter administration will find itself being urged to redirect the Navy's expanding and contract-troubled shipbuilding program away from the construction of expensive nuclear-powered carriers and strike cruisers.

In a recent staff study, the Congressional Budget Office suggested that more than $7 billion could be saved over the next five years by eliminating ships designed to project airpower against the Soviet Union and concentrating on less expensive ships designed to maintain control over the sea lanes.

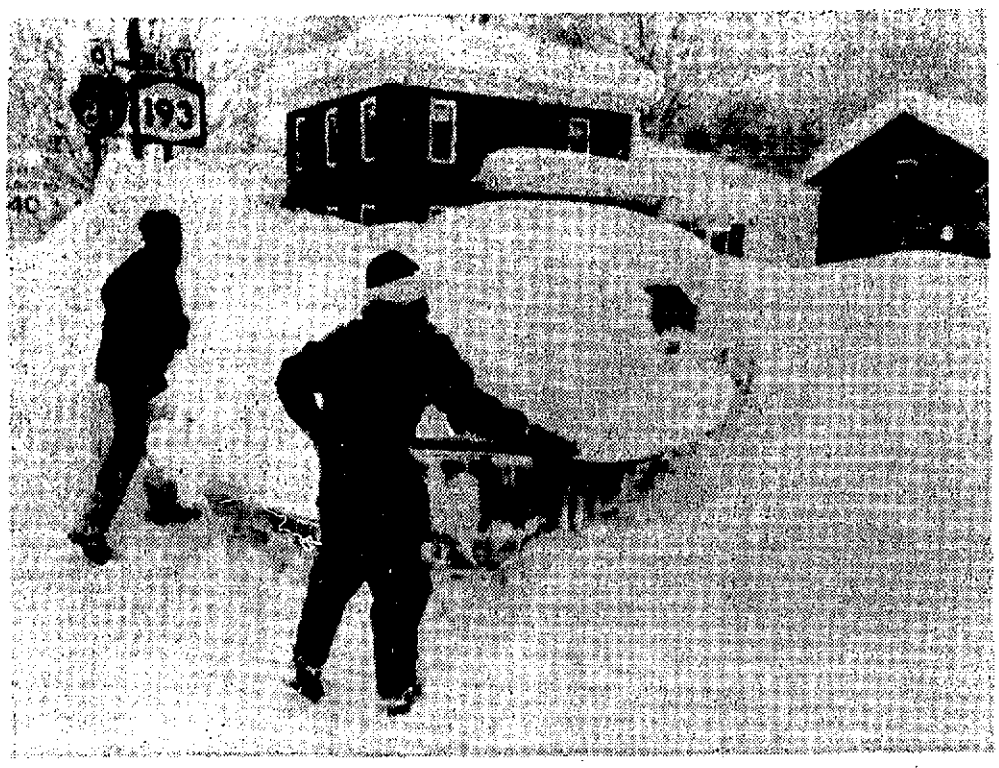

SOMEWHAT similar advice was contained in an article in the January issue of the U.S. Naval Institute Proceedings written by Barry M. Blechman, director of the defense analysis staff at the Brookings Institution, who has been serving as a defense adviser on the Carter budget transition team.

Blechman said the Navy's "continuing propensity to invest extraordinarily large sums in a very small number of platforms whose survivability in certain contingencies is suspect is a foolish strategy on its very face."

"Unless present policies governing the Navy's composition, structure and operations are altered in a fundamental way," he wrote, "U.S. naval forces will become increasingly inadequate for the burdens placed on them by the nation's foreign policy."

UNLESS reversed by the Carter administration or Congress, the Ford decision probably marks the beginning of the end of the supercarriers, which ever since world War II have been the centerpiece and pride of the Navy.

The Navy currently has 13 carriers, with four nuclear-powered ships either in operation or nearing completion. The Navy, which is still dominated by the carrier admirals, had planned to build at least one more nuclear-powered carrier and had hoped to maintain a fleet at least six of them into the indefinite future.

'77 BEGINS WITH A 'MIRACLE'

Witnesses said the man was blowing smoke away from the muzzle when he accidentally pulled the trigger.

His friends told police they thought he had passed out from drinking too much.

A quarrel in Lennox between a father and son over the youth's carrying a gun ended at 4:40 a.m. with the father dead and son in critical condition, deputies said.

Investigators said Antonio Alvarado Sr. 38, of 4815 W. 104th St., became angered when he learned his son, Antonio Jr., 14, had taken the father's .38-caliber pistol to celebrate New Year's Eve.

The boy was shot while the father wrestled the gun away from him, deputies said, adding that the father, apparently overcome with anguish, then turned the gun on himself.

Antonio Jr. was listed in critical condition at Hawthorne Community Hospital.

Coroner's investigators said one typical type of New Year's Eve death apparently failed to happen this year.

Investigators said the self-inflicted death occurs when a party-goer tries to impress other celebrants by chug-a-lugging a fifth of bourbon or scotch.

Unable to cope with the equivalent of 25 straight shots of alcohol, the victim's body goes into respiratory failure, investigators said. Cardiac arrest follows seconds later.

Friends are always impressed, one deputy coroner recalled.

CARTER

named and in place by inauguration day Jan. 20.

Carter said he celebrated the arrival of the New Year quietly with his 9-year-old daughter Amy and his wife, Rosalynn.

"I went to bed before midnight, and Amy and I set the clock for five minutes to 12, and we all woke up and watched Guy Lombardo and also watched the Times Square thing, and five minutes after midnight we were back in bed asleep," he said.

The president-elect pushed his mother's wheelchair through the lobby of the Americus-Sumter County Hospital, where she is being treated for painful muscle spasms in her legs. As he talked with reporters, 78-year-old "Miss Lillian" Carter clasped his hands with hers, laid her head back and closed her eyes.

She told reporters she intends to leave the hospital in time to see her son inaugurated in Washington as the nation's 39th president.

As her eldest son left to return home, she murmured, "I love you."

"Behave yourself today," the president-elect replied.

Swimmers end icy marathon

PALMDALE (AP) — After swimming night and day for five days in an outdoor heated pool with air temperatures as low as 12 degrees, the Palmdale High School swim team successfully concluded its "Operation Iceberg" fund-raising marathon Saturday.

The team kept a relay going from midnight Sunday to just after midnight Friday to publicize their campaign for new equipment.

They raised $600 in cash and $1,700 in pledges and also received donations of lockers and swimsuits for the entire squad of 25 boys and 30 girls. The goal was $2,500.

Foul weather postpones Philly parade

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — The annual New Year's Day Mummers parade was postponed here Saturday because of high winds and below-freezing temperatures.

Parade officials rescheduled the event for today after determining that musicians couldn't play in the 12-degree cold and that fancy costumes would be ripped to shreds by the 20- to 30-mile-an-hour winds.

If the weather isn't any better today, the parade will be held next Saturday, said Mummers spokesman Abe Rosen.

Last year's parade was postponed twice because of weather, and the 1975 parade was canceled.

"In the last 10 years, the costumes have become much more elaborate," Rosen said, "and postponments became more likely."

U.S. may impose rules in bid to stop oil spills

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Transportation Secretary William Coleman said Saturday that with no international pact on oil spills, the United States might have to impose unilateral shipping standards to prevent future spills in American waters.

"We have to do everything we can to make sure our coastline and waters are protected," Coleman told reporters after he was briefed by Coast Guard officials on last week's spill in the Delaware River.

"We certainly believe that in the absence of an agreement, we would have to impose unilateral standards," he said.

Coleman said an international agreement might be possible within three years, and he cautioned that unilateral action could prompt similar acts in retaliation from some of the estimated 167 other nations with port facilities.

HE ALSO said he was confident that his successor in the Carter administration, Rep. Brock Adams, D-Wash., will pursue the matter after Coleman leaves the cabinet.

After the news conference, Coleman left for a helicopter flight over the area where the Liberian tanker Olympic Games sustained a hole in its hull last Monday and spilled 134,000 gallons of oil into the river.

The biggest spill that has troubled the U.S. coast was the 7.6 million gallons of oil spilled off Massachusetts when the Liberian tanker Argo Merchant ran aground Dec. 15 and then broke up during a storm.

Coleman was to return to Washington later Saturday and said he would speak with President Ford today about the oil spill problem.

He evaded questions about the arrest here by U.S. marshals of Vasilios Vlismas, captain of the Olympic Games, saying only: "I have a lot of confidence in the U.S. Attorney here."

VLISMAS a Greek national, has been charged with violating federal pollution laws and is free on $50,000 bail pending a hearing Jan. 17. He also is scheduled to testify Monday at a Coast Guard inquiry.

Coleman said he considered it impractical to propose a federal statute that would allow the arrest of captains and ship's officers for spills occurring in international waters off the U.S. coast.

He also said he did not feel Liberain shipping regulations were substandard, or were to blame for last week's numerous oil spills.

"The fact is," Coleman said, "that most of these vessels, most of which are owned by Americans, are built outside the U.S. and immediately put under foreign flags."

As far as the country of registry, Coleman said, "my understanding is that it really depends upon which country at that time has the most favorable tax rate."

U.S. ATTY. David Marston, who has promised to pursue the prosecution of Vlismas, said Saturday he has not yet determined which individuals or corporations own the Olympic Games.

Coleman said "my understanding is that it is owned by the Onassis family," but he said he had no details on which family members of the late Aristotle Onassis might be owners. Coleman said he would continue to seek information about the vessel's ownership.

All waterborn oil from the tanker has been recovered, and shoreline cleanup operations are continuing in New Jersey, Pennsylvania and Delaware, said Coast Guard Capt. Kenneth Wiman.

Carpet of oil moves nearer Gulf Stream

FALMOUTH, Mass. (AP) — A massive carpet of oil that spilled from the wrecked Argo Merchant was only 40 miles from the Gulf Stream and heading into the fast-moving current, the Coast Guard said Saturday.

Once caught in the warmer waters, the 150-mile-long slick could be spun further east toward Iceland and Britain or as far south as Bermuda, according to spokesman Norm Deragon.

"Once it gets into the Gulf Stream, that's when we say adios," Deragon said. "There's no telling where it'll end up — probably England."

The Liberian-registered tanker piled onto the shoals Dec. 15 and broke up in heavy seas, spilling its cargo of 7.6 million gallons of heavy No. 6 industrial oil into the sea.

Meanwhile, the bow of the shattered tanker no longer posed a navigational hazard in the North Atlantic after the Coast Guard fired 12 cannon rounds to sink it.

The shots were fired at the bow Friday to release air trapped inside that was keeping it afloat. After it was hit, the bow went down and was resting on the sandy bottom of the shoals off Nantucket Island.

Although 10 feet of the upside-down bow still protruded above water Saturday, the wreckage was not obstructing any shipping lanes, Coast Guard spokesman Bill Van Valkenburg said.

"We expect the bow to settle even more and finally disappear beneath the water," he added.

The rest of the Argo Merchant remained in place about 500 yards away from the bow.

Experts look hard for any signs of a flu epidemic

By JACK STILLMAN

ATLANTA (AP) — Hardly ever have public health officials watched so closely for a possible outbreak of flu as they have this winter.

It is a frustrating watch. In the pattern of past influenza outbreaks, there were, at first, no signs of the disease. Then a few cases were reported, followed by a burst of them in various parts of the country.

"That's the frustrating thing about flu. It is so unpredictable," Dr. Walter Dowdle, director of virology at the national Center for Disease Control, said.

One reason for the close attention being given flu this winter is the federal swine flu inoculation program, which has been suspended pending a further study of a strange paralysis and its possible connection to the vaccine.

In December, two cases of swine flu (A-New Jersey) were confirmed — both in Wisconsin, and both involving persons who had some association with farm work. Another reported case of swine flu in Missouri was never fully documented.

Between August and December, there were only two confirmed cases of A-Victoria flu, another type, in the nation, Dowdle said. One was in California and the other was in Michigan.

"Both appear to have been imported," he said — the California patient coming back into the country from the Far East and the Michigan patient returning from the Middle East.

Cases of B-Hong Kong flu were reported in Pennsylvania and Tennessee.

The CDC said there is at present an outbreak of A-Victoria in Russia which world health authorities are watching closely.

In the past few months, there was a massive outbreak of A-Victoria in Guam. The virus also has been reported in the Philippines, Taiwan, Thailand, Australia, Hong Kong and Malaysia.

Dr. Michael B. Gregg, deputy director of the bureau of epidemiology at the CDC, said studies show that influenza occurs most frequently in the United States during January.

But influenza experts say it is highly unlikely that the suspended inoculation program will be resumed this winter unless there are massive outbreaks of influenza.

What makes the flu watch so frustrating?

The virus which causes influenza in man changes constantly. Most changes are minor, the experts say. But once every 10 years or so, the changes are more dramatic.

They note that the pandemic of Hong Kong flu which killed an estimated 27,900 Americans was just nine years ago. The CDC said 50 million Americans were affected by this disease, and the cost to the nation in that one epidemic year was about $3.9 million.

The Asian flu pandemic in 1957-58 caused nearly 70,000 deaths in this country. The CDC estimates that about 45 million cases of influenza occurred in this country during 1957.

Federal health officials reacted to the Ft. Dix, N.J., outbreak of swine flu last year because, they said, the virus was similar to that which killed 20 million persons in the 1918-19 pandemic.

The swine flu inoculation program was suspended last month so health officials could study it for a possible link to a usually temporary paralysis known as "French polio."

So far, 496 cases of the paralysis, officially known as the Guillain-Barre syndrome, have been reported in 47 states.

Ford said to have rejected Navy bid for new A-carrier

By JOHN W. FINNEY
New York Times Service

WASHINGTON—The Ford administration is reported by congressional sources to have rejected a Navy request for funds to construct a fifth nuclear-powered aircraft carrier.

The elimination of the carrier from the Navy's shipbuilding program was one of the major steps taken by the Ford administration to present what is regarded as a relatively tight defense budget to Congress for the next fiscal year. Before leaving office on Jan. 20, the administration will propose to Congress a defense budget of about

EXCLUSIVE

$123 billion for the fiscal year that begins next Oct.1.

At the same time, the Ford administration will be bequeathing a difficult political problem to the incoming Carter administration, particularly as it attempts to carry out President-elect Jimmy Carter's campaign pledge to reduce defense spending by $5 billion to $7 billion.

AS THE Ford administration presumably anticipated, the House and Senate Armed Services committees can be expected to move to put funds back into the military budget for construction of the $1.5 billion carrier.

The Carter administration thus will be faced with the question of whether it wants to pick a fight right at the outset with Democrats on the two committees and indirectly with Adm. Hyman G. Rickover, Carter's mentor in the Navy who has been the driving force behind construction of a nuclear-powered surface fleet.

If, alternatively, the Carter administration decides to go along with construction of the Nimitz-class carrier, it will do so at the price of increasing a defense budget which it has pledged to try to reduce.

Elimination of the carrier from the Navy's long-term shipbuilding program represents somewhat of a policy reversal for the Ford administration.

AS A RESULT of a National Security Council study into the future composition of the Navy, the administration earlier this year recommended the construction of one more super-carrier for the Navy as well as a start on construction of a new class of nuclear-powered ships known as strike cruisers.

In response to the administration proposal, Congress this year provided some $300 million to buy long lead-time items, such as the atomic reactors, for the carrier, with the expectation that the remaining construction funds of more than $1 billion would be included in the next defense budget.

At the same time, over protests from the House Armed Services Committee and Rickover, Congress declined to provide a $170 million down payment on construction of the first strike cruiser, which is expected to cost $1.3 billion.

THERE WERE conflicting reports as to what the Ford administration had decided to propose on strike cruisers in the next budget. One report was that preliminary construction funds had been eliminated, only to be restored at the last minute out of deference to Adm. James L. Holloway III, the chief of naval operations who has championed the new class of ships, which could escort carriers or operate independently.

Both from within its own ranks of advisers as well as from the Congressional Budget Office, the Carter administration will find itself being urged to redirect the Navy's expanding and contract-troubled shipbuilding program away from the construction of expensive nuclear-powered carriers and strike cruisers.

In a recent staff study, the Congressional Budget Office suggested that more than $7 billion could be saved over the next five years by eliminating ships designed to project airpower against the Soviet Union and concentrating on less expensive ships designed to maintain control over the sea lanes.

SOMEWHAT similar advice was contained in an article in the January issue of the U.S. Naval Institute Proceedings written by Barry M. Blechman, director of the defense analysis staff at the Brookings Institution, who has been serving as a defense adviser on the Carter budget transition team.

Blechman said the Navy's "continuing propensity to invest extraordinarily large sums in a very small number of platforms whose survivability in certain contingencies is suspect is a foolish strategy on its very face."

"Unless present policies governing the Navy's composition, structure and operations are altered in a fundamental way," he wrote, "U.S. naval forces will become increasingly inadequate for the burdens placed on them by the nation's foreign policy."

UNLESS reversed by the Carter administration or Congress, the Ford decision probably marks the beginning of the end of the supercarriers, which ever since world War II have been the centerpiece and pride of the Navy.

The Navy currently has 13 carriers, with four nuclear-powered ships either in operation or nearing completion. The Navy, which is still dominated by the carrier admirals, had planned to build at least one more nuclear-powered carrier and had hoped to maintain a fleet at least six of them into the indefinite future.

Witnesses said the man was blowing smoke away from the muzzle when he accidentally pulled the trigger.

His friends told police they thought he had passed out from drinking too much.

A quarrel in Lennox between a father and son over the youth's carrying a gun ended at 4:40 a.m. with the father dead and son in critical condition, deputies said.

Investigators said Antonio Alvarado Sr. 38, of 4815 W. 104th St., became angered when he learned his son, Antonio Jr., 14, had taken the father's .38-caliber pistol to celebrate New Year's Eve.

The boy was shot while the father wrestled the gun away from him, deputies said, adding that the father, apparently overcome with anguish, then turned the gun on himself.

Antonio Jr. was listed in critical condition at Hawthorne Community Hospital.

Coroner's investigators said one typical type of New Year's Eve death apparently failed to happen this year.

Investigators said the self-inflicted death occurs when a party-goer tries to impress other celebrants by chug-a-lugging a fifth of bourbon or scotch.

Unable to cope with the equivalent of 25 straight shots of alcohol, the victim's body goes into respiratory failure, investigators said. Cardiac arrest follows seconds later.

Friends are always impressed, one deputy coroner recalled.

named and in place by inauguration day Jan. 20.

Carter said he celebrated the arrival of the New Year quietly with his 9-year-old daughter Amy and his wife, Rosalynn.

"I went to bed before midnight, and Amy and I set the clock for five minutes to 12, and we all woke up and watched Guy Lombardo and also watched the Times Square thing, and five minutes after midnight we were back in bed asleep," he said.

The president-elect pushed his mother's wheelchair through the lobby of the Americus-Sumter County Hospital, where she is being treated for painful muscle spasms in her legs. As he talked with reporters, 78-year-old "Miss Lillian" Carter clasped his hands with hers, laid her head back and closed her eyes.

She told reporters she intends to leave the hospital in time to see her son inaugurated in Washington as the nation's 39th president.

As her eldest son left to return home, she murmured, "I love you."

"Behave yourself today," the president-elect replied.

Swimmers end icy marathon

PALMDALE (AP) — After swimming night and day for five days in an outdoor heated pool with air temperatures as low as 12 degrees, the Palmdale High School swim team successfully concluded its "Operation Iceberg" fund-raising marathon Saturday.

The team kept a relay going from midnight Sunday to just after midnight Friday to publicize their campaign for new equipment.

They raised $600 in cash and $1,700 in pledges and also received donations of lockers and swimsuits for the entire squad of 25 boys and 30 girls. The goal was $2,500.

L.B. parades its '77 colors

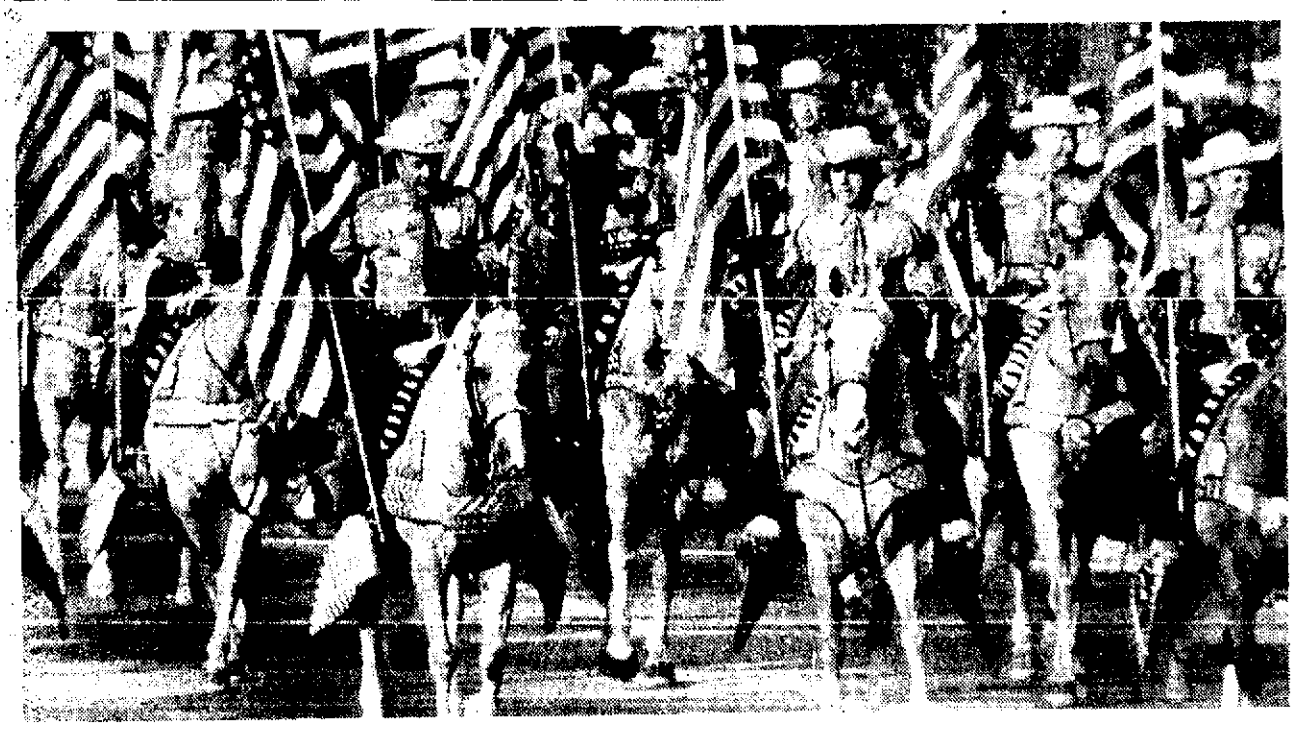

Long Beach equestrians and musicians stepped into 1977 with music, style and a splash of color Saturday as they delighted an estimated 1.4 million spectators at the 88th annual Tournament of Roses Parade in Pasadena.

At top, the 200-member Long Beach State University 49er Marching Band struts along Colorado Boulevard under the direction of Larry Curtis, Gordon Norman and Marvin Branson.

At center, spectators turn their heads and cameras toward one of the 61 flower-bedecked floats, the martial strains of bandsmen still ringing in their ears.

And at bottom, Long Beach's famed Mounted Police, a group of local businessmen astride matched palominos, carry colors to lead the parade for the 30th year. The riders, dressed in red, white and blue Western garb to salute the nation's just-completed Bicentennial year, were directed by Ray Paxton, president and marshal, and Jack Green, captain and marshal.

Discipline plan for classroom

Be assertive, teachers told, and your pupils will behave

By WALT MURRAY
Staff Writer

When Marlene Canter took a leave of absence from the Irvine school where she works, she'd been teaching for six years, and that's about the time it takes for young teachers to "burn out."

After five or six years they quit, take leaves, find any way out they can.

They're brimming with frustration. They don't like kids much anymore. The idealistic plans they tried in their classrooms have failed. They've developed psychosomatic illnesses. Their marriages have deteriorated.

Why are young teachers and 25-year veterans alike finding it harder to teach each year?

"IT USUALLY comes down to feeling so drained by coping with classroom discipline problems that they don't have much energy left over to teach," Marlene Canter said. They feel they've become wardens, not teachers.

They can't control their classrooms. They weren't taught how and haven't been able to figure out how. They get no help from administrators. They blame themselves for their failures. They get out.

But Marlene Canter says her teaching has become more satisfying each year, despite her assignment at Vista Verde School to deal with youngsters with severe learning or behavior problems—the kind of kids that drive most teachers up the wall.

SHE PUT into practice ideas developed by her and her husband, Lee Canter, who brought his background in social work, child therapy and psychological assertiveness training to the classroom situation.

The techniques they developed are sweeping Orange County schools and getting enthusiastic plaudits from teachers throughout Southern California, including Long Beach.

After giving seminars for teachers throughout the Southland, the Canters put their ideas into a book with the stern-sounding title of "Assertive Discipline," which is selling like hotcakes to local teachers.

The Canters tell teachers to set classroom behavior limits that are firm enough to allow them to teach successfully. Then, they say, enforce those limits consistently and persistently until problem children are no longer problems.

THAT MEANS making it clear to youngsters that they are responsible for what they do; that they can choose to do their work and receive praise or not do their work and have their parents telephoned.

The Canters urge teachers to explain clearly what they want youngsters to do and the consequences that will occur if they don't do it. Then they must be willing to follow up — to keep a child after school or praise him for good work.

A teacher who asserts herself that way isn't making unfair demands or violating children's rights, they say. She's setting down the minimum rules she needs to teach successfully.

Just as important, the Canters say, is to be as quick to let kids know when they're doing what you want as when they're not. Warm, positive support must go with setting limits.

THAT SEEMS simple. It's only common sense. But as classroom discipline problems have mounted in recent years, frustrated teachers have found it harder to make any sense out of the chaos in their classrooms.

Children have become increasingly hard to deal with, and teachers have lost their traditional status as authority figures who must be unquestionably obeyed, Canter said.

He said the focus of education and teacher training has, at the same time, shifted to the needs of children, leaving teachers' needs unmet, often unconsidered and sometimes scorned.

"Education today is basically backwards," said Canter, a former child therapist with the Orange County Mental Health Department. "It is not in touch with reality."

"MILLIONS of dollars are spent on research in developing reading programs. The colleges give student teachers a huge variety of strategies for teaching reading and every other subject.

"But you can't teach a kid to read unless you can get him to sit down and be quiet," Canter said. "And no one deals with that. It's incredible, but no one deals with that."

It's likely that the trend of plummeting reading scores in most schools could be reversed if there were order in classrooms, he said.

"If kids are screaming and running around the room, they're not learning how to read," he said. "It's just common sense."

Canter said he has trained more than 2,000 teachers, principals, administrators and school psychologists in the last two years, most of them in Orange County. He has worked with the staffs at more than 30 local elementary schools.

VIRTUALLY the entire teaching staffs in Fountain Valley, Ocean View and Irvine school districts have attended his seminars. Although the Long Beach Unified School District has not called on the Canters, several Long Beach teachers have used their own time to attend their seminars, run through the Continuing Education branch of Fullerton State University.

CG commends L.B.-based officers, crew

Icebreaker aids New Zealanders

By JACK O. BALDWIN
Maritime Editor

The 199 men and 23 officers of the Burton Island, the Long Beach-based Coast Guard icebreaker, have been commended by the Pacific area commander for their efforts in helping victims of a two-day flash flood that hit the Wellington, New Zealand, area Dec. 19 and 20.

In a dispatch to the icebreaker's commanding officer, Capt. James M. Fournier of Fountain Valley, Vice Adm. A.C. Wagner, said:

"I note with pride your prompt assistance to the people of New Zealand after torrential rains and flooding. ... You and your crew devoted tremendous effort to minimize the suffering and property damage suffered by the distressed people."

While the Burton Island was docked in Wellington to take on supplies and make minor repairs to ship's gear, torrential rains lashed the area, causing extensive flooding, especially around Lower Hutt in the Hutt Valley.

(The Burton Island — on her return to Long Beach in April — is scheduled to be transferred to either San Francisco or Seattle, the Independent, Press-Telegram has learned.)

(An almost all new crew will be assigned to move the 30-year vessel to its new home.

(The northward move is scheduled to take place within 30 days after the icebreaker arrives back in Long Beach.)

Thursday, the day before the 269-foot vessel and her crew departed Wellington for the Antartic to take part in "Operation Deep Freeze—1976," the Wellington Evening Post, under a heading, "A Welcome Visitor," commented:

"The U.S. Coast Guard ship Burton Island which sails for the Antartic today (from east of the International Date Line) ... leaves behind a fine reputation for being a 'Good Neighbor.'

"The Burton Island arrived the day before the rains came.

"As soon as the seriousness of the situation became apparent on Monday, the ship's helicopter was volunteered to augment the desperately thin resources available to the authorities in this area.

"Tuesday the Americans flew into the isolated Makara region and then later ferried doctors and police from Lower Hutt to Wellington.

People Talk

E.C. Anderson

HIGH SCHOOL theater is alive and well in Long Beach, and one of the reasons for it is Alvin Randall, drama director at Millikan High School.

Varsity athletics overshadow theater as a drawing card, and that's regrettable, for high school thespians are as dedicated to their craft as the football, basketball, track, tennis, swimming and golf squads are to their sports. Oops, I forgot to mention the wrestlers, water poloists and gymnasts, but you get the idea.

In the first week of December past, Alvin Randall and his Millikan players presented "Pursuit of Happiness," a 1934 comedy of manners centering on the American Revolution and co-authored by Armina Marshall and Lawrence Langner, two of the most celebrated names in American theater.

The play was well received, and from all reports no one raised an eyebrow at the bundling scene which was the cause of much tongue-clucking by the Mrs. Grundys of 1934. They thought it scandalous that the stage would offer the sight of two fully-clothed persons of the opposite sex occupying the same bed, even though they were separated by a wooden partition.

"The devil's own work!" the Mrs. Grundys cried. "The stage is going to damnation in a hand basket."

Such critics, of course, ignored the practicality of bundling, which was conceived, not as an invitation to lust but as a substitute for the nonexistent central heating system.

BUT, IN THESE liberated times, what's the point of prosecuting a long discussion of bundling? The play's the thing, as Shakespeare wrote, and "Pursuit of Happiness," as performed by the Millikan cast, was an even better play because of a letter Alvin Randall received in early November from Armina Marshall, its coauthor.

Miss Marshall's husband, Lawrence Langner, died in 1962 at the age of 72. He was founder, with Theresa Helburn, of the Theater Guild, the producer of such remarkable works as Shaw's "Back to Methuselah," O'Neill's "Mourning Becomes Electra," Rodgers' and Hammerstein's "Oklahoma" and "Carousel."

That's distinguished company, a company filled with such lights as Lynn Fontanne and Alfred Lunt, Pauline Lord, Judith Anderson, Alice Brady, Alla Nazimova, George M. Cohan ("Ah, Wilderness!"), Edward G. Robinson and Claude Rains. And the writers—Sidney Howard, Maxwell Anderson, William Saroyan, Philip Barry and S.N. Behrman.

Such was the circle of Armina Marshall and Lawrence Langner. But the years passed, death took Lawrence Langner, and the ensuing inactivity of Armina Marshall gave rise to reports that she had died.

Thus Alvin Randall wrote to the couple's son, Philip Langner, heir to their talent and himself a distinguished name in theatrical production. Philip Langner passed the letter on to his very-much-alive mother, who answered Randall's request for assistance and advice in the production of "Pursuit of Happiness."

Armina Marshall is in her 80s, but she's still youthful in the way the theater keeps one young. The letter demonstrated her close involvement, to wit:

"CONCERNING 'Pursuit of Happiness,' my suggestions are as follows:

"1 — The Hessian should be attractive and polished in his manner as a contrast to Prudence, the down-to-earth, practical and innocent New England girl.

"2 — The bundling scene should be played with candor on the part of Prudence, and delightful surprise on the part of Max. There should be no knowing insinuation in the playing.

"3 — The colonel should be pompous and self-important.

"4 — The mother and father very New England and down-to-earth.

"5 — Meg should be a simple, attractive slut who cannot resist sex.

"I hope this is a help, and good wishes for the production. Cordially, Armina Marshall."

Miss Marshall is a most remarkable woman. Even in retirement her name still summons up stardust, bright Boradway lights and excitement — an excitement which inspired the Millikan players on opening night of "Pursuit of Happiness."

I hope the Millikan players continue in the distinction of the company they keep. That's why I'm looking forward to being front row center at their spring semester production. Please join me. The Millikan youngsters and Alvin Randall merit your attendance and support.

POSTSCRIPT: "People Talk" has received letters and telephone calls asking for explanation on New Year's resolutions. I have to beg off, for the only way I can keep resolutions is to hide cabinet. I have only one I try to practice. It's the Golden Rule. If I'm faithful to it, the new year takes good care of itself.

Red power worries NATO

WASHINGTON — Sudden European worry about the Warsaw Pact's phenomenal growth in conventional military power has given Jimmy Carter more leverage to strengthen the North Atlantic Treaty Organization (NATO) than any president since John F. Kennedy.

Western Europe's mood of concern bordering on outright fear over growing Soviet superiority in central Europe is shown in NATO's about-face on a proposed multi-billion-dollar airborne radar warning system. Pentagon officials now believe that NATO will approve the system early in 1977. The major reason for the shift: fear of surprise attack.

Even more significant than NATO's changing its mind on the sophisticated warning system, European political leaders are going public to express alarm over gaping holes in NATO's defense.

THE MOST pointed questions about NATO's vulnerability are being raised by Henri Simonet, a brilliant politician in Belgium's Socialist Party (scarcely a hotbed of cold warriors). Simonet, outgoing vice-president of the European Community Commission and former economics minister of Belgium, is pointing up some of the thorniest defense problems ever mentioned by any European socialist, as follows:

Communist military improvements in central Europe are developing a massive offensive force; the strategic concept on which NATO was founded has become obsolete because the Soviet Union has reached at least nuclear parity with the West; demands by Democratic Sen. Sam Nunn of Georgia and Republican Sen. Dewey Bartlett of Oklahoma for fundamental changes in NATO strategy is "only a beginning" of a new American design for NATO which Europe must be prepared to support.

Simonet's questioning of NATO today will appear as a lengthy preface to a meticulously researched, deeply critical book by Belgian Brig. Gen. Robert Close,

Robert Novak

Inside Report

Rowland Evans

former director of studies at the NATO defense college in Rome.

A short version of Gen. Close's still unpublished book appeared earlier this year as a memoir with a grim warning. He suggested the ripening possibility of a Soviet surprise attack against NATO sweeping across the northern plains of Germany to the Rhine in a matter of hours.

That possibility is publicly discounted by Gen. Alexander Haig, NATO supreme commander. But it is gaining affirmation among many students of Soviet military potential, some of who claim that Haig himself privately agrees but is unwilling to say so publicly.

Close's book, updating and fleshing out his earlier memoir, will portray a darkly pessimistic future for the West unless European members of NATO cease what he calls "the demobilization of the minds." By that he means Western Europe's refusal to face the facts of growing Soviet superiority.

That superiority is spelled out by Close in frightening detail. He estimates a Warsaw Pact grand total of 62 satellite divisions and 160 Soviet divisions and claims each Soviet division is either mechanized or airborne. Although Pentagon aides told us the general slightly exaggerated his estimate of Warsaw Pact strength, there is no doubt about the relative weakness of NATO forces.

He reveals the Warsaw Pact could put 39 divisions into the front line "in a first offensive wave" within 48 hours; a second wave of 60 Soviet divisions augmented by major Czech forces could be in action within six days. NATO's defensive force, concludes Gen. Close, would be 22 divisions, relying on principal reinforcements from British and U.S. manpower pools far from the scene of action.

THIS COMPORTS with findings by Sens. Nunn and Bartlett after personal inspection. They concluded it would take far longer than six days — perhaps even two to three weeks — to put the full British complement of 139,000 troops at the Rhine and to airlift U.S. reinforcements across the Atlantic.

If the Pentagon is correct in believing that NATO will approve the extraordinarily costly new airborne warning system, precious time will be added to the West's safety margin. But that will not happen for several years.

Henri Simonet and Gen. Close want something more. In the first draft of his preface to Gen. Close's book, Simonet says, "One must, as a first requisite, convince public opinion" of the desperate need to modernize and reinforce NATO's conventional power. Convincing public opinion is one of the hardest tasks in a democracy, but President-elect Carter — if he really cares — may find the case has been half made for him by the worried Europeans.

Editorial

Assaults on ears

Noise is one of the major irritations of life today, particularly life in an urban area, and it is not surprising that communities are trying to do something about it.

The City of Long Beach, for example, has adopted a noise element to its general plan and is preparing a noise ordinance to set up procedures for enforcing the limitations established by the element.

A FEW DAYS AGO, the Seal Beach City Council adopted an ordinance which prohibits or severely limits noise — particularly from radios and record players.

Chief of Police Ed Cibbarelli said the ordinance would prohibit all commercial use of "amplification systems" in Seal Beach and would require a city permit for non-commercial use of such systems.

Noise is a difficult problem to regulate. For one thing, its annoyance varies depending upon the ambient level. A motorcycle with a defective muffler might be little noticed amid all the other noise of a busy freeway, but it could bring sleepers to a startled awakening if it roared through a quiet residential area at 3 a.m.

Like many other laws, a noise ordinance would be unnecessary if people were considerate of one another. Unfortunately, they are not.

There are always the people whose raucous parties go on into the early morning hours, oblivious to the next-door neighbor who must get up at 6 a.m. to go to work. Even when the party ends, the people don't leave promptly and quietly. They seem to stand at opposite ends of the block, shouting farewells at one another. They slam car doors, race motors and, finally, roar off with a scream of tortured tires.

Studies have indicated that noise is actually physically harmful. It obviously can induce nervous tension, but there is evidence it impairs hearing as well. "Ear-splitting" may not be just a descriptive adjective.

THE NEWS STORY about the Seal Beach ordinance poked a little fun at some of the provisions. It is difficult to write such an ordinance. Measuring what is reasonable and what is too loud is not easy. It may well be that operation of the ordinance will reveal changes are needed.

But some sort of controls on noise are necessary, and we hope the City of Long Beach will be able to come up with a satisfactory noise ordinance in the near future.

Court decision 'ratifies' ERA

WASHINGTON — The sovereign states are not doing much these days for the Equal Rights Amendment, but proponents of the amendment should be of good cheer. If they will only be patient, the Supreme Court effectively will ratify it for them anyhow.

With its decision of Dec. 20 in the Oklahoma beer case, the court struck one more blow for equal treatment of the sexes. It was a bum decision, violative of every principle of judicial restraint, but it does no great harm and may well do good.

Oklahomans will be miffed. Oklahoma is a fine state. I know; I was raised there. But Oklahoma is not without flaw. Thanks to the political clout of the Baptists and the bootleggers, working together in unholy coalition, it is to this day impossible to be served a gin martini before dinner at the Skirvin. One more effort at liquor by the drink went down the drain in November.

THIS SAME regrettable attitude may be observed in the matter of 3.2 beer, a thin libation that is the shame of every honest brewer. Subsequent to the repeal of Prohibition, Oklahoma authorized the sale of this stuff but proscribed its sale to "minors." The law defined a minor as a male under the age of 21 or a female under the age of 18.

Last year a thirsty youth by the name of Curtis Craig, being then under the age of 21, brought a federal suit for declaratory and injunctive relief. He complained that the age differential denied him "equal protection of the law" under the Fourteenth Amendment. He lost in the trial court, but by a 7-2 margin he won on appeal.

Speaking for the majority, Mr. Justice Brennan found no merit whatever in Oklahoma's case. The state contended that the law had been passed in the interest of highway safety. Statistics were introduced to prove that young males are more prone than young females to drink beer and to get arrested for drunk driving. Young males are killed or injured more often in highway accidents. For these reasons, the state argued, the age differential could be justified as a measure to make it more difficult for young bucks to buy beer and take to the road.

Mr. Justice Brennan found the figures unconvincing. To prove broad sociological propositions by statistics "is a dubious business." The relationship between sex and safety was "far too tenuous" to satisfy the law. The data provided "only a weak answer" to the paramount question of whether equal protection had been denied.

Having said all this, Mr. Justice Brennan struck down the law for "invidious discrimination." In the process, he enunciated a new rule by which these cases will be determined: To pass muster, "classifications by gender must serve important governmental objectives and must be substantially related to achievement of these objectives." Highway safety is an important objective, but a law permitting the sale of 3.2 beer to 18-year-old females while denying its sale to 20-year-old males is not substantially related to achieving it.

IN A FIRST-RATE dissenting opinion, Mr. Justice Rehnquist hooted at the majority's reasoning. The new formula "apparently comes out of thin air." He could find no constitutional justification for it. On this point he was plainly right, for of course there was none. For the court to decide cases on what is "important," or "substantial," or "rational," or "compelling," said Mr. Justice Rehnquist, is to invite the judges to substitute their own preferences and prejudices for the decisions of a legislature. He sounded for all the world like the late Hugo Black.

Mr. Justice Rehnquist had the better view of the law, but Mr. Justice Brennan had the most votes. In constitutional construction, as in other rough-and-tumble exercises in democracy, votes count. The Oklahoma decision means that the states must provide overwhelming justification if they wish to enact distinctions at law by reason of sex. Otherwise, such laws will fall.

This is the aim of the Equal Rights Amendment. To become part of the Constitution, it must be ratified by 38 states. Thus far it has been approved by 34 states and by Justices Brennan, Marshall, Blackmun, White, Stewart, Powell and Stevens. That makes 41, and should suffice.

'Fencing' the seas

In the days of the old west in America, big cattle ranches sprawled over thousands of acres of open range. Then settlers began arriving and putting up fences to protect their farms.

Something similar is happening to the world's oceans. At one time, fishing fleets of various nations roamed at will for their catches. But fishing boats got larger, able to stay out for longer periods and handle vastly larger catches.

NATIONS BORDERING the seas became alarmed that these foreign fishing vessels were depleting fish populations in their offshore waters. So, they began erecting "fences" — extending their fishing zones seaward.

On Saturday, Jan. 1, the "fenced" areas expanded tremendously as Canada, Norway and the nine member countries of the European Community established 200-mile offshore zones in an effort to protect their endangered fisheries from further depletion.

And next March 1, the United States is scheduled to follow suit.

In each instance, the extended zone is intended not to prohibit foreign fishing vessels entering, but to require them to limit their catch to a specified tonnage. Canada, for example, already has gained acceptance of its extended zone in bilateral agreements with the Soviet Union, Norway, Poland, Spain and Portugal, whose fleets account for 88 per cent of all catches by foreign vessels in Canada's Atlantic waters and most of the catch in Pacific waters.

The nation most concerned about the increased restrictions is Japan, which last year harvested 10.8 million metric tons of fish and other sea creatures. More than 4.5 million tons of this total was taken within 200 miles of some other nation's shores.

Disputes over fishing areas are inevitable. The United States and Canada, for example, each claim an area of more than 10,600 square nautical miles off the coasts of Maine, New Brunswick and Nova Scotia — one of the world's most fertile fishing grounds.

IT IS ONE THING to adopt 200-mile zones and quite another to enforce them. Like the old American west, the "fences" may lead to confrontations between foreign fishing fleets and nations determined to protect a rapidly diminishing source of food.

Depletion of these sources makes protective action imperative, and we hope the nations who depend on fishing for food recognize that failure to protect this resource ultimately will result in everybody fighting over nothing.

Budget problems for Carter

By JUDY GARDNER
Congressional Quarterly

WASHINGTON — Of all the demands on Jimmy Carter's time after he takes office Jan. 20, one of the most pressing will be putting his imprint on the federal budget left behind by President Ford.

Never an easy job for a new president, reshaping the budget for the year that begins Oct. 1, 1977, will be even tougher for Carter than his predecessors.

The reason is the budget process Congress enacted in 1974. Because of its deadlines, Carter will be under unprecedented pressure to decide — in less than four weeks — what changes he wants to make in the budget that Ford will send to Congress around Jan. 17.

Past presidents have had the relative luxury of several months to consider amendments to the budgets they inherited. Carter, on the other hand, has been advised by key members of Congress that he has only until Feb.. 15 to submit his proposed changes.

"IT'S TO CARTER'S advantage to get as much information to us as soon as he can," said Bruce Meredith, assistant director for budget priorities of the House budget committee.

Time is not the only difficulty facing Carter in trying to make the Ford budget his own. A combination of factors seems to foreclose sweeping revisions or new programs.

Carter is inheriting a shaky economy that may well need extra stimulus in 1977. That is likely to mean a larger deficit than originally planned by either the Ford administration or the Democratic Congress, and less money for spending for Carter initiatives. The enormous cost and complexity of major proposals such as welfare reform or national health insurance would delay their introduction.

Carter himself has limited some of his options with his pledge to balance the federal budget by the end of his first term. That would further delay the introduction of expensive, major government programs.

"I intend to keep my commitment of a balanced budget at the end of four years, and so I'll be very cautious about implanting new spending programs until I am convinced they can be accomplished with that commitment," he said at a recent press conference.

That is not to say Carter will be unable to have any impact on the budget left behind by Ford. If he is facing unprecedented obstacles in putting his own mark on that document, he also is making an unprecedented effort that began even before his election.

He has had at work since August a small budget transition team identifying and analyzing budget options and priorities for fiscal 1978 and beyond. He and his staff also have met with House budget committee members and staff to learn Congress' needs.

"We are now assessing the cost of all existing programs, trying to determine which ones of them can be phased out completely, which ones can be modified, which ones can be made more effective, which ones can be consolidated with others," Carter said.

"And before we initiate any new programs, the long-range impact of those programs over a four-year period will be very carefully assessed."

Whatever Carter decides, he will be facing a different atmosphere than that faced by other new presidents. For the first time, Congress has an ongoing budget process that enables it to draw up its own spending plan.

Even though the outlook is for harmony between the Democrats on Capitol Hill and in the White House, no one expects the legislative branch to abandon its new system — any presidential budget, Republican or Democratic, would be changed.

L.B. parades its '77 colors

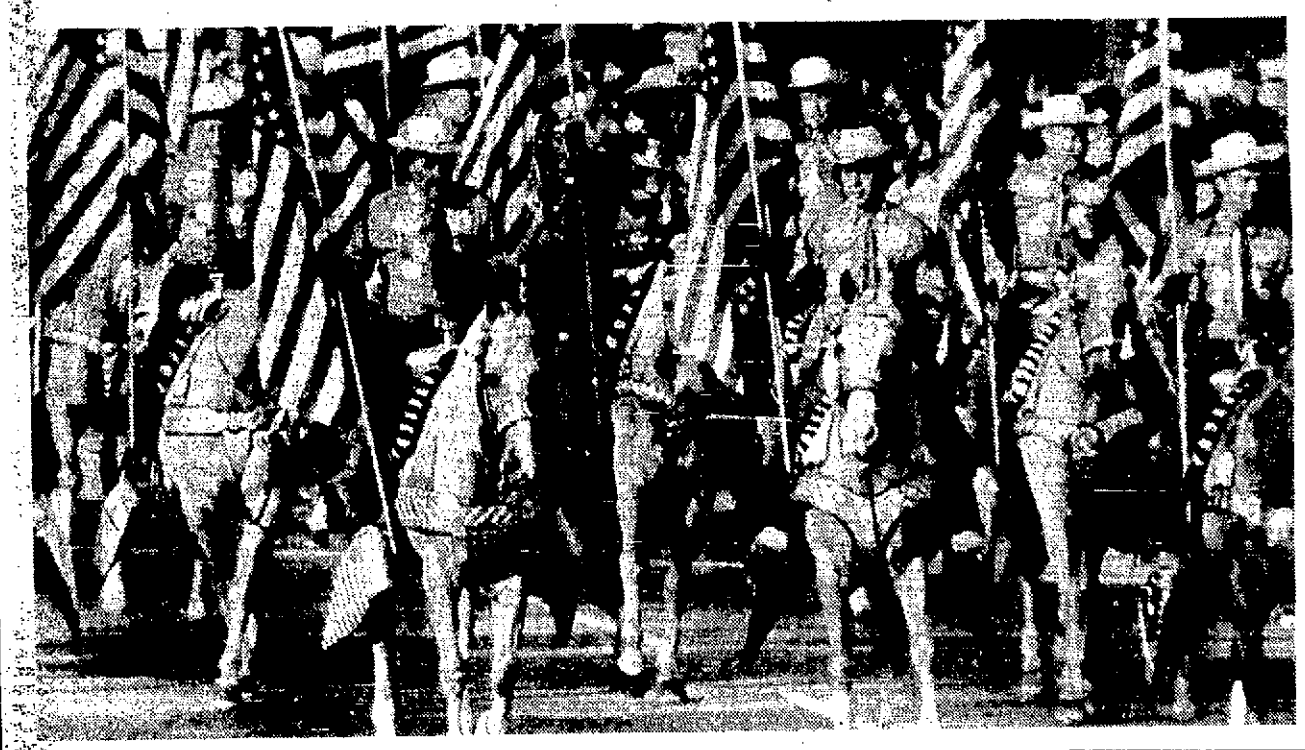

Long Beach equestrians and musicians stepped into 1977 with music, style and a splash of color Saturday as they delighted an estimated 1.4 million spectators at the 88th annual Tournament of Roses Parade in Pasadena.

At top, the 200-member Long Beach State University 49er Marching Band struts along Colorado Boulevard under the direction of Larry Curtis, Gordon Norman and Marvin Branson.

At center, spectators turn their heads and cameras toward one of the 61 flower-bedecked floats, the martial strains of bandsmen still ringing in their ears.

And at bottom, Long Beach's famed Mounted Police, a group of local businessmen astride matched palominos, carry colors to lead the parade for the 30th year. The riders, dressed in red, white and blue Western garb to salute the nation's just-completed Bicentennial year, were directed by Ray Paxton, president and marshal, and Jack Green, captain and marshal.

Discipline plan for classroom

Be assertive, teachers told, and your pupils will behave

By WALT MURRAY
Staff Writer

When Marlene Canter took a leave of absence from the Irvine school where she works, she'd been teaching for six years, and that's about the time it takes for young teachers to "burn out."

After five or six years they quit, take leaves, find any way out they can.

They're brimming with frustration. They don't like kids much anymore. The idealistic plans they tried in their classrooms have failed. They've developed psychosomatic illnesses. Their marriages have deteriorated.

Why are young teachers and 25-year veterans alike finding it harder to teach each year?

"IT USUALLY comes down to feeling so drained by coping with classroom discipline problems that they don't have much energy left over to teach," Marlene Canter said. They feel they've become wardens, not teachers.

They can't control their classrooms. They weren't taught how and haven't been able to figure out how. They get no help from administrators. They blame themselves for their failures. They get out.

But Marlene Canter says her teaching has become more satisfying each year, despite her assignment at Vista Verde School to deal with youngsters with severe learning or behavior problems—the kind of kids that drive most teachers up the wall.

SHE PUT into practice ideas developed by her and her husband, Lee Canter, who brought his background in social work, child therapy and psychological assertiveness training to the classroom situation.

The techniques they developed are sweeping Orange County schools and getting enthusiastic plaudits from teachers throughout Southern California, including Long Beach.

After giving seminars for teachers throughout the Southland, the Canters put their ideas into a book with the stern-sounding title of "Assertive Discipline," which is selling like hotcakes to local teachers.

The Canters tell teachers to set classroom behavior limits that are firm enough to allow them to teach successfully. Then, they say, enforce those limits consistently and persistently until problem children are no longer problems.

THAT MEANS making it clear to youngsters that they are responsible for what they do; that they can choose to do their work and receive praise or not do their work and have their parents telephoned.

The Canters urge teachers to explain clearly what they want youngsters to do and the consequences that will occur if they don't do it. Then they must be willing to follow up — to keep a child after school or praise him for good work.

A teacher who asserts herself that way isn't making unfair demands or violating children's rights, they say. She's setting down the minimum rules she needs to teach successfully.

Just as important, the Canters say, is to be as quick to let kids know when they're doing what you want as when they're not. Warm, positive support must go with setting limits.

THAT SEEMS simple. It's only common sense. But as classroom discipline problems have mounted in recent years, frustrated teachers have found it harder to make any sense out of the chaos in their classrooms.

Children have become increasingly hard to deal with, and teachers have lost their traditional status as authority figures who must be unquestionably obeyed, Canter said.

He said the focus of education and teacher training has, at the same time, shifted to the needs of children, leaving teachers' needs unmet, often unconsidered and sometimes scorned.

"Education today is basically backwards," said Canter, a former child therapist with the Orange County Mental Health Department. "It is not in touch with reality."

"MILLIONS of dollars are spent on research in developing reading programs. The colleges give student teachers a huge variety of strategies for teaching reading and every other subject.

"But you can't teach a kid to read unless you can get him to sit down and be quiet," Canter said. "And no one deals with that. It's incredible, but no one deals with that."

It's likely that the trend of plummeting reading scores in most schools could be reversed if there were order in classrooms, he said.

"If kids are screaming and running around the room, they're not learning how to read," he said. "It's just common sense."

Canter said he has trained more than 2,000 teachers, principals, administrators and school psychologists in the last two years, most of them in Orange County. He has worked with the staffs at more than 30 local elementary schools.

VIRTUALLY the entire teaching staffs in Fountain Valley, Ocean View and Irvine school districts have attended his seminars. Although the Long Beach Unified School District has not called on the Canters, several Long Beach teachers have used their own time to attend their seminars, run through the Continuing Education branch of Fullerton State University.

People Talk

F.C. Anderson

HIGH SCHOOL theater is alive and well in Long Beach, and one of the reasons for it is Alvin Randall, drama director at Millikan High School.

Varsity athletics overshadow theater as a drawing card, and that's regrettable, for high school thespians are as dedicated to their craft as the football, basketball, track, tennis, swimming and golf squads are to their sports. Oops, I forgot to mention the wrestlers, water poloists and gymnasts, but you get the idea.

In the first week of December past, Alvin Randall and his Millikan players presented "Pursuit of Happiness," a 1934 comedy of manners centering on the American Revolution and co-authored by Armina Marshall and Lawrence Langner, two of the most celebrated names in American theater.

The play was well received, and from all reports no one raised an eyebrow at the bundling scene which was the cause of much tongue-clucking by the Mrs. Grundys of 1934. They thought it scandalous that the stage would offer the sight of two fully-clothed persons of the opposite sex occupying the same bed, even though they were separated by a wooden partition.

"The devil's own work!" the Mrs. Grundys cried. "The stage is going to damnation in a hand basket."

Such critics, of course, ignored the practicality of bundling, which was conceived, not as an invitation to lust but as a substitute for the nonexistent central heating system.

BUT, IN THESE liberated times, what's the point of prosecuting a long discussion of bundling? The play's the thing, as Shakespeare wrote, and "Pursuit of Happiness," as performed by the Millikan cast, was an even better play because of a letter Alvin Randall received in early November from Armina Marshall, its coauthor.

Miss Marshall's husband, Lawrence Langner, died in 1962 at the age of 72. He was founder, with Theresa Helburn, of the Theater Guild, the producer of such remarkable works as Shaw's "Back to Methuselah," O'Neill's "Mourning Becomes Electra," Rodgers' and Hammerstein's "Oklahoma" and "Carousel."

That's distinguished company, a company filled with such lights as Lynn Fontanne and Alfred Lunt, Pauline Lord, Judith Anderson, Alice Brady, Alla Nazimova, George M. Cohan ("Ah, Wilderness!"), Edward G. Robinson and Claude Rains. And the writers—Sidney Howard, Maxwell Anderson, William Saroyan, Philip Barry and S.N. Behrman.

Such was the circle of Armina Marshall and Lawrence Langner. But the years passed, death took Lawrence Langner, and the ensuing inactivity of Armina Marshall gave rise to reports that she had died.

Thus Alvin Randall wrote to the couple's son, Philip Langner, heir to their talent and himself a distinguished name in theatrical production. Philip Langner passed the letter on to his very-much-alive mother, who answered Randall's request for assistance and advice in the production of "Pursuit of Happiness."

Armina Marshall is in her 80s, but she's still youthful in the way the theater keeps one young. The letter demonstrated her close involvement, to wit:

"CONCERNING 'Pursuit of Happiness,' my suggestions are as follows:

"1 — The Hessian should be attractive and polished in his manner as a contrast to Prudence, the down-to-earth, practical and innocent New England girl.

"2 — The bundling scene should be played with candor on the part of Prudence, and delightful surprise on the part of Max. There should be no knowing insinuation in the playing.

"3 — The colonel should be pompous and self-important.

"4 — The mother and father very New England and down-to-earth.

"5 — Meg should be a simple, attractive slut who cannot resist sex.

"I hope this is a help, and good wishes for the production. Cordially, Armina Marshall."

Miss Marshall is a most remarkable woman. Even in retirement her name still summons up stardust, bright Boradway lights and excitement — an excitement which inspired the Millikan players on opening night of "Pursuit of Happiness."

I hope the Millikan players continue in the distinction of the company they keep. That's why I'm looking forward to being front row center at their spring semester production. Please join me. The Millikan youngsters and Alvin Randall merit your attendance and support.

POST-SCRIPT: "People Talk" has received letters and telephone calls asking for a column on New Year's resolutions. I have to beg off, for the only way I can keep resolutions is in a file cabinet. I have only one I try to practice. It's the Golden Rule. If I'm faithful to it, the new year takes good care of itself.

Assaults on ears

Noise is one of the major irritations of life today, particularly life in an urban area, and it is not surprising that communities are trying to do something about it.

The City of Long Beach, for example, has adopted a noise element to its general plan and is preparing a noise ordinance to set up procedures for enforcing the limitations established by the element.

A FEW DAYS AGO, the Seal Beach City Council adopted an ordinance which prohibits or severely limits noise — particularly from radios and record players.

Chief of Police Ed Cibbarelli said the ordinance would prohibit all commercial use of "amplification systems" in Seal Beach and would require a city permit for non-commercial use of such systems.

Noise is a difficult problem to regulate. For one thing, its annoyance varies depending upon the ambient level. A motorcycle with a defective muffler might be little noticed amid all the other noise of a busy freeway, but it could bring sleepers to a startled awakening if it roared through a quiet residential area at 3 a.m.

Like many other laws, a noise ordinance would be unnecessary if people were considerate of one another. Unfortunately, they are not.

There are always the people whose raucous parties go on into the early morning hours, oblivious to the next-door neighbor who must get up at 6 a.m. to go to work. Even when the party ends, the people don't leave promptly and quietly. They seem to stand at opposite ends of the block, shouting farewells at one another. They slam car doors, race motors and, finally, roar off with a scream of tortured tires.

Studies have indicated that noise is actually physically harmful. It obviously can induce nervous tension, but there is evidence it impairs hearing as well. "Ear-splitting" may not be just a descriptive adjective.

THE NEWS STORY about the Seal Beach ordinance poked a little fun at some of the provisions. It is difficult to write such an ordinance. Measuring what is reasonable and what is too loud is not easy. It may well be that operation of the ordinance will reveal changes are needed.

But some sort of controls on noise are necessary, and we hope the City of Long Beach will be able to come up with a satisfactory noise ordinance in the near future.

'Fencing' the seas

In the days of the old west in America, big cattle ranches sprawled over thousands of acres of open range. Then settlers began arriving and putting up fences to protect their farms.

Something similar is happening to the world's oceans. At one time, fishing fleets of various nations roamed at will for their catches. But fishing boats got larger, able to stay out for longer periods and handle vastly larger catches.

NATIONS BORDERING the seas became alarmed that these foreign fishing vessels were depleting fish populations in their offshore waters. So, they began erecting "fences" — extending their fishing zones seaward.

On Saturday, Jan. 1, the "fenced" areas expanded tremendously as Canada, Norway and the nine member countries of the European Community established 200-mile offshore zones in an effort to protect their endangered fisheries from further depletion.

And next March 1, the United States is scheduled to follow suit.

In each instance, the extended zone is intended not to prohibit foreign fishing vessels entering, but to require them to limit their catch to a specified tonnage. Canada, for example, already has gained acceptance of its extended zone in bilateral agreements with the Soviet Union, Norway, Poland, Spain and Portugal, whose fleets account for 88 per cent of all catches by foreign vessels in Canada's Atlantic waters and most of the catch in Pacific waters.

The nation most concerned about the increased restrictions is Japan, which last year harvested 10.8 million metric tons of fish and other sea creatures. More than 4.5 million tons of this total was taken within 200 miles of some other nation's shores.

Disputes over fishing areas are inevitable. The United States and Canada, for example, each claim an area of more than 10,600 square nautical miles off the coasts of Maine, New Brunswick and Nova Scotia — one of the world's most fertile fishing grounds.

IT IS ONE THING to adopt 200-mile zones and quite another to enforce them. Like the old American west, the "fences" may lead to confrontations between foreign fishing fleets and nations determined to protect a rapidly diminishing source of food.

Depletion of these sources makes protective action imperative, and we hope the nations who depend on fishing for food recognize that failure to protect this resource ultimately will result in everybody fighting over nothing.

Red power worries NATO

WASHINGTON — Sudden European worry about the Warsaw Pact's phenomenal growth in conventional military power has given Jimmy Carter more leverage to strengthen the North Atlantic Treaty Organization (NATO) than any president since John F. Kennedy.

Western Europe's mood of concern bordering on outright fear over growing Soviet superiority in central Europe is shown in NATO's about-face on a proposed multi-billion-dollar airborne radar warning system. Pentagon officials now believe that NATO will approve the system early in 1977. The major reason for the shift: fear of surprise attack.

Even more significant than NATO's changing its mind on the sophisticated warning system, European political leaders are going public to express alarm over gaping holes in NATO's defense.

THE MOST pointed questions about NATO's vulnerability are being raised by Henri Simonet, a brilliant politician in Belgium's Socialist Party (scarcely a hotbed of cold warriors). Simonet, outgoing vice-president of the European Community Commission and former economics minister of Belgium, is pointing up some of the thorniest defense problems ever mentioned by any European socialist, as follows:

Communist military improvements in central Europe are developing a massive offensive force; the strategic concept on which NATO was founded has become obsolete because the Soviet Union has reached at least nuclear parity with the West; demands by Democratic Sen. Sam Nunn of Georgia and Republican Sen. Dewey Bartlett of Oklahoma for fundamental changes in NATO strategy is "only a beginning" of a new American design for NATO which Europe must be prepared to support.

Simonet's questioning of NATO today will appear as a lengthy preface to a meticulously researched, deeply critical book by Belgian Brig. Gen. Robert Close,

Robert Novak

Inside Report

Rowland Evans

former director of studies at the NATO defense college in Rome.

A short version of Gen. Close's still unpublished book appeared earlier this year as a memoir with a grim warning. He suggested the ripening possibility of a Soviet surprise attack against NATO sweeping across the northern plains of Germany to the Rhine in a matter of hours.

That possibility is publicly discounted by Gen. Alexander Haig, NATO supreme commander. But it is gaining affirmation among many students of Soviet military potential, some of who claim that Haig himself privately agrees but is unwilling to say so publicly.

Close's book, updating and fleshing out his earlier memoir, will portray a darkly pessimistic future for the West unless European members of NATO cease what he calls "the demobilization of the minds." By that he means Western Europe's refusal to face the facts of growing Soviet superiority.

That superiority is spelled out by Close in frightening detail. He estimates a Warsaw Pact grand total of 62 satellite divisions and 160 Soviet divisions and claims each Soviet division is either mechanized or airborne. Although Pentagon aides told us the general slightly exaggerated his estimate of Warsaw Pact strength, there is no doubt about the relative weakness of NATO forces.

He reveals the Warsaw Pact could put 39 divisions into the front line "in a first offensive wave" within 48 hours; a second wave of 60 Soviet divisions augmented by major Czech forces could be in action within six days. NATO's defensive force, concludes Gen. Close, would be 22 divisions, relying on principal reinforcements from British and U.S. manpower pools far from the scene of action.

THIS COMPORTS with findings by Sens. Nunn and Bartlett after personal inspection. They concluded it would take far longer than six days — perhaps even two to three weeks — to put the full British complement of 139,000 troops at the Rhine and to airlift U.S. reinforcements across the Atlantic.

If the Pentagon is correct in believing that NATO will approve the extraordinarily costly new airborne warning system, precious time will be added to the West's safety margin. But that will not happen for several years.

Henri Simonet and Gen. Close want something more. In the first draft of his preface to Gen. Close's book, Simonet says, "One must, as a first requisite, convince public opinion" of the desperate need to modernize and reinforce NATO's conventional power. Convincing public opinion is one of the hardest tasks in a democracy, but President-elect Carter — if he really cares — may find the case has been half made for him by the worried Europeans.

Court decision 'ratifies' ERA

WASHINGTON — The sovereign states are not doing much these days for the Equal Rights Amendment, but proponents of the amendment should be of good cheer. If they will only be patient, the Supreme Court effectively will ratify it for them anyhow.

With its decision of Dec. 20 in the Oklahoma beer case, the court struck one more blow for equal treatment of the sexes. It was a bum decision, violative of every principle of judicial restraint, but it does no great harm and may well do good.

Oklahomans will be miffed. Oklahoma is a fine state. I know; I was raised there. But Oklahoma is not without flaw. Thanks to the political clout of the Baptists and the bootleggers, working together in unholy coalition, it is to this day impossible to be served a gin martini before dinner at the Skirvin. One more effort at liquor by the drink went down the drain in November.

THIS SAME regrettable attitude may be observed in the matter of 3.2 beer, a thin libation that is the shame of every honest brewer. Subsequent to the repeal of Prohibition, Oklahoma authorized the sale of this stuff but proscribed its sale to "minors." The law defined a minor as a male under the age of 21 or a female under the age of 18.

Last year a thirsty youth by the name of Curtis Craig, being then under the age of 21, brought a federal suit for declaratory and injunctive relief. He complained that the age differential denied him "equal protection of the law" under the Fourteenth Amendment. He lost in the trial court, but by a 7-2 margin he won on appeal.

Speaking for the majority, Mr. Justice Brennan found no merit whatever in Oklahoma's case. The state contended that the law had been passed in the interest of highway safety. Statistics were introduced to prove that young males are more prone than young females to drink beer and to get arrested for drunk driving. Young males are killed or injured more often in highway accidents. For these reasons, the state argued, the age differential could be justified as a measure to make it more difficult for young bucks to buy beer and take to the road.

Mr. Justice Brennan found the figures unconvincing. To prove broad sociological propositions by statistics "is a dubious business." The relationship between sex and safety was "far too tenuous" to satisfy the law. The data provided "only a weak answer" to the paramount question of whether equal protection had been denied.

Having said all this, Mr. Justice Brennan struck down the law for "invidious discrimination." In the process, he enunciated a new rule by which these cases will be determined: To pass muster, "classifications by gender must serve important governmental objectives and must be substantially related to achievement of these objectives." Highway safety is an important objective, but a law permitting the sale of 3.2 beer to 18-year-old females while denying its sale to 20-year-old males is not substantially related to achieving it.

IN A FIRST-RATE dissenting opinion, Mr. Justice Rehnquist hooted at the majority's reasoning. The new formula "apparently comes out of thin air." He could find no constitutional justification for it. On this point he was plainly right, for of course there was none. For the court to decide cases on what is "important," or "substantial," or "rational," or "compelling," said Mr. Justice Rehnquist, is to invite the judges to substitute their own preferences and prejudices for the decisions of a legislature. He sounded for all the world like the late Hugo Black.

Mr. Justice Rehnquist had the better view of the law, but Mr. Justice Brennan had the most votes. In constitutional construction, as in other rough-and-tumble exercises in democracy, votes count. The Oklahoma decision means that the states must provide overwhelming justification if they wish to enact distinctions at law by reason of sex. Otherwise, such laws will fall.

This is the aim of the Equal Rights Amendment. To become part of the Constitution, it must be ratified by 38 states. Thus far it has been approved by 34 states and by Justices Brennan, Marshall, Blackmun, White, Stewart, Powell and Stevens. That makes 41, and should suffice.

Budget problems for Carter

By JUDY GARDNER
Congressional Quarterly

WASHINGTON — Of all the demands on Jimmy Carter's time after he takes office Jan. 20, one of the most pressing will be putting his imprint on the federal budget left behind by President Ford.

Never an easy job for a new president, reshaping the budget for the year that begins Oct. 1, 1977, will be even tougher for Carter than his predecessors.

The reason is the budget process Congress enacted in 1974. Because of its deadlines, Carter will be under unprecedented pressure to decide — in less than four weeks — what changes he wants to make in the budget that Ford will send to Congress around Jan. 17.

Past presidents have had the relative luxury of several months to consider amendments to the budgets they inherited. Carter, on the other hand, has been advised by key members of Congress that he has only until Feb.. 15 to submit his proposed changes.

"IT'S TO CARTER'S advantage to get as much information to us as soon as he can," said Bruce Meredith, assistant director for budget priorities of the House budget committee.

Time is not the only difficulty facing Carter in trying to make the Ford budget his own. A combination of factors seems to foreclose sweeping revisions or new programs.

Carter is inheriting a shaky economy that may well need extra stimulus in 1977. That is likely to mean a larger deficit than originally planned by either the Ford administration or the Democratic Congress, and less money for spending for Carter initiatives. The enormous cost and complexity of major proposals such as welfare reform or national health insurance would delay their introduction.

Carter himself has limited some of his options with his pledge to balance the federal budget by the end of his first term. That would further delay the introduction of expensive, major government programs.

"I intend to keep my commitment of a balanced budget at the end of four years, and so I'll be very cautious about implanting new spending programs until I am convinced they can be accomplished with that commitment," he said at a recent press conference.

That is not to say Carter will be unable to have any impact on the budget left behind by Ford. If he is facing unprecedented obstacles in putting his own mark on that document, he also is making an unprecedented effort that began even before his election.

He has had at work since August a small budget transition team identifying and analyzing budget options and priorities for fiscal 1978 and beyond. He and his staff also have met with House budget committee members and staff to learn Congress' needs.

"We are now assessing the cost of all existing programs, trying to determine which ones of them can be phased out completely, which ones can be modified, which ones can be made more effective, which ones can be consolidated with others," Carter said.

"And before we initiate any new programs, the long-range impact of those programs over a four-year period will be very carefully assessed."

Whatever Carter decides, he will be facing a different atmosphere than that faced by other new presidents. For the first time, Congress has an ongoing budget process that enables it to draw up its own spending plan.

Even though the outlook is for harmony between the Democrats on Capitol Hill and in the White House, no one expects the legislative branch to abandon its new system — any presidential budget, Republican or Democratic, would be changed.

Brown's role in '65 scandal

WASHINGTON — It can be hoped that President-elect Jimmy Carter's search for a defense secretary is not indicative of the thoroughness of important investigations by his talent-hunting team.

Days after it had been reported authoritatively that Dr. Harold Brown, a former Air Force secretary, was to be secretary of defense, one of Carter's top advisers was unaware that Dr. Brown had a significant role in the two biggest procurement scandals in the McNamara Pentagon.

Dr. Brown, as deputy secretary of defense for research and engineering and as air secretary, participated fully in the cover-up of irregularities in the award of the TFX fighter-bomber contract to General Dynamics and the award of the C-5A jet transport contract to the Lockheed Corporation.

While Dr. Brown, as head of research and engineering, initially was opposed to awarding the multi-billion-dollar contract to General Dynamics on technical engineering grounds, he later took part in producing a series of questionable McNamara studies to justify the award after the fact.

According to Senate investigators, when Dr. Brown was named by McNamara as air secretary in 1965 he took a full role in the production of deceptive reports on the progress of cost and performance that were an integral part of the cover-up.

Dr. Brown's role in the award of the multi-billion-dollar C-5A contract to Lock-

Clark Mollenhoff

heed is spelled out in detail by Air Force cost analyst A. Ernest Fitzgerald in his well-documented book, "The High Priests of Waste."

Dr. Brown, who had been air secretary for only a few weeks at the time of the award of the controversial contract in 1965, had a limited responsibility in connection with the award, but he had a major responsibility on the cover-up of the overruns from Congress in 1968.

FITZGERALD RELATES that Dr. Brown was "on the right side" in approving pursuit of the contract cost overruns, but later folded to the pressure and as air secretary became a central figure in the cover-up from Congress of nearly $2 billion in cost overruns and related problems.

Fitzgerald, who first testified on those huge C-5A contract overruns before Senator William Proxmire's (Dem., Wis.) Joint Economic Committee, told of Air Secretary Brown's critical reaction to his truthful testimony.

"You're a damned poor Congressional witness," Dr. Brown was quoted by Fitzgerald.

Cut off by Dr. Brown in an effort to explain that his choice was between exposing the cost overruns and giving false testimony, Fitzgerald said Dr. Brown retorted that Senator Richard Russell, Dem.-Ga., had called to complain of implications that he had brought pressure on the Air Force on the C-5A situation.

Fitzgerald wrote that Dr. Brown dismissed him curtly and with considerable irritation and that a few days later he was notified by the personnel office that he had lost his tenure in his job.

Fitzgerald challenged the order on change of tenure as setting the stage for firing him for truthful testimony, and it was explained that a "computer error" had caused the notice of loss of tenure.

A short time later, Dr. Brown made inquiry as to how Fitzgerald could be legally dismissed, and received a memorandum a few days later on three ways that could be used to get rid of Fitzgerald. One of those ways — a reduction in force — actually was used a few months later to fire Fitzgerald.

The Civil Service Commission five years later ruled that Fitzgerald was improperly discharged, and ordered that he be reinstated with back pay at the same rate.

The role of Dr. Brown on those two large Air Force contracts does not indicate the kind of respect for truth and integrity in defense contracting that President-elect Carter has promised. The multi-billion-dollar TFX contract totaled more than $7 billion when it was awarded in 1962, and was the largest single Air Force contract up to that time.

It was topped by the equally controversial award of the C-5A contract to Lockheed in 1965.

WHILE DR. BROWN was a politically pliable Air Force secretary under Defense Secretary Robert S. McNamara, it is possible that an older, more mature Dr. Brown could emerge as a stronger figure in the defense secretary post.

However, the Carter organization could not conceivably make a thoughtful and informed decision on whether Dr. Brown was "the best man for the job" without an examination of his role in the TFX scandal and the C-5A contract disaster.

The top Carter transition team apparently was unaware of Dr. Brown's role in those two major scandals, and the focus of political attention was on whether Dr. Brown was "a hawk" or "a dove" in the Vietnam War decisions.

It should be noted that the secretary of defense should have no "hawk" or "dove" role in foreign policy. His responsibility is to have the best military equipment and personnel available to carry out the policy as established by the President and the secretary of state.

Petroleum prices

In a singularly impressive sleight-of-mouth argument, Mr. H.H. Hardy of the American Petroleum Institute accuses Jack Anderson of errors of omission concerning the mandated maximum price differential for leaded and unleaded gasoline. In defense of the miraculous, Mr. Hardy cites a study commissioned by his own API urging the conclusion that it actually costs approximately two and a half cents more per gallon to produce unleaded (as opposed to regular) gasoline. Yea, verily, who will watch the watchers?

However, even were we to credit Mr. Hardy's statistics, we are left with his own admission that the average selling price of regular leaded gasoline is 57.7 cents per gallon while the average selling price of unleaded gasoline is 62.7 cents per gallon. To put it simply, the consumer of unleaded gasoline is paying a price differential twice as great even as that alleged to be the cost differential.

And, just in case we missed the marvelous logic, Mr. Hardy assures us that we are being treated so royally by the petroleum industry because of the "competitive forces" at work there. Wondrous indeed.

Picking on Ford

It looks as though President Ford is supposed to gracefully accept the "whipping boy" status right on up to the inauguration. First, it was the ultra rights and radical lefts who denigrated him to second-rate status for his loyalty to his president in granting a pardon. And now he's being held accountable for some of the current flack coming from Capitol Hill regarding his stand on the amnesty hearings.

By any stretch of the mind, I still don't see how one can loyally serve his own country and at the same time disavow it and then expect all to be forgiven as though it were a closed chapter. If this were true in WWII (had the situation existed), it would have resulted not in "amnesty hearings" but in the general courts martial for all involved. In marriage, if one partner isn't satisfied, a divorce occurs. In service, however, the oath is a bit more binding.

Anti-Irish?

As a young Irishman, I vehemently protest against your newspaper's bigoted, anti-Irish article last week. The column written about Matt Talbot, who has been considered for sainthood in the Catholic Church, was a slander against all Irish Catholics.

Your bigoted headline, "Irish drunk to become saint," was an insult to decent Irish people everywhere. When I think of the Catholic people of North Ireland gallantly struggling against British oppression there, and a swine of a newspaper such as the I, P-T is, to depict the Irish people as drunks fills me with utter rage inside my whole being.

When I think of that wonderful Catholic woman, Rose Kennedy, who lost three sons in the service of this country, and other Irish women who lost their sons in World War II, Korea and Vietnam, and then read your anti-Irish article, I cannot but help feel deeply ashamed that I am an American citizen.

If we are Irish drunks as your newspaper points out, then we are very successful drunks: Gov. Casey of New York, Sen. Pat Moynihan of New York, Gov. Brendan Byrne of New Jersey and, last but not least, Gov. Brown of California.

Your newspaper is the epitome of anti-Irish bigotry, but we Irish will survive. After all, one of our kind became president of the United States. Your newspaper hasn't the guts to print this letter because you fear the truth.

Matthew Talbot, who was known as the "saint in overalls," was a drunkard for 15 years before he underwent a conversion and devoted his life to the Catholic Church. In reporting this fact, the Independent, Press-Telegram was in no way slandering the Irish, or being bigoted. We are sorry reader Johnston misinterpreted the story. — The Editor.

Intelligence vs. guns

The letter by J. Thomas Bingham (on gun statistics) caused me to think back to my boyhood. I was born in 1901. I spent the first 12 years of my life in several large and small cities: San Francisco, Oakland, Denver, Salt Lake City, Tucson, Rexburg, Ida., and Payson, Utah.

I can honestly say that I never knew a single family that did not own a gun. I can only remember one person getting killed by his own gun, and he was drunk when he stepped over the wagon seat and staggered and hit the hammer of his shotgun with his heel.

Intelligent people do not get hurt by guns. It is only the ignorant who get hurt. Intelligent people teach their children to have respect for guns so they don't get hurt. Is it posible that J. Thomas Bingham might like to add a few more columns to his square?

He could have one column for how intelligent or stupid the gun owner was. He could also have columns to show the percentage of people who owned guns 70 years ago and the percentage of people who own guns now.

Isn't it rather odd that the crime rate was low when most every family had one or more guns and is extremely high now that a much smaller percentage of people own guns?

Dangerous tankers

Have the Liberians declared war on the United States? If so, they sure have a "slick" way of going about it.

Like most Americans, I can understand the need for the import of foreign oil in this country. But how much of our environmental standards must we give up to satisfy our needs? I don't know whether Liberians think they're doing us a good deed by placing their oil directly on our shores, but we as Americans would rather have it placed in storage tanks. It's about time our government took another look at our maritime rules and regulations regarding oil tankers of foreign registry shipping oil to U.S. ports.

Grocery cart hassle

I sent my son to Alpha Beta on Dec. 22 to purchase $16. in groceries as my infant son was sick. The manager left the store in his car and stopped the boy three blocks from the store, took his skateboard, groceries and told him he couldn't take them home because he left with the basket. My son offered to carry the groceries home. I called the manager and he was very hostile, calling my son a thief because he was using the store basket. I told him my son wouldn't steal a 5-cent candy bar.

The police came and took my son to the store and the officer said the signs were not posted correctly regarding removing carts from the premises. He also told the manager if it was his son, he'd press charges on the manager for stealing the skateboard and groceries three blocks from the store.

What has happened to the Christmas spirit? Wouldn't it have been nice if the manager had used the same car he stole my groceries in to take them and my son home to me and said "Merry Christmas?" After all, we had picked his store to give $16 to. I didn't send my son to shoplift, yet he was humiliated and harassed like a common criminal. How can we teach our kids to respect adults when the adults show such poor judgment?

Ten years ago: South Vietnam informed Britain it would take part in a proposed British peace conference to end fighting in Vietnam, but rejection by North Vietnam was indicated.

Five years ago: Pakistan's major industries were nationalized, but the government said the move would not affect foreign investment.

One year ago: The Soviet Union hardened its stand on emigration despite the 1975 Helsinki agreement to permit freer movement of people and ideas in Europe.

Down the ladder to Paradise

NANTUCKET, Mass. — The 7.5 million gallons of oil sloshing around in the ocean to the southeast of here remind us that places like Nantucket are expendable in the modern world.

asphalt, it will surely be a pity, but it will be, after all, merely another one of those "trade-offs" we accept in return for the modern condition.

Nantucketers themselves understand and accept the necessity of these "trade-offs." For years now they have been trading off the fragile beauty of their island for spending money, and it would take a hard heart not to sympathize with them. Despite its extraordinary beauty, the island is, by most measures of wealth, one of the poorest areas in Massachusetts. When the rich are paying big for beauty, it is only natural that the poor should sell.

It is a sucker's deal for the rich, of course, and Nantucketers know it. When the real estate crowd has finished turning the island into another typical American suburb, the beauty will have turned into an eyesore. Too bad for the buyer. Not so bad for the seller if he uses his profit to get out, go south to the subtropical sunshine where he is not bound to a three-month year of catering to tourists and a nine-month season of waiting until next year.

I DO NOT SAY it is every Nantucketer's dream to dump the place and move to Florida, although many do. It is a fact, nonetheless, that when January sets in and the annual return of the lucrative tourist is still five months off, and there is little to do but listen to the wind and stare at the calendar, there is a powerful temptation to dream of killings in real estate, year-round work, and trade winds in Barbados.

The islanders' needs clash inevitably with the desires of the well-heeled summer people who want Nantucket preserved as a refuge from the mainland hells where they normally domicile. Having acquired what they regard as a piece of paradise, the summer people tend to conservationist schemes aimed at stopping development, and thus become political enemies of the islanders who often view them as fat interlopers insensitive to the needs of the year-round people.

In the past few years, the conservationists have shown growing muscle. They have even stopped or hindered a few of the more grandiose projects for trimming the island moors and ponds with summer housing of the suburban-development variety. These victories have been won in the courts, however. In the local Nantucket political arena, the advocates of "growth" usually prevail.

Earlier this year, political decisions in which the summer people do not participate, put Nantucketers on record in favor of an oceanside Holiday Inn motel designed principally to cater to oil drillers working off Georges Bank. In another test of Nantucket attitudes toward conservation, the islanders voted aginst endorsing the so-called Kennedy bill, which would create a joint federal-local partnership to prevent unchecked real estate development throughout the island.

Obviously, Nantucketers take much the same attitude toward "growth" that is commonly taken by people who stand to profit from it. They may not be well disposed to growth-enhancing oil tankers that break up on their shoals and threaten their tourist business, but they are not above making another "trade-off" — nature for subdivisions — when it promises to boost the local economy.

This is not to suggest that they should be more high minded than anybody else. Their economic need is certainly more pressing than the oil industry's. The point is that economics seems to compel us all, the poor and the rich alike, to turn things into slums.

The oil compulsion is now turning the Atlantic south of here into a marine slum, and the real estate compulsion promises to turn places like Nantucket into island slums. And we accept both as "trade-offs" to keep us moving along the road to a better life.

THERE IS STILL no oil on the beaches of Nantucket, and dead birds are few. On the roads to the beaches, however, one sees once beautiful moors scarred by dozens and dozens of real estate speculations — newly-erected summer houses, each placed to create a "view," and woods already cut for new developments. Ten years ago all these lands were empty except for wildlife. Twenty years from now, at the present growth rate, the island will look like Co-op City.

And although it will be too bad, it will be absolutely justifiable. An economic necessity. An inevitable development toward a more modern human condition. Another step down the ladder to Paradise.

TEAM OF CLYDESDALES ARE TO PULL FAMOUS BEER WAGON THROUGH DOWNTOWN LONG BEACH

To plod through city with old-fashioned beer wagon

Clydesdale horse team due in Long Beach

A team of eight giant horses are to pull their old-fashioned beer wagon through downtown Long Beach Tuesday following their traditional New Year's Day appearance in the Tournament of Roses Parade..

The Anheuser-Busch Clydesdales, each weighing a ton, will go on display at 11 a.m. on Fifth Street near Long Beach Boulevard, said Jack Ures, promotion chairman for the sponsoring Downtown Long Beach Associates.

At 3 p.m., the white-stockinged horses are scheduled to pull their 3½-ton, brass-trimmed wagon east to Atlantic Avenue, north to Seventh Street, west to Pine Avenue, south to Broadway, east to Long Beach Bouleva and north back to the starting point.

They will remain on display there until 5 p.m.

A calliope will join the show horses during the parade, adding to the rumble of their five-pound horseshoes and the steel-rimmed wagon wheels on the pavement, Ures said.

The team is owned by the Anheuser-Busch Brewing Co. of St. Louis and has toured coast-to-coast since the original team was put together at the end of Prohibition in 1933.

Ures said the great horses were intelligent, well-mannered and highly trained. They are so accustomed to traffic that they merely perk up their ears with slight annoyance when sirens wail near them, he added.

Memorial fund for slain woman set up

By BOB GEIVET
Staff Writer

Friends of Janet Stallcup, who was studying to help children as a nurse before she was murdered, have set up a memorial fund in her honor at Children's Hospital of Orange.

The 19-year-old Garden Grove woman, a nursing student at Cypress College, was apparently kidnaped Dec. 19, then slain.

Hospital officials said the memorial funds will be earmarked for purchase of equipment used to treat children. Donations may be sent to Children's Hospital, 1109 W. La Veta St., Orange, CA, 92668. Checks should be made out to the Janet Stallcup Fund.

The young woman was on the way to a party at the home of a friend and was evidently kidnaped before she reached her car. Her body was found in her car Dec. 22, parked in a narrow passageway of an apartment complex. Her funeral service was Friday.

Garden Grove police are searching for two men believed to have knowledge of the abduction, and who may have taken her for sex attacks, which were disclosed by post-mortem examinations.

Rewards totalling $7,000 — with $5,000 pledged by her family and $2,000 guaranteed by the Independent, Press-Telegram's Secret Witness Program (436-2526) — have been offered for information leading to the arrest and conviction of her killers.

A 24-hour information line has been established in Garden Grove: (714) 638-6615.

New Bellflower S&L gets conditional OK

The Bellflower Savings and Loan, now in the stage of organizing, has received its long-awaited conditional approval for insurance and savings accounts and membership to the Federal Home Loan Bank.

W. Gellert, its president, said such an approval was mandatory for every new savings and loan association.

The primary condition attached to Bellflower Savings and Loan's approval, Gellert said, was the raising of an additional $1 million in capital.

Teachers learn to keep order by asserting themselves

Many of the teachers who attended the seminars say assertive discipline helps them do systematically what they'd been trying falteringly to do before. Some say it kept them from quitting.

"This is the first year of my ten years of teaching that I've really felt in control of the classroom," said Linda Bonee, who teaches sixth, seventh and eighth grade English at Newland School in Fountain Valley.

"WHEN I was in college, I was taught how to teach subjects but not how to deal with children," she said. "Now I can teach much more because I don't have to worry about discipline."

"People who know me as a teacher say, 'wow, what a difference.' I come home relaxed in the afternoon. I'm more willing to put in extra time working after school because I'm not drained of energy."

Steve Nieman, psychologist at Bushard School in Fountain Valley, where the Canters have given seminars, said he'd used many of their methods before.

"But they've done a beautiful job of pulling it together and they have a terrific presentation," he said. "It seems to help almost every teacher."

NANCY Saunders, a first grade teacher at Whittier School in Long Beach, echoed the opinions of several Long Beach teachers who went through the training.

It gives teachers a method, a system for dealing with behavior problems, she said. If teachers take the Canters' advice, they plan out stategies of how to get youngsters to behave as carefully as they plan what they are going to teach.

"You just don't get that in teacher training," she said. "No one tells you discipline will be a problem. You have to fend for yourself."

Said Canter: "When you deal with kids, you can't fly by the seat of your pants. You have to have a systematic plan of action."

"MOST teachers deal with behavior problems as they arise. But there's no worse place for a teacher to think than in a classroom. You can't think when you've got 30 kids jumping up and down."

The Canters say they're not rejecting the sweeping changes in education of the 1960s, when it was finally recognized that different children need to be taught in different ways and that children have rights, too. They're not for returning to the old-style classroom where the teacher was sometimes a tyrant.

Nor are they saying that teachers who want to use open classrooms, unstructured curriculums or let children help decide what they'll learn should return to the old days of authoritarianism.

Each teacher should use the teaching methods she's most comfortable with because that's the way she'll have the most success, they say.

"BUT SHE must have control of her classroom before she can use any teaching technique sucessfully," Marlene Canter said.

"A teacher needs a classroom environment with a reasonably low noise level," Lee Canter said. "She wants the kids to do their work without disrupting. When she gets her needs met, the kids get their needs met."

The Canters say there are few naturally assertive teachers. Linda Bonee thinks one reason may be that teachers are usually "soft, caring persons."

"I used to feel that I didn't have a right to demand that a child be quiet," she said. "Now I see how ridiculous that is."

"OVER THE past few years, the schools have had more and more problem children. Out of my class of 30 I might have five who are really disruptive. Sometimes I used to go home thinking, 'I spent my whole day on those five, and everybody else just fell by the wayside.'"

"The thing that really turned it around for me was the idea that as a teacher I have rights in the classroom. Until my needs are met, there's no way I can go about helping children. When I lay it out that I need this and this and this, the kids really respond, they respect that."

The educational system doesn't recognize that teachers have needs too, Lee Canter said.

"Many teachers honestly believe that if they are strong enough or have a good enough curriculum they can handle any problem.

"BUT IT takes a superhuman teacher to deal with the two or three problem kids that turn up in each class. And even the average kid is harder to deal with nowadays."

"Teachers are trained to deal with nice, normal middle-class kids with no learning, emotional or behavior problems," Canter said. "There's few of those around."

Marlene Canter said that all the student teachers from Long Beach State, Fullerton State and UC Irvine that she supervised while teaching at her school "had no experience in how to deal with behavior problems."

Many school administrators allow teachers to believe that it's their fault if they can't control their classrooms, Lee Canter said.

SOME OFFER virtually no support for teachers who ask for help. They don't know how to deal with behavior problems themselves. That's one reason Canter urges teachers to assert themselves with school officials, too.

"Most teachers don't ask for help. Or when they do, they say something like, 'I'm sorry to bother you, but I have this problem and I don't know what to do.' They should be able to say, 'I've done everything I can do with this kid and I want him out of my classroom so I can teach reading the rest of the day.'"

"Teachers aren't treated like human beings," he said. "If you or I were around disruptive kids in any other social situation, we'd probably either whomp them or throw them out of the room, but the teacher is expected to put up with them."

CANTER said that the basic message he tries to get across to teachers is that "before you care about those kids, you've got to care about you."

"A teacher has to say: 'I don't care whether kids are called disi dvantaged, disturbed, learning disabled, whatever — they're going to behave in my classroom. I'm not going to violate their rights, but I will not allow kids to act crazy in my classroom. I care too much about me as a human being to put up with it, and I've got a responsibility to those kids to make them behave.'"

YOU DO that by being assertive, not by giving in or being hostile, Canter said. The Canters' book gives this example of how a youngster can sidetrack a non-assertive teacher:

Teacher: "Sue, I want you to raise your hand and wait to be called upon before you speak."

Sue: "None of the other children do."

Teacher: "What do you mean, none of the other children do?"

Sue: "Kevin always shouts out."

Teacher: "When?"

Sue: "He did it all morning during our social studies discussion."

Teacher: "I'll take care of Kevin, don't worry."

Sue: "Well, even if I raise my hand you never call on me."

Teacher (getting frustrated): "Yes, I do."

Sue: "You didn't this morning."

Teacher (even more frustrated): "Look, Sue, I don't want to talk about this anymore; you just don't listen to me."

THAT'S THE unassertive teacher. The hostile teacher might yell at Sue. The assertive teacher uses the "broken record technique" — a common tool in assertiveness training — to cope with students like Sue.

Teacher: "Sue, I want you to raise your hand and wait to be called upon before you speak."

Sue: "None of the other children do."

Teacher: "That's not the point, I want you to raise your hand."

Sue: "You never call on me."

Teacher: "That's not the point, I want you to raise your hand."

Sue: "OK, I will."

Icebreaker crew gets high commendation

"Later in the week, crew from the ship came forward with sleeves rolled up and shovels at the-ready to help dig out homes in Stokes Valley."

"Earlier this week the helicopter was in action again searching for a missing yachtsman in the Cook Strait. Unhappily the search was not successful but the Burton Island's captain (Fournier) made it clear whenever a life was in danger, his men and their equipment were at the-ready. 'A life is a life, no matter what nationality,' he said.

"We've been happy to act as hosts to the Burton Island. In spite of the weather we hope they take away happy memories of our city and they're welcome back any time they want to come," the editorial concluded.

In addition to aiding flood victims, the Burton Island's personnel staged a gift-giving visit from the ship's "Father Christmas" to the Wellington Home of Compassion, a home for deaf, blind, and crippled children.

Noting the Burton Island's activities during its stay in New Zealand, the American Embassy sent a message to the American Office of Secretary of State which ended with this comment:

"Burton Island has directly touched and boosted the morale of hundreds of Wellingtonians and engendered an additional, large measure of goodwill toward the U.S. throughout New Zealand."

Adm. Wagner in his message to the Burton Island's crew ended it with the comment appreciated by all service personnel who have ever received a similar one. He said:

"Your attitude and devotion to duty during the humanitarian response were in the highest traditions of the U.S. Coast Guard."

Brown's role in '65 scandal

WASHINGTON — It can be hoped that President-elect Jimmy Carter's search for a defense secretary is not indicative of the thoroughness of important investigations by his talent-hunting team.

Days after it had been reported authoritatively that Dr. Harold Brown, a former Air Force secretary, was to be secretary of defense, one of Carter's top advisers was unaware that Dr. Brown had a significant role in the two biggest procurement scandals in the McNamara Pentagon.

Dr. Brown, as deputy secretary of defense for research and engineering and as air secretary, participated fully in the cover-up of irregularities in the award of the TFX fighter-bomber contract to General Dynamics and the award of the C-5A jet transport contract to the Lockheed Corporation.

While Dr. Brown, as head of research and engineering, initially was opposed to awarding the multi-billion-dollar contract to General Dynamics on technical engineering grounds, he later took part in producing a series of questionable McNamara studies to justify the award after the fact.

According to Senate investigators, when Dr. Brown was named by McNamara as air secretary in 1965 he took a full role in the production of deceptive reports on the progress of cost and performance that were an integral part of the cover-up.

Dr. Brown's role in the award of the multi-billion-dollar C-5A contract to Lockheed is spelled out in detail by Air Force cost analyst A. Ernest Fitzgerald in his well-documented book, "The High Priests of Waste."

Clark Mollenhoff

Dr. Brown, who had been air secretary for only a few weeks at the time of the award of the controversial contract in 1965, had a limited responsibility in connection with the award, but he had a major responsibility on the cover-up of the overruns from Congress in 1968.

FITZGERALD RELATES that Dr. Brown was "on the right side" in approving pursuit of the contract cost overruns, but later folded to the pressure and as air secretary became a central figure in the cover-up from Congress of nearly $2 billion in cost overruns and related problems.

Fitzgerald, who first testified on those huge C-5A contract overruns before Senator William Proxmire's (Dem., Wis.) Joint Economic Committee, told of Air Secretary Brown's critical reaction to his truthful testimony.

"You're a damned poor Congressional witness," Dr. Brown was quoted by Fitzgerald.

Cut off by Dr. Brown in an effort to explain that his choice was between exposing the cost overruns and giving false testimony, Fitzgerald said Dr. Brown retorted that Senator Richard Russell, Dem.-Ga., had called to complain of implications that he had brought pressure on the Air Force on the C-5A situation.

Fitzgerald wrote that Dr. Brown dismissed him curtly and with considerable irritation and that a few days later he was notified by the personnel office that he had lost his tenure in his job.

Fitzgerald challenged the order on change of tenure as setting the stage for firing him for truthful testimony, and it was explained that a "computer error" had caused the notice of loss of tenure.

A short time later, Dr. Brown made inquiry as to how Fitzgerald could be legally dismissed, and received a memorandum a few days later on three ways that could be used to get rid of Fitzgerald. One of those ways — a reduction in force — actually was used a few months later to fire Fitzgerald.

The Civil Service Commission five years later ruled that Fitzgerald was improperly discharged, and ordered that he be reinstated with back pay at the same rate.

The role of Dr. Brown on those two large Air Force contracts does not indicate the kind of respect for truth and integrity in defense contracting that President-elect Carter has promised. The multi-billion-dollar TFX contract totaled more than $7 billion when it was awarded in 1962, and was the largest single Air Force contract up to that time.

It was topped by the equally controversial award of the C-5A contract to Lockheed in 1965.

WHILE DR. BROWN was a politically pliable Air Force secretary under Defense Secretary Robert S. McNamara, it is possible that an older, more mature Dr. Brown could emerge as a stronger figure in the defense secretary post.

However, the Carter organization could not conceivably make a thoughtful and informed decision on whether Dr. Brown was "the best man for the job" without an examination of his role in the TFX scandal and the C-5A contract disaster.

The top Carter transition team apparently was unaware of Dr. Brown's role in those two major scandals, and the focus of political attention was on whether Dr. Brown was "a hawk" or "a dove" in the Vietnam War decisions.

It should be noted that the secretary of defense should have no "hawk" or "dove" role in foreign policy. His responsibility is to have the best military equipment and personnel available to carry out the policy as established by the President and the secretary of state.

Petroleum prices

In a singularly impressive sleight-of-mouth argument, Mr. H.H. Hardy of the American Petroleum Institute accuses Jack Anderson of errors of omission concerning the mandated maximum price differential for leaded and unleaded gasoline. In defense of the miraculous, Mr. Hardy cites a study commissioned by his own API urging the conclusion that it actually costs approximately two and a half cents more per gallon to produce unleaded (as opposed to regular) gasoline. Yea, verily, who will watch the watchers?

However, even were we to credit Mr. Hardy's statistics, we are left with his own admission that the average selling price of regular leaded gasoline is 57.7 cents per gallon while the average selling price of unleaded gasoline is 62.7 cents per gallon. To put it simply, the consumer of unleaded gasoline is paying a price differential twice as great even as that alleged to be the cost differential.

And, just in case we missed the marvelous logic, Mr. Hardy assures us that we are being treated so royally by the petroleum industry because of the "competitive forces" at work there. Wondrous indeed.

Picking on Ford

It looks as though President Ford is supposed to gracefully accept the "whipping boy" status right on up to the inauguration. First, it was the ultra rights and radical lefts who denigrated him to second-rate status for his loyalty to his president in granting a pardon. And now he's being held accountable for some of the current flack coming from Capitol Hill regarding his stand on the amnesty hearings.

By any stretch of the mind, I still don't see how one can loyally serve his own country and at the same time disavow it and then expect all to be forgiven as though it were a closed chapter. If this were true in WWII (had the situation existed), it would have resulted not in "amnesty hearings" but in the general courts martial for all involved. In marriage, if one partner isn't satisfied, a divorce occurs. In service, however, the oath is a bit more binding.

Anti-Irish?

As a young Irishman, I vehemently protest against your newspaper's bigoted, anti-Irish article last week. The column written about Matt Talbot, who has been considered for sainthood in the Catholic Church, was a slander against all Irish Catholics.

Your bigoted headline, "Irish drunk to become saint," was an insult to decent Irish people everywhere. When I think of the Catholic people of North Ireland gallantly struggling against British oppression there, and a swine of a newspaper such as the I, P-T is, to depict the Irish people as drunks fills me with utter rage inside my whole being.

When I think of that wonderful Catholic woman, Rose Kennedy, who lost three sons in the service of this country, and other Irish women who lost their sons in World War II, Korea and Vietnam, and then read your anti-Irish article, I cannot but help feel deeply ashamed that I am an American citizen.

If we are Irish drunks as your newspaper points out, then we are very successful drunks: Gov. Casey of New York, Sen. Pat Moynihan of New York, Gov. Brendan Byrne of New Jersey and, last but not least, Gov. Brown of California.

Your newspaper is the epitome of anti-Irish bigotry, but we Irish will survive. After all, one of our kind became president of the United States. Your newspaper hasn't the guts to print this letter because you fear the truth.

Matthew Talbot, who was known as the "saint in overalls," was a drunkard for 15 years before he underwent a conversion and devoted his life to the Catholic Church. In reporting this fact, the Independent, Press-Telegram was in no way slandering the Irish, or being bigoted. We are sorry reader Johnston misinterpreted the story. — The Editor.

Intelligence vs. guns

The letter by J. Thomas Bingham (on gun statistics) caused me to think back to my boyhood. I was born in 1901. I spent the first 12 years of my life in several large and small cities: San Francisco, Oakland, Denver, Salt Lake City, Tucson, Rexburg, Ida., and Payson, Utah.

I can honestly say that I never knew a single family that did not own a gun. I can only remember one person getting killed by his own gun, and he was drunk when he stepped over the wagon seat and staggered and hit the hammer of his shotgun with his heel.

Intelligent people do not get hurt by guns. It is only the ignorant who get hurt. Intelligent people teach their children to have respect for guns so they don't get hurt. Is it posible that J. Thomas Bingham might like to add a few more columns to his square?

He could have one column for how intelligent or stupid the gun owner was. He could also have columns to show the percentage of people who owned guns 70 years ago and the percentage of people who own guns now.

Isn't it rather odd that the crime rate was low when most every family had one or more guns and is extremely high now that a much smaller percentage of people own guns?

Dangerous tankers

Have the Liberians declared war on the United States? If so, they sure have a "slick" way of going about it.

Like most Americans, I can understand the need for the import of foreign oil in this country. But how much of our environmental standards must we give up to satisfy our needs? I don't know whether Liberians think they're doing us a good deed by placing their oil directly on our shores, but we as Americans would rather have it placed in storage tanks. It's about time our government took another look at our maritime rules and regulations regarding oil tankers of foreign registry shipping oil to U.S. ports.

I sent my son to Alpha Beta on Dec. 22 to purchase $16. in groceries as my infant son was sick. The manager left the store in his car and stopped the boy three blocks from the store, took his skateboard, groceries and told him he couldn't take them home because he left with the basket. My son offered to carry the groceries home. I called the manager and he was very hostile, calling my son a thief because he was using the store basket. I told him my son wouldn't steal a 5-cent candy bar.

The police came and took my son to the store and the officer said the signs were not posted correctly regarding removing carts from the premises. He also told the manager if it was his son, he'd press charges on the manager for stealing the skateboard and groceries three blocks from the store.

What has happened to the Christmas spirit? Wouldn't it have been nice if the manager had used the same car he stole my groceries in to take them and my son home to me and said "Merry Christmas?" After all, we had picked his store to give $16 to. I didn't send my son to shoplift, yet he was humiliated and harassed like a common criminal. How can we teach our kids to respect adults when the adults show such poor judgment?

It is a sucker's deal for the rich, of course, and Nantucketers know it. When the real estate crowd has finished turning the island into another typical American suburb, the beauty will have turned into an eyesore. Too bad for the buyer. Not so bad for the seller if he uses his profit to get out, go south to the subtropical sunshine where he is not bound to a three-month year of catering to tourists and a nine-month season of waiting until next year.

I DO NOT SAY it is every Nantucketer's dream to dump the place and move to Florida, although many do. It is a fact, nonetheless, that when January sets in and the annual return of the lucrative tourist is still five months off, and there is little to do but listen to the wind and stare at the calendar, there is a powerful temptation to dream of killings in real estate, year-round work, and trade winds in Barbados.

The islanders' needs clash inevitably with the desires of the well-heeled summer people who want Nantucket preserved as a refuge from the mainland hells where they normally domicile. Having acquired what they regard as a piece of paradise, the summer people tend to conservationist schemes aimed at stopping development, and thus become political enemies of the islanders who often view them as fat interlopers insensitive to the needs of the year-round people.

In the past few years, the conservationists have shown growing muscle. They have even stopped or hindered a few of the more grandiose projects for trimming the island moors and ponds with summer housing of the suburban-development variety. These victories have been won in the courts, however. In the local Nantucket political arena, the advocates of "growth" usually prevail.

Earlier this year, political decisions in which the summer people do not participate, put Nantucketers on record in favor of an oceanside Holiday Inn motel designed principally to cater to oil drillers working off Georges Bank. In another test of Nantucket attitudes toward conservation, the islanders voted aginst endorsing the so-called Kennedy bill, which would create a joint federal-local partnership to prevent unchecked real estate development throughout the island.

Obviously, Nantucketers take much the same attitude toward "growth" that is commonly taken by people who stand to profit from it. They may not be well disposed to growth-enhancing oil tankers that break up on their shoals and threaten their tourist business, but they are not above making another "trade-off" — nature for subdivisions — when it promises to boost the local economy.

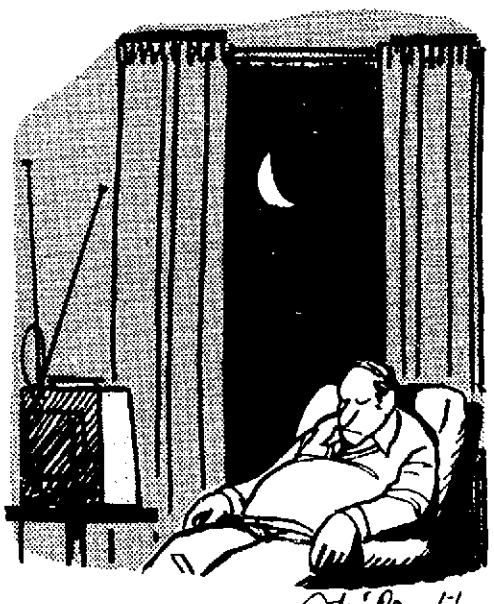

This is not to suggest that they should be more high minded than anybody else. Their economic need is certainly more pressing than the oil industry's. The point is that economics seems to compel us all, the poor and the rich alike, to turn things into slums.

The oil compulsion is now turning the Atlantic south of here into a marine slum, and the real estate compulsion promises to turn places like Nantucket into island slums. And we accept both as "trade-offs" to keep us moving along the road to a better life.

THERE IS STILL no oil on the beaches of Nantucket, and dead birds are few. On the roads to the beaches, however, one sees once beautiful moors scarred by dozens and dozens of real estate speculations — newly-erected summer houses, each placed to create a "view," and woods already cut for new developments. Ten years ago all these lands were empty except for wildlife. Twenty years from now, at the present growth rate, the island will look like Co-op City.

And although it will be too bad, it will be absolutely justifiable. An economic necessity. An inevitable development toward a more modern human condition. Another step down the ladder to Paradise.

TEAM OF CLYDESDALES ARE TO PULL FAMOUS BEER WAGON THROUGH DOWNTOWN LONG BEACH

To plod through city with old-fashioned beer wagon

Clydesdale horse team due in Long Beach

A team of eight giant horses are to pull their old-fashioned beer wagon through downtown Long Beach Tuesday following their traditional New Year's Day appearance in the Tournament of Roses Parade.

The Anheuser-Busch Clydesdales, each weighing a ton, will go on display at 11 a.m. on Fifth Street near Long Beach Boulevard, said Jack Ures, promotion chairman for the sponsoring Downtown Long Beach Associates.

At 3 p.m., the white-stockinged horses are scheduled to pull their 3½-ton, brass-trimmed wagon east to Atlantic Avenue, north to Seventh Street, west to Pine Avenue, south to Broadway, east to Long Beach Bouleva and north back to the starting point.

They will remain on display there until 5 p.m.

A calliope will join the show horses during the parade, adding to the rumble of their five-pound horseshoes and the steel-rimmed wagon wheels on the pavement, Ures said.

The team is owned by the Anheuser-Busch Brewing Co. of St. Louis and has toured coast-to-coast since the original team was put together at the end of Prohibition in 1933.

Ures said the great horses were intelligent, well-mannered and highly trained. They are so accustomed to traffic that they merely perk up their ears with slight annoyance when sirens wail near them, he added.

Memorial fund for slain woman set up

By BOB GEIVET
Staff Writer

Friends of Janet Stallcup, who was studying to help children as a nurse before she was murdered, have set up a memorial fund in her honor at Children's Hospital of Orange.

The 19-year-old Garden Grove woman, a nursing student at Cypress College, was apparently kidnaped Dec. 19, then slain.

Hospital officials said the memorial funds will be earmarked for purchase of equipment used to treat children. Donations may be sent to Children's Hospital, 1109 W. La Veta St., Orange, CA, 92668. Checks should be made out to the Janet Stallcup Fund.

The young woman was on the way to a party at the home of a friend and was evidently kidnaped before she reached her car. Her body was found in her car Dec. 22, parked in a narrow passageway of an apartment complex. Her funeral service was Friday.

Garden Grove police are searching for two men believed to have knowledge of the abduction, and who may have taken her for sex attacks, which were disclosed by post-mortem examinations.

Rewards totalling $7,000 — with $5,000 pledged by her family and $2,000 guaranteed by the Independent, Press-Telegram's Secret Witness Program (436-2526) — have been offered for information leading to the arrest and conviction of her killers.

A 24-hour information line has been established in Garden Grove: (714) 638-6615.

New Bellflower S&L gets conditional OK

The Bellflower Savings and Loan, now in the stage of organizing, has received its long-awaited conditional approval for insurance and savings accounts and membership to the Federal Home Loan Bank.

W. Gellert, its president, said such an approval was mandatory for every new savings and loan association.

The primary condition attached to Bellflower Savings and Loan's approval, Gellert said, was the raising of an additional $1 million in capital.

Teachers learn to keep order by asserting themselves

Many of the teachers who attended the seminars say assertive discipline helps them do systematically what they'd been trying falteringly to do before. Some say it kept them from quitting.

"This is the first year of my ten years of teaching that I've really felt in control of the classroom," said Linda Bonee, who teaches sixth, seventh and eighth grade English at Newland School in Fountain Valley.

"WHEN I was in college, I was taught how to teach subjects but not how to deal with children," she said. "Now I can teach much more because I don't have to worry about discipline."

"People who know me as a teacher say, 'wow, what a difference.' I come home relaxed in the afternoon. I'm more willing to put in extra time working after school because I'm not drained of energy."

Steve Nieman, psychologist at Bushard School in Fountain Valley, where the Canters have given seminars, said he'd used many of their methods before.

"But they've done a beautiful job of pulling it together and they have a terrific presentation," he said. "It seems to help almost every teacher."

NANCY Saunders, a first grade teacher at Whittier School in Long Beach, echoed the opinions of several Long Beach teachers who went through the training.

It gives teachers a method, a system for dealing with behavior problems, she said. If teachers take the Canters' advice, they plan out stategies of how to get youngsters to behave as carefully as they plan what they are going to teach.

"You just don't get that in teacher training," she said. "No one tells you discipline will be a problem. You have to fend for yourself."

Said Canter: "When you deal with kids, you can't fly by the seat of your pants. You have to have a systematic plan of action."

"MOST teachers deal with behavior problems as they arise. But there's no worse place for a teacher to think than in a classroom. You can't think when you've got 30 kids jumping up and down."

The Canters say they're not rejecting the sweeping changes in education of the 1960s, when it was finally recognized that different children need to be taught in different ways and that children have rights, too. They're not for returning to the old-style classroom where the teacher was sometimes a tyrant.

Nor are they saying that teachers who want to use open classrooms, unstructured curriculums or let children help decide what they'll learn should return to the old days of authoritarianism.

Each teacher should use the teaching methods she's most comfortable with because that's the way she'll have the most success, they say.

"BUT SHE must have control of her classroom before she can use any teaching technique successfully," Marlene Canter said.

"A teacher needs a classroom environment with a reasonably low noise level," Lee Canter said. "She wants the kids to do their work without disrupting. When she gets her needs met, the kids get their needs met."

The Canters say there are few naturally assertive teachers. Linda Bonee thinks one reason may be that teachers are usually "soft, caring persons."

"I used to feel that I didn't have a right to demand that a child be quiet," she said. "Now I see how ridiculous that is."

"OVER THE past few years, the schools have had more and more problem children. Out of my class of 30 I might have five who are really disruptive. Sometimes I used to go home thinking, 'I spent my whole day on those five, and everybody else just fell by the wayside.'"

"The thing that really turned it around for me was the idea that as a teacher I have rights in the classroom. Until my needs are met, there's no way I can go about helping children. When I lay it out that I need this and this and this, the kids really respond, they respect that."

The educational system doesn't recognize that teachers have needs too, Lee Canter said.

"Many teachers honestly believe that if they are strong enough or have a good enough curriculum they can handle any problem.

"BUT IT takes a superhuman teacher to deal with the two or three problem kids that turn up in each class. And even the average kid is harder to deal with nowadays."

"Teachers are trained to deal with nice, normal middle-class kids with no learning, emotional or behavior problems," Canter said. "There's few of those around."

Marlene Canter said that all the student teachers from Long Beach State, Fullerton State and UC Irvine that she supervised while teaching at her school "had no experience in how to deal with behavior problems."

Many school administrators allow teachers to believe that it's their fault if they can't control their classrooms, Lee Canter said.

SOME OFFER virtually no support for teachers who ask for help. They don't know how to deal with behavior problems themselves. That's one reason Canter urges teachers to assert themselves with school officials, too.

"Most teachers don't ask for help. Or when they do, they say something like, 'I'm sorry to bother you, but I have this problem and I don't know what to do.' They should be able to say, 'I've done everything I can do with this kid and I want him out of my classroom so I can teach reading the rest of the day.'"

"Teachers aren't treated like human beings," he said. "If you or I were around disruptive kids in any other social situation, we'd probably either whomp them or throw them out of the room, but the teacher is expected to put up with them."

CANTER said that the basic message he tries to get across to teachers is that "before you care about those kids, you've got to care about you."

"A teacher has to say: 'I don't care whether kids are called disadvantaged, disturbed, learning disabled, whatever — they're going to behave in my classroom. I'm not going to violate their rights, but I will not allow kids to act crazy in my classroom. I care too much about me as a human being to put up with it, and I've got a responsibility to those kids to make them behave.'"

YOU DO that by being assertive, not by giving in or being hostile, Canter said. The Canters' book gives this example of how a youngster can sidetrack a non-assertive teacher:

Teacher: "Sue, I want you to raise your hand and wait to be called upon before you speak."

Sue: "None of the other children do."

Teacher: "What do you mean, none of the other children do?"

Sue: "Kevin always shouts out."

Teacher: "When?"

Sue: "He did it all morning during our social studies discussion."

Teacher: "I'll take care of Kevin, don't worry."

Sue: "Well, even if I raise my hand you never call on me."

Teacher (getting frustrated): "Yes, I do."

Sue: "You didn't this morning."

Teacher (even more frustrated): "Look, Sue, I don't want to talk about this anymore; you just don't listen to me."

THAT'S THE unassertive teacher. The hostile teacher might yell at Sue. The assertive teacher uses the "broken record technique" — a common tool in assertiveness training — to cope with students like Sue.

Teacher: "Sue, I want you to raise your hand and wait to be called upon before you speak."

Sue: "None of the other children do."

Teacher: "That's not the point, I want you to raise your hand."

Sue: "You never call on me."

Teacher: "That's not the point, I want you to raise your hand."

Sue: "OK, I will."

Icebreaker crew gets high commendation

"Later in the week, crew from the ship came forward with sleeves rolled up and shovels at the-ready to help dig out homes in Stokes Valley."

"Earlier this week the helicopter was in action again searching for a missing yachtsman in the Cook Strait. Unhappily the search was not successful but the Burton Island's captain (Fournier) made it clear whenever a life was in danger, his men and their equipment were at the-ready. 'A life is a life, no matter what nationality,' he said.

"We've been happy to act as hosts to the Burton Island. In spite of the weather we hope they take away happy memories of our city and they're welcome back any time they want to come," the editorial concluded.

In addition to aiding flood victims, the Burton Island's personnel staged a gift-giving visit from the ship's "Father Christmas" to the Wellington Home of Compassion, a home for deaf, blind, and crippled children.

Noting the Burton Island's activities during its stay in New Zealand, the American Embassy sent a message to the American Office of Secretary of State which ended with this comment:

"Burton Island has directly touched and boosted the morale of hundreds of Wellingtonians and engendered an additional, large measure of goodwill toward the U.S. throughout New Zealand."

Adm. Wagner in his message to the Burton Island's crew ended it with the comment appreciated by all service personnel who have ever received a similar one. He said:

"Your attitude and devotion to duty during the humanitarian response were in the highest traditions of the U.S. Coast Guard."

YOUR HOROSCOPE by JEANE DIXON

Forecast for Monday

YOUR BIRTHDAY TODAY: This year marks a departure from life as you live it. You're off in search of perfection, expect to find it outside yourself. Experience finally makes you realize the best manifestation will be in self-discovery. Relationships take a welcome turn, quietly become more meaningful. Today's natives are skilled visionaries, stir uneven responses to their missionarying or promotional proposals. Those born this year continue the gift of strong mental agility, smooth storytelling ability.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): In a strong flurry of activity, your new career and business year finally begins. New rules take effect. Evening involves emotional commitment.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Remember! this is both a favorable time of year and period of your life. Be sure what you agree to is what you really want to support in future.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): You make great progress by a direct approach. Set evening plans early for all concerned. You must make a delicate decision, stick with it later.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Initiative is out of your hands momentarily. No harm done if you mark time. Some people aren't clear on what you said or did or why: explain.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Take advantage of passing opportunity, but be sure the move won't change conditions at your base of operations, cause inconvenience at home.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Anything you do brings you more into public view, so look your best and speak up. Allow room for explanations; offer a variety of proposals.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Major purchases, drastic financial revisions aren't favored. Decide on some benefit you can have for asking, another that you can develop.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): You have many choices before you and you attract stronger reactions from both partners and competitors. Give it careful thought before you move.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Expansion of ongoing projects depends on completing previous work. Group effort is the easy answer. Evening is smoother; share amusements.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Welcome, don't resist changes. Entry into new jobs is auspicious, likewise the start of improvement plans. Tonight elicits mutual confidences.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): To break with tradition is within reach. Know what you are discarding before you call your shot. Minor incidents present a shift in direction.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Changing your mind about current issues is normal. Avert waste and confusion by concentrating on specifics. Share amusements tonight, have fun!

Driers, washing machines join refrigerators as discard hazards

A new law requires that large appliances such as driers and washing machines must, like refrigerators, be discarded only in a fashion that will keep youngsters from getting trapped inside.

Each such abandoned or discarded appliance having a capacity of 1½ cubic feet or more must now have the door, hinges or latch removed to prevent latching or locking the door.

Sgt. Richard Anderson, of the Crime Prevention Unit at the Lakewood sheriff's station, said the new requirements are in an amended version of State Penal Code Section 402 (b), which took effect Saturday.

Anderson noted that last September, 2-year-old Jamie Pinedo and his 6-year-old sister Blandina suffocated in a refrigerator in Artesia.

"The law itself will not save lives," Anderson said. "Only a concerned community seeing to it that appliances are discarded according to the law can prevent further needless tragedies."

Capt. Rick Merrick said the unit will inspect upon request any appliance for compliance with the law.

Six students honored

Six Los Alamitos High School students will visit the State Legislature this month as a reward for winning top honors as a team in the recent ninth annual Orange County Academic Decathlon.

The school will also receive a trophy for display certifying that students Douglas Cramer, Diane Deason, Julie Giese, Dave Golonski, Don Peoples and Martha Thompson scored highest in the unique scholastic competition.

Their coach, Alcene Holzman, will accompany them to Sacramento when they are guests of the Legislature.

Cramer was top individual scorer at the decathlon and won a $250 scholarship. Prize money also was awarded to Richard Hoke of Orange High and Mike Cummings of La Quinta High, winners in their scholastic classes.

First woman ordained as Episcopalian priest

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Jacqueline Means, a 40-year-old mother of four and wife of a truck driver, Saturday became the first woman formally ordained as a priest in the Episcopal Church.

The 90-minute ordination ceremony at the inner city All Saints Church was the first for a woman since the Episcopal hierarchy met in Minneapolis last September and approved the ordination of women.

The decision ended a male-dominated period in Episcopal history that dated back 200 years and opened a new era in which more women are expected to enter the priesthood in the 2.8 million-member denomination, which combines both Catholic and Protestant elements.

The Rt. Rev. Donald J. Davis, bishop of the Erie, Pa., diocese, placed his hands on the Rev. Mrs. Means' head as she kneeled before him for ordination.

"Therefore, Oh Father, through Jesus Christ Your Son, give your Holy Spirit to Jacqueline, fill her with grace and power and make her a priest of Your Church," the bishop intoned. Then he presented the newly ordained priest a Bible and embraced her.

Earlier in the ceremony, the bishop asked if any spectators "know any impediment or crime because of which we should not proceed."

Robert M. Strippy, 42, who said he represents the 40,000-member American Church Union and the 541,000-member Coalition of Concerned Churchmen, walked to the front of the church and said:

"Because it is not possible for truth to be conjoined with error, we confess with sorrow that we cannot continue in communion with any national church, province, diocese, or parish where this and similar acts are recognized."

Then Daniel T. Strecker of Dayton, Ky., who said he represented only himself, said he wished to protest the ordination.

Bishop Davis acknowledged the two men, saying, "We recognize and are grieved by the separation that is between us" but "the love of Christ" is a shared commitment. He then went on with the ceremony.

Strecker and Strippy left the church with several other spectators and joined about 25 persons who marched peacefully back and forth in front of the red-brick building as the ceremony continued inside.

JACQUELINE MEANS
"Women More Sensitive"

The Rev. Mrs. Means, a licensed practical nurse who serves as a chaplain at the Indiana Women's Prison, is a former Roman Catholic. She attended Catholic Seminary Foundation in 1974 and completed an 11-week clinical pastoral education program earlier this year.

She became Indiana's first woman Episcopal deacon 2½ years ago.

Her ordination is a major victory in a long battle in the Episcopal Church, which until recently refused even to seat women at its general conventions.

Starting in 1974, when a group of women were ordained in an unauthorized mass ceremony in Philadelphia, 15 women were ordained but not recognized as priests by the church.

AFTER the church vote in September, Episcopal bishops agreed to "regularize" the ordinations of the women with public ceremonies affirming their priesthood, but no such ceremonies have been set.

The Rev. John Eastwood Jr., rector of All Saints, said two female members of the vestry have resigned over the ordination issue and others have threatened to follow suit.

"They really disagree with the idea that women will be ordained as priests," the Rev. Mr. Eastwood said. "They feel the church has kind of abandoned the primary teachings it has held for a long time."

Recruiting offices filled

Rush set off by deadline on GI Bill benefits

Associated Press

Spurred on by a New Year's Day deadline that meant a reduction in future GI Bill benefits, volunteers crowded local recruiting offices around the country to sign up for military service.

Some recruiting offices reported that the enlistment buildup began last month, but almost all those surveyed at random agreed that the real flood in applications came in the last week.

About 500 enlistees a day, for example, flooded the Armed Forces entrance and examination center in Los Angeles, a sharp increase over the 70 to 100 volunteers who signed up in the last week of 1975, center officials said.

OTHER recruiting offices said they processed about twice as many enlistees in the last week of December as they normally did.

In Detroit, Maj. Robert Joles, executive officer of the Army's Recruiting Center said, "We processed about 80 boys Friday, compared with our average 35 a day."

Army recruiter Sgt. William Calliham in Columbia, S.C., said of the last week's rush: "They were beating the doors down. It's like Christmas shopping. They waited until the last minute." Calliham said his station signed up 88 persons in November and December, an increase of one-third over last year's total of 60 enlistees accepted.

A Pentagon spokesman said there were no figures available on how many enlistees joined the services in the last week.

Friday was the last day enlistees could qualify for full GI Bill education benefits. Beginning Saturday, new enlistees have to contribute some of their service pay toward a GI Bill education fund.

Under the new GI Bill, those enlisting in the military service will have to pay $50 to $75 monthly, up to a maximum of $2,700, to receive educational aid.

Another inducement to enlist in the armed forces was a delayed entry program, under which volunteers could enlist by the end of 1976 and get current full GI education benefits as long as they enter service before the end of 1977.

The Army, the largest service, says it has about 30,000 of these delayed entry enlistees signed up.

Military recruiting offices in Cincinnati and Minneapolis stayed open Friday, a holiday for federal employes, to keep up with the applications. In Reno, Nev., Seattle, Oklahoma City, among others, the recruiting staffs worked upwards of 12-hour days during the week.

Driers, washing machines join refrigerators as discard hazards

A new law requires that large appliances such as driers and washing machines must, like refrigerators, be discarded only in a fashion that will keep youngsters from getting trapped inside.

Each such abandoned or discarded appliance having a capacity of 1⅛ cubic feet or more must now have the door, hinges or latch removed to prevent latching or locking the door.

Sgt. Richard Anderson, of the Crime Prevention Unit at the Lakewood sheriff's station, said the new requirements are in an amended version of State Penal Code Section 402 (b), which took effect Saturday.

Anderson noted that last September, 2-year-old Jamie Pinedo and his 6-year-old sister Blandina suffocated in a refrigerator in Artesia.

"The law itself will not save lives," Anderson said. "Only a concerned community seeing to it that appliances are discarded according to the law can prevent further needless tragedies."

Capt. Rick Merrick said the unit will inspect upon request any appliance for compliance with the law.

Six students honored

Six Los Alamitos High School students will visit the State Legislature this month as a reward for winning top honors as a team in the recent ninth annual Orange County Academic Decathlon.

The school will also receive a trophy for display certifying that students Douglas Cramer, Diane Deason, Julie Giese, Dave Golonski, Don Peoples and Martha Thompson scored highest in the unique scholastic competition.

Their coach, Alcene Holzman, will accompany them to Sacramento when they are guests of the Legislature.

Cramer was top individual scorer at the decathlon and won a $250 scholarship. Prize money also was awarded to Richard Hoke of Orange High and Mike Cummings of La Quinta High, winners in their scholastic classes.

First woman ordained as Episcopalian priest

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Jacqueline Means, a 40-year-old mother of four and wife of a truck driver, Saturday became the first woman formally ordained as a priest in the Episcopal Church.

The 90-minute ordination ceremony at the inner city All Saints Church was the first for a woman since the Episcopal hierarchy met in Minneapolis last September and approved the ordination of women.

The decision ended a male-dominated period in Episcopal history that dated back 200 years and opened a new era in which more women are expected to enter the priesthood in the 2.8 million-member denomination, which combines both Catholic and Protestant elements.

The Rt. Rev. Donald J. Davis, bishop of the Erie, Pa., diocese, placed his hands on the Rev. Mrs. Means' head as she kneeled before him for ordination.

"Therefore, Oh Father, through Jesus Christ Your Son, give your Holy Spirit to Jacqueline, fill her with grace and power and make her a priest of Your Church," the bishop intoned. Then he presented the newly ordained priest a Bible and embraced her.

Earlier in the ceremony, the bishop asked if any spectators "know any impediment or crime because of which we should not proceed."

Robert M. Strippy, 42, who said he represents the 40,000-member American Church Union and the 541,000-member Coalition of Concerned Churchmen, walked to the front of the church and said:

"Because it is not possible for truth to be conjoined with error, we confess with sorrow that we cannot continue in communion with any national church, province, diocese, or parish where this and similar acts are recognized."

Then Daniel T. Strecker of Dayton, Ky., who said he represented only himself, said he wished to protest the ordination.

Bishop Davis acknowledged the two men, saying, "We recognize and are grieved by the separation that is between us" but "the love of Christ" is a shared commitment. He then went on with the ceremony.

Strecker and Strippy left the church with several other spectators and joined about 25 persons who marched peacefully back and forth in front of the red-brick building as the ceremony continued inside.

JACQUELINE MEANS
"Women More Sensitive"

The Rev. Mrs. Means, a licensed practical nurse who serves as a chaplain at the Indiana Women's Prison, is a former Roman Catholic. She attended Catholic Seminary Foundation in 1974 and completed an 11-week clinical pastoral education program earlier this year.

She became Indiana's first woman Episcopal deacon 2½ years ago.

Her ordination is a major victory in a long battle in the Episcopal Church, which until recently refused even to seat women at its general conventions.

Starting in 1974, when a group of women were ordained in an unauthorized mass ceremony in Philadelphia, 15 women were ordained but not recognized as priests by the church.

AFTER the church vote in September, Episcopal bishops agreed to "regularize" the ordinations of the women with public ceremonies affirming their priesthood, but no such ceremonies have been set.

The Rev. John Eastwood Jr., rector of All Saints, said two female members of the vestry have resigned over the ordination issue and others have threatened to follow suit.

"They really disagree with the idea that women will be ordained as priests," the Rev. Mr. Eastwood said. "They feel the church has kind of abandoned the primary teachings it has held for a long time."

Recruiting offices filled

Rush set off by deadline on GI Bill benefits

Associated Press

Spurred on by a New Year's Day deadline that meant a reduction in future GI Bill benefits, volunteers crowded local recruiting offices around the country to sign up for military service.

Some recruiting offices reported that the enlistment buildup began last month, but almost all those surveyed at random agreed that the real flood in applications came in the last week.

About 500 enlistees a day, for example, flooded the Armed Forces entrance and examination center in Los Angeles, a sharp increase over the 70 to 100 volunteers who signed up in the last week of 1975, center officials said.

OTHER recruiting offices said they processed about twice as many enlistees in the last week of December as they normally did.

In Detroit, Maj. Robert Joles, executive officer of the Army's Recruiting Center said, "We processed about 80 boys Friday, compared with our average 35 a day."

Army recruiter Sgt. William Calliham in Columbia, S.C., said of the last week's rush: "They were beating the doors down. It's like Christmas shopping. They waited until the last minute." Calliham said his station signed up 88 persons in November and December, an increase of one-third over last year's total of 60 enlistees accepted.

A Pentagon spokesman said there were no figures available on how many enlistees joined the services in the last week.

Friday was the last day enlistees could qualify for full GI Bill education benefits. Beginning Saturday, new enlistees have to contribute some of their service pay toward a GI Bill education fund.

Under the new GI Bill, those enlisting in the military service will have to pay $50 to $75 monthly, up to a maximum of $2,700, to receive educational aid.

Another inducement to enlist in the armed forces was a delayed entry program, under which volunteers could enlist by the end of 1976 and get current full GI education benefits as long as they enter service before the end of 1977.

The Army, the largest service, says it has about 30,000 of these delayed entry enlistees signed up.

Military recruiting offices in Cincinnati and Minneapolis stayed open Friday, a holiday for federal employes, to keep up with the applications. In Reno, Nev., Seattle, Oklahoma City, among others, the recruiting staffs worked upwards of 12-hour days during the week.

Secret Witness case summaries and rewards

The Independent, Press-Telegram's Secret Witness program has resulted in the arrest of 69 criminal suspects and fugitives from justice since the program was inaugurated on June 10, 1972, with rewards totaling $48,000 paid or committed on conviction of suspects waiting trial. Additional reward money available for informants is specified in the case list below, one of the selected and varying summaries of Secret Witness cases printed in the Independent and Press Telegram each Sunday and Thursday.

Cases are dropped from the summaries from time to time, but rewards will remain in effect for these until such cases have been closed by police or until notification in print that reward offers have been withdrawn.

Rewards also will be paid for information leading to the arrest and conviction of suspects in any other major criminal cases, whether covered in these summaries or not, and for the apprehension of fugitives from justice. These rewards will vary in amount, depending on the seriousness of the offense.

To ensure eligibility for Secret Witness rewards, informants are required to channel all information DIRECTLY through Secret Witness — that is, to notify Secret Witness FIRST — either by calling the special Secret Witness telephone number or by writing to the I,P-T Secret Witness editor.

In cases in which outside organizations or individuals pledge an additional reward to that guaranteed by Secret Witness, the Independent, Press-Telegram assumes responsibility for payment only of that amount guaranteed by Secret Witness.

Today's summaries follow:

— A $2,000 reward is offered for information leading to the arrest and murder conviction of the killer of Jack Adamson, 49-year-old seaman beaten to death with a tire iron during a street robbery on Anaheim Street near Flint Avenue in Wilmington at 2:30 a.m. on Dec. 17, 1976.

— A $1,000 reward will be paid for information leading to the arrest and kidnap-robbery conviction, or $2,000 for the arrest and murder conviction, of persons responsible for the disappearance of Wilmington camper manufacturer Glenn Doughty, apparent victim of a robbery and kidnaping. Police checking Doughty's Fleet Aire agency at 1321 Alameda St. on Nov. 3, 1976, found the doors open and the safe standing open. Doughty's car, a 1976 Buick Regal with landau top, license 927-RCV, was missing.

— A $2,000 reward will be paid for information leading to the arrest and murder conviction of the killer of Donald Lynch, 69-year-old owner of Don's Turf Motel at 4732 Katella Ave., Los Alamitos, shot to death during a holdup at the motel at 11:05 p.m. on July 20, 1976.

— A $2,000 reward is offered for information leading to the arrest and murder conviction of the purse thief who attacked and knocked down Ruth Tournat, 78, of Long Beach, as she was walking on First Street at Atlantic Avenue at 7:20 p.m. May 14, 1976, causing injuries that resulted in her death on June 1, 1976.

— A $2,000 reward will be paid for information leading to the arrest and murder conviction of the killer of Michael Lee Edmonds, 23, of Long Beach, found stabbed to death in Leland Park, on Gaffey Street south of Battery Street in San Pedro, on the morning of May 5, 1976.

— A $2,000 reward is offered for information leading to the arrest and murder conviction of the killer of 56-year-old Kermit Euland King, of Westminster, who was found stabbed to death with his pockets turned inside out in an alley behind the 1400 block on Walnut Avenue in Long Beach at 7:30 p.m. on April 12, 1976.

— A $2,000 reward is offered for information leading to the arrest and murder conviction of the slayer of 23-year-old John Anthony Whitehurst, of Lynwood, who was found lying shot to death beside his car parked in a driveway of the 1600 block of Stoneacre Drive in Compton on the night of Feb. 23, 1976.

— A $2,000 reward will be paid for information leading to the arrest and murder conviction of the killer of 49-year-old deaf mute Kenneth Lawrence Willis, found stabbed to death in his Long Beach duplex at 6042 Orange Ave. on Dec. 30, 1975.

—A $2,000 reward is offered for information leading to the arrest and murder conviction of the killer of 59-year-old David E. Smith, of Downey, shot to death during a holdup at Lucy's Restaurant, 5096 Long Beach Blvd., shortly before 2 a.m. on Nov. 24, 1975.

—A $500 reward will be paid for information leading to the arrest of Douglas Lee Thompson, 23-year-old fugitive from a murder warrant in connection with the holdup slaying of David W. Arduette in his television repair shop at 6465 Long Beach Blvd. on Dec. 30, 1973, with an additional reward of $1,500 to be paid when and if Thompson is convicted of the murder.

How you can be a Secret Witness

Secret Witness seeks information from the public leading to the capture of fugitives and the arrest and conviction of criminals.

For this purpose a guaranteed fund of $100,000 has been established by the Independent, Press-Telegram to be used for rewards of varying amounts.

Identities of informants will be kept secret.

You will be paid a reward if the information you give Secret Witness results in the arrest and conviction of a criminal or the capture of a fugitive in cases publicized in this column. Rewards also will be paid for information given to Secret Witness resulting in arrests and convictions, or the capture of fugitives, in cases not published in Secret Witness.

To contact Secret Witness, telephone 436-2526 from 8 a.m. to midnight on weekdays, or from 3 p.m. to 11 p.m. on Saturday and Sunday. Do NOT give us your name. Or write to: Secret Witness, Independent, Press-Telegram, 604 Pine Ave., Long Beach, Calif. 90844.

Officials say tough drug laws have failed

New York Times Service

NEW YORK — A survey of 100 New York City judges and rehabilitation specialists has found that most believe that the state's current tough narcotics laws have failed to deter illegal drug use in the city.

More than half the officials said the laws, which carry sentences of up to life in prison, have "contributed to a worsening of the situation" by introducing juveniles into drug trafficking. Youngsters under the age of 18 are immune from the harsher prison provisions and are known to be used as couriers by narcotics dealers.

Jerome Hornblass, commissioner of the city's Addiction Services Agency, in releasing the findings Friday, proposed that the legislature "consider decriminalization" or the dropping of criminal charges against addicts who are arrested for possession of small amounts of narcotics.

The study, conducted by Hornblass' agency, showed that a majority of the officials supported decriminalization of the possession of small amounts of heroin. Addicts now arrested for possession of heroin can be prosecuted on felony charges, which could bring life sentences or a prison term followed by a lifetime under parole supervision.

In the survey, most judges said they would make possession of small quantities of heroin a "violation," subject to fines rather than prison terms.

There was, however, no general agreement on what constituted "a small amount." Heroin is believed to be the most widely used illegal narcotic in the city.

According to Hornblass, those surveyed overwhelmingly rejected legalization of heroin, heroin maintenance programs or harsher criminal penalties than are now in effect.

Hornblass said 300 judges and rehabilitation specialists had been sent questionnaires last November on the effectiveness of the drug laws. More than 80 judges and 20 specialists have replied so far. Hornblass said statisticians found the results "a valid indication of the widespread views of these people."

"This marks the first major survey in the United States that finds judges and drug treatment specialists expressing a common desire to de-emphasize the use of court and law-enforcement agencies to deal with the drug problem and begin treating addiction as an emotional and physical problem, rather than as a crime," Hornblass asserted.

A series of "get-tough" narcotics laws were enacted in 1973 during the administration of former Gov. Nelson A. Rockefeller. The statutes, commonly known as "the Rockefeller laws," also restricted the use of plea bargaining — allowing a defendant to plea guilty to a reduced charge and thereby get a lighter sentence.

Hornblass said the laws had been approved "in a period of hysteria over the rising heroin epidemic" and "are not working."

"The survey shows," Hornblass said, "that this emphasis on prison sentences for possessors of small amounts of heroin brings them into contact with hard-core criminals and further alienates them from society."

Those who replied to the survey endorsed heavy sentences for narcotics sellers. But they said emphasis should be on "the importer and large-scale dealer rather than the small-time user-pusher who sells to support his habit."

Lost sisters found in L.A.

SALEM, Ore. (AP) — Two mentally retarded sisters who failed to arrive by bus in Coos Bay Thursday for a holiday visit in nearby Powers were found unharmed early Saturday in a Los Angeles bus station.

Carla Rae Whitman, 24, and her sister, Christy, 26, are both residents of Fairview Hospital in Salem. They left Fairview Thursday for Coos Bay, where they were to be met by their mother.

Through a mixup, the tickets they were given were for a round trip to Roseburg only, rather than to Coos Bay and they apparently became confused. No one Saturday could say how the two got to Los Angeles.

An employe at the Greyhound Bus station in Los Angeles called Fairview early Saturday morning to say the sisters were there. The women spent the night in the University of Southern California-Los Angeles County Medical Center Psychiatric Hospital.

Dr. David Foos at the hospital said the sisters would probably return to Oregon Monday.

Thinking about maximizing your investment earnings in '77?

When it's this easy to earn 10% to 12%* or more why aren't you investing in trust deeds?

More and more people are, you know.

In just the last two years, the number of persons investing in trust deed loans arranged by Union Home Loans has increased by 57%. That's a lot of people.

Do you have to be rich?

No. Most of our investors are family people of modest means. They earn average incomes. They're conservative. They save.

But savings accounts that pay 5%—6%—even 7¾% are just no match for an investment that returns 10% to 12%* or more on invested funds. If you have $10,000 now earning 5¼%, you might very well be earning $500 to $650 more every year. Even 7½% may cost you $200 to $400 annually.

What's the answer?

The answer is trust deed investments in hard money equity loans. Generally, it's the same kind of investment banks look for — savings and loans look for — corporate and family trusts look for.

Here's how you may earn 10% to 12%* or more

You become a lender without most of the lender's usual headaches. For example: A homeowner comes to Union Home Loans to arrange a loan. He has a house and lot worth $40,000. He still owes $20,000 on it. That means he has $20,000 equity — cash value — in that property. In such cases, we'd probably arrange a loan for up to $10,000. And that loan represents an investment opportunity for you. (Loans vary from $1,000 to $100,000 depending upon property and needs of the borrower.)

We arrange a loan secured by a trust deed on the property. The trust deed is recorded in your name. You hold the trust deed. We arrange to collect the monthly payments and issue a check to you. You earn 10% on your invested funds. We arrange all the paperwork and the details. You get monthly statements showing the balance due and the amount paid to principal and interest.

What's the catch?

There is none. In the more than 25 years we've been in business, not one single investor has ever lost a penny of principal or accrued interest on a loan arranged by Union Home Loans.

Here's an investment opportunity that may pay you a monthly income — a return of 10% to 12%* or more. Here's an investment you can assign — borrow against in case of a cash need.

Do some people know something you should know?

Why not get all the information? We'll send you a readable information package, if you'll send us the coupon below. Or for faster action, call (714) 848-2225 or (714) 638-9700.

*When a loan pays off before maturity, your yield increases because you receive a bonus of up to 4 months interest (computed on 80% of the unpaid balance).

Secret Witness case summaries and rewards

The Independent, Press-Telegram's Secret Witness program has resulted in the arrest of 69 criminal suspects and fugitives from justice since the program was inaugurated on June 10, 1972, with rewards totaling $48,000 paid or committed on conviction of suspects waiting trial. Additional reward money available for informants is specified in the case list below, one of the selected and varying summaries of Secret Witness cases printed in the Independent and Press Telegram each Sunday and Thursday.

Cases are dropped from the summaries from time to time, but rewards will remain in effect for these until such cases have been closed by police or until notification in print that reward offers have been withdrawn.

Rewards also will be paid for information leading to the arrest and conviction of suspects in any other major criminal cases, whether covered in these summaries or not, and for the apprehension of fugitives from justice. These rewards will vary in amount, depending on the seriousness of the offense.

To ensure eligibility for Secret Witness rewards, informants are required to channel all information DIRECTLY through Secret Witness — that is, to notify Secret Witness FIRST — either by calling the special Secret Witness telephone number or by writing to the I,P-T Secret Witness editor.

In cases in which outside organizations or individuals pledge an additional reward to that guaranteed by Secret Witness, the Independent, Press-Telegram assumes responsibility for payment only of that amount guaranteed by Secret Witness.

Today's summaries follow:

— A $2,000 reward is offered for information leading to the arrest and murder conviction of the killer of Jack Adamson, 49-year-old seaman beaten to death with a tire iron during a street robbery on Anaheim Street near Flint Avenue in Wilmington at 2:30 a.m. on Dec. 17, 1976.

— A $1,000 reward will be paid for information leading to the arrest and kidnap-robbery conviction, or $2,000 for the arrest and murder conviction, of persons responsible for the disappearance of Wilmington camper manufacturer Glenn Doughty, apparent victim of a robbery and kidnaping. Police checking Doughty's Fleet Aire agency at 1321 Alameda St. on Nov. 3, 1976, found the doors open and the safe standing open. Doughty's car, a 1976 Buick Regal with landau top, license 927-RCV, was missing.

— A $2,000 reward will be paid for information leading to the arrest and murder conviction of the killer of Donald Lynch, 69-year-old owner of Don's Turf Motel at 4732 Katella Ave., Los Alamitos, shot to death during a holdup at the motel at 11:05 p.m. on July 20, 1976.

— A $2,000 reward is offered for information leading to the arrest and murder conviction of the purse thief who attacked and knocked down Ruth Tournat, 78, of Long Beach, as she was walking on First Street at Atlantic Avenue at 7:20 p.m. May 14, 1976, causing injuries that resulted in her death on June 1, 1976.

— A $2,000 reward will be paid for information leading to the arrest and murder conviction of the killer of Michael Lee Edmonds, 23, of Long Beach, found stabbed to death in Leland Park, on Gaffey Street south of Battery Street in San Pedro, on the morning of May 5, 1976.

— A $2,000 reward is offered for information leading to the arrest and murder conviction of the killer of 56-year-old Kermit Euland King, of Westminster, who was found stabbed to death with his pockets turned inside out in an alley behind the 1400 block on Walnut Avenue in Long Beach at 7:30 p.m. on April 12, 1976.

— A $2,000 reward is offered for information leading to the arrest and murder conviction of the slayer of 23-year-old John Anthony Whitehurst, of Lynwood, who was found lying shot to death beside his car parked in a driveway of the 1600 block of Stoneacre Drive in Compton on the night of Feb. 23, 1976.

— A $2,000 reward will be paid for information leading to the arrest and murder conviction of the killer of 49-year-old deaf mute Kenneth Lawrence Willis, found stabbed to death in his Long Beach duplex at 6042 Orange Ave. on Dec. 30, 1975.

—A $2,000 reward is offered for information leading to the arrest and murder conviction of the killer of 59-year-old David E. Smith, of Downey, shot to death during a holdup at Lucy's Restaurant, 5096 Long Beach Blvd., shortly before 2 a.m. on Nov. 24, 1975.

—A $500 reward will be paid for information leading to the arrest of Douglas Lee Thompson, 23-year-old fugitive from a murder warrant in connection with the holdup slaying of David W. Arguette in his television repair shop at 6465 Long Beach Blvd. on Dec. 30, 1973, with an additional reward of $1,500 to be paid when and if Thompson is convicted of the murder.

Officials say tough drug laws have failed

New York Times Service

NEW YORK — A survey of 100 New York City judges and rehabilitation specialists has found that most believe that the state's current tough narcotics laws have failed to deter illegal drug use in the city.

More than half the officials said the laws, which carry sentences of up to life in prison, have "contributed to a worsening of the situation" by introducing juveniles into drug trafficking. Youngsters under the age of 18 are immune from the harsher prison provisions and are known to be used as couriers by narcotics dealers.

Jerome Hornblass, commissioner of the city's Addiction Services Agency, in releasing the findings Friday, proposed that the legislature "consider decriminalization" or the dropping of criminal charges against addicts who are arrested for possession of small amounts of narcotics.

The study, conducted by Hornblass' agency, showed that a majority of the officials supported decriminalization of the possession of small amounts of heroin. Addicts now arrested for possession of heroin can be prosecuted on felony charges, which could bring life sentences or a prison term followed by a lifetime under parole supervision.

In the survey, most judges said they would make possession of small quantities of heroin a "violation," subject to fines rather than prison terms.

There was, however, no general agreement on what constituted "a small amount." Heroin is believed to be the most widely used illegal narcotic in the city.

According to Hornblass, those surveyed overwhelmingly rejected legalization of heroin, heroin maintenance programs or harsher criminal penalties than are now in effect.

Hornblass said 300 judges and rehabilitation specialists had been sent questionnaires last November on the effectiveness of the drug laws. More than 80 judges and 20 specialists have replied so far. Hornblass said statisticians found the results "a valid indication of the widespread views of these people."

"This marks the first major survey in the United States that finds judges and drug treatment specialists expressing a common desire to deemphasize the use of court and law-enforcement agencies to deal with the drug problem and begin treating addiction as an emotionsl and physical problem, rather than as a crime," Hornblass asserted.

A series of "get-tough" narcotics laws were enacted in 1973 during the administration of former Gov. Nelson A. Rockefeller. The statutes, commonly known as "the Rockefeller laws," also restricted the use of plea bargaining — allowing a defendant to plea guilty to a reduced charge and thereby get a lighter sentence.

Hornblass said the laws had been approved "in a period of hysteria over the rising heroin epidemic" and "are not working."

"The survey shows," Hornblass said, "that this emphasis on prison sentences for possessors of small amounts of heroin brings them into contact with hard-core criminals and further alienates them from society."

Those who replied to the survey endorsed heavy sentences for narcotics sellers. But they said emphasis should be on "the importer and large-scale dealer rather than the small-time user-pusher who sells to support his habit."

Lost sisters found in L.A.

SALEM, Ore. (AP) — Two mentally retarded sisters who failed to arrive by bus in Coos Bay Thursday for a holiday visit in nearby Powers were found unharmed early Saturday in a Los Angeles bus station.

Carla Rae Whitman, 24, and her sister, Christy, 26, are both residents of Fairview Hospital in Salem. They left Fairview Thursday for Coos Bay, where they were to be met by their mother.

Through a mixup, the tickets they were given were for a round trip to Roseburg only, rather than to Coos Bay and they apparently became confused. No one Saturday could say how the two got to Los Angeles.

An employe at the Greyhound Bus station in Los Angeles called Fairview early Saturday morning to say the sisters were there. The women spent the night in the University of Southern California-Los Angeles County Medical Center Psychiatric Hospital.

Dr. David Foos at the hospital said the sisters would probably return to Oregon Monday.

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — One person was killed and two injured Saturday morning when fire struck a four-story apartment building at Jackson and Laguna streets.

Thinking about maximizing your investment earnings in '77?

When it's this easy to earn 10% to 12%* or more why aren't you investing in trust deeds?

More and more people are, you know.

In just the last two years, the number of persons investing in trust deed loans arranged by Union Home Loans has increased by 57%. That's a lot of people.

Do you have to be rich?

No. Most of our investors are family people of modest means. They earn average incomes. They're conservative. They save.

But savings accounts that pay 5%—6%—even 7¾% are just no match for an investment that returns 10% to 12%* or more on invested funds. If you have $10,000 now earning 5¼%, you might very well be earning $500 to $650 more every year. Even 7½% may cost you $200 to $400 annually.

What's the answer?

The answer is trust deed investments in hard money equity loans. Generally, it's the same kind of investment banks look for — savings and loans look for — corporate and family trusts look for.

Here's how you may earn 10% to 12%* or more

You become a lender without most of the lender's usual headaches. For example: A homeowner comes to Union Home Loans to arrange a loan. He has a house and lot worth $40,000. He still owes $20,000 on it. That means he has $20,000 equity — cash value — in that property. In such cases, we'd probably arrange a loan for up to $10,000. And that loan represents an investment opportunity for you. (Loans vary from $1,000 to $100,000 depending upon property and needs of the borrower.)

We arrange a loan secured by a trust deed on the property. The trust deed is recorded in your name. You hold the trust deed. We arrange to collect the monthly payments and issue a check to you. You earn 10% on your invested funds. We arrange all the paperwork and the details. You get monthly statements showing the balance due and the amount paid to principal and interest.

What's the catch?

There is none. In the more than 25 years we've been in business, not one single investor has ever lost a penny of principal or accrued interest on a loan arranged by Union Home Loans.

Here's an investment opportunity that may pay you a monthly income — a return of 10% to 12%* or more. Here's an investment you can assign — borrow against in case of a cash need.

Do some people know something you should know?

Why not get all the information? We'll send you a readable information package, if you'll send us the coupon below. Or for faster action, call (714) 848-2225 or (714) 638-9700.

*When a loan pays off before maturity, your yield increases because you receive a bonus of up to 4 months interest (computed on 80% of the unpaid balance).

U.S. aids rights-violating nations

Torture, imprisonment alleged in State Dept. report

By W. DALE NELSON
WASHINGTON (AP) — The State Department has told Congress that six nations for which $3.7 billion in military assistance and sales have been earmarked this fiscal year have violated human rights.

The department, in a report released Saturday by the House International Relations Committee, recommended nevertheless that aid to the countries be continued. It did not specify any level of aid.

The report dealt with Argentina, Haiti, Indonesia, Iran, Peru and the Philippines. The committee had asked the department for a report on those countries.

The report was the first made by the department under a law passed last year requiring it to provide the information within 30 days when asked for it by a member of Congress.

A committee spokesman said the committee singled out the six nations because there had been widespread reports of human rights violations in all of them and its subcommittee on international organizations had held hearings on all except Peru.

The report contained little new information and corresponded in large part with testimony given at the hearings.

The department responded to the committee's request by submitting a secret report in November. Rep. Donald Fraser, D—Minn., chairman of the subcommittee and principal author of the new law, asked that the report be declassified. The department agreed.

The report said no other subject has been discussed with the Argentine government by the United States more extensively than the subject of human rights. It said terrorists of the left and right, as well as the Argentine government, had regularly violated rights of life, liberty and security.

It said Argentine security forces occasionally torture political prisoners to obtain information. It recommended continued aid because of the strategic importance of the 1,000-mile Argentine coastline and in order to "preserve a professional relationship with the Argentine armed forces."

The report on Haiti said the current government under Jean-Claude Duvalier had made improvements in the observance of human rights. It said further improvement was needed but that elimination of U.S. "security assistance" would have little impact in this regard. The United States has only a small military training program in Haiti.

Regarding Indonesia, the report said most of the Communists imprisoned in 1965 have been released and the rest may be released after elections this year. It cites Indonesia's strategic location in Southeast Asia and its potential as a leader of the Third World nations.

In its report on Iran, which accounts for $1.2 billion of U.S. military aid and sales for fiscal 1977, the department said there was no "verifiable evidence" of widepsread torture. It said American officials had privately discussed human rights in Iran in the past two years and public discussion would be "self-defeating."

It recommended continued aid because of Iran's closeness to the Soviet border and the Persian Gulf and its oil resources.

The report on Peru said there are unsubstantiated reports of missing persons but that most are released after questioning. It gave only the general reason of "maintenace of constructive relations" as a reason for continuing aid.

The department said aid to the Philippines should be continued in order to preserve U.S. access to military bases there, despite what it said were "reports of torture . . . cruel, inhuman and degrading punishment" for political prisoners.

U.S. quits Atlantic fishery panel

WASHINGTON (AP) — United States withdrawal from the International Convention for Northwest Atlantic Fisheries was confirmed Saturday by Acting Secretary of State Charles W. Robinson.

Robinson added, however, that U.S. management plans for 1977 would take into account the proposals developed by the convention at its December meeting in the Canary Islands.

The United States and Canada served notice Dec. 10 of their intention to withdraw because both have extended their offshore fishing zones to 200 miles.

BOATER'S VIEW OF MARINA PACIFICA CONDOMINIUMS AND SLIPS

All homes in Marina Pacifica taken; resale office to open

All 570 homes at Marina Pacifica, water-oriented condominium development along Alamitos Bay, have been sold, according to Kent Heyl, president of Coast Equities, which is handling sales for the project.

The Long Beach real estate firm has sold 270 units since February, totaling $15,500,000.

Marina Pacifica, a Southern California Financial Corp. (SCFC) development, initially opened in January 1973. SCFC is the real estate subsidiary of City Investing Co.

Coast Equities, which in two years has grown from three to 56 broker-associates, plans to open a second office designed primarily to provide resale and general real estate services to the 570 Marina Pacifica homeowners.

The new offices are to open in February at the $25 million Marina Pacifica Village shopping center, adjacent to the condominium community.

The firm also will continue operating from its original location at 5546 E. Second St.

"When Marina Pacifica first opened, there was a serious marketing dilemma," recalled Prentiss (Chris) Knowlton, president of the Marina Pacifica Home Owners Association.

"Coast Equities took over and using innovative sales techniques changed the entire complexion of this project.

"For instance, they showed Marina Pacifica units by appointment only, which was a departure from the typical condominium sales approach. The real estate firm educated the homeowner, and helped raise the stature of the entire area," Knowlton said.

Inaugural ceremonies will include installation of Don Wiedmann of San Diego as first vice president; E. Thornton Ibbetson of Bellflower as treasurer for a sixth term; and Zan L. Beckstead of Chatsworth as executive vice president and state secretary for an eighth term.

Wiedmann, as first vice president, will succeed to the presidency in 1978, subject to election.

Some 50 statewide committees and subcommittees will meet on Thursday and Friday to organize and plan activities for 1977, reporting at the 406th session of CAR's board of directors Saturday morning.

On Friday there will be a special awards luncheon honoring real estate boards for outstanding support of the California Real Estate Political Action Committee.

The California chapter of the Women's Council of Realtors, National Association of Realtors, will conduct its annual installation dinner at 7:30 p.m. Thursday.

1,400-acre village in Irvine

Plans readied for Northwood

After four years of intensive planning for the newest village in the City of Irvine, preparations are completed for grading for more than 3,000 homesites at The Village of Northwood.

Covering more than 1,400 acres, the new village will consist primarily of single-family detached homes with some patio homes, townhomes, apartments, a mobile home park and a 17-acre commercial center.

Seventeen Southland builders are participating.

PARCELS OF LAND held by various builders range from fewer than 10 acres to more than 238 acres.

Northwood is bounded by Culver Drive, Jeffrey Road, Trabuco Road and Irvine Boulevard. An additional 200 acres stretch north from Irvine Boulevard into the Santiago Hills.

To coordinate the project, the owner-builders formed the North Irvine Association more than four years ago. The association is headed by Chuck Winslow.

HOMESHOPPERS have been scouting the area prior to construction starts, according to Winslow.

Construction schedules are being coordinated by Winslow for the North Irvine Association.

Building firms active in the development of residential homes include Beard Development Co., Butler Housing Corp., Classic Development and Covington Brothers.

Lucas Development Co., Lesny Development Co., Matlow-Kennedy Corp. and The Meister Co. are completing preliminary plans.

Maurer-Elliott Construction Co., J. M. Peters Co., Ponderosa Homes, R & W Development, Sterling Development and Showcase Homes also hold land for construction.

Woodward Companies and Warmington Development complete the list.

Included in the planning is the preservation of the wind rows of towering eucalyptus trees and the redwood trees.

The perimeter of the new village will be bounded by citrus trees.

Neighborhood parks, school, bike trails, pedestrian paths, shopping facilities and a 20-acre community park are in the plans.

5,000 more Woodbridge homes, apartments due

Since the Village of Woodbridge opening in mid-June, when 3,000 prospective homebuyers competed for the first 220 homes, more than 800 homes valued at about $60 million have been sold, according to Kenneth W. Agid, director of residential marketing for The Irvine Co.

"The eight participating builders are selling the homes as fast as they can process and release them for sale," explained Agid. "However, this apparently happy situation has its difficult side.

"Because each of the products sold out its first phase of opening day, and because each has a long waiting list for future phases, many homeshoppers are discouraged, believing that the Village of Woodbridge is completely sold out," Agid said.

"Woodbridge is not sold out," Agid emphasized. "We have more than 5,000 homes and apartments planned for the remainder of Woodbridge, to be completed on a continuing construction program between now and around 1983."

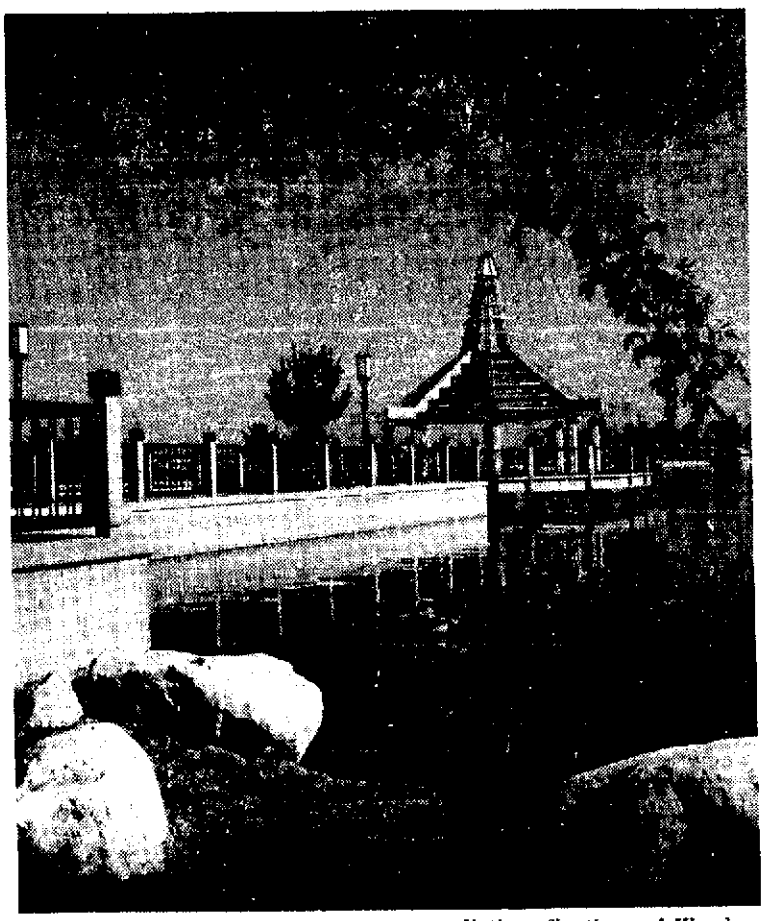

The second quarter, now in the final planning and government processing stages, features more than 1,900 homes and apartments, according to Agid.

Woodbridge, developed by The Irvine Co., occupies a 1700-acre rectangle between the San Diego and Santa Ana freeways off Culver Drive in Irvine.

In addition to a wide variety of housing (currently 40 different floorplans) the village offers recreation amenities that include a 30-acre man-made lake with its own swimming lagoon, beach and cabana clubhouse, neighborhood parks and miles of hiking and biking trils.

Also planned is an "activity corridor" with a full range of shopping, offices, churches, city parks and a high school. Ultimately there will be a complete school system ranging from daycare through high school.

The Village Information Center, at Warner Avenue off Culver Drive, offers additional information on Woodbridge as well as the other Irvine villages, including Turtle Rock in Irvine and Harbor View in Newport Beach.

EARLY-MORNING LIGHT casts surrealistic reflections of Woodbridge's Urban Plaza gazebo into the North Lake. The area is awaiting a restaurant, coffee shop and retail stores.

Bookmobile's servicing of Hills doubled

Anaheim Public Library's bookmobile has doubled its scheduled stopping points in Anaheim Hills and, to date, residents of the 4,200-acre planned community in northeastern Orange County report excellent response to the new schedule.

The mobile library has increased its visits to Anaheim Hills by adding a new stop point at Via Arboles and Paseo Fiesta near the Broadmoor swimming pool. The bookmobile is at that point each Wednesday from 2:45 p.m. until 3:30 p.m.

This is in addition to its regularly scheduled visitation point at Imperial Highway and Santa Ana Canyon Road in the Von's shopping center on Wednesdays from 4:15 p.m. to 5 p.m.

Books for adults and children are available in the bookmobile. Library patrons may place orders for other books, which will be delivered the following week from the Anaheim main library.

Builder meet will explore '77 outlook

The Orange County Chapter of the Building Industry Association will present a panel of three to discuss market indicators for 1977 at the Airporter Inn, Monday, Jan. 10.

Robert W. Duff, chapter program chairman, will moderate the panel. Richard Lewis, president of Lewis Homes, Merrill Butler, president of Butler Housing Corp.; and John Mortonson, president of the San Diego Building Contractors Association will be speakers.

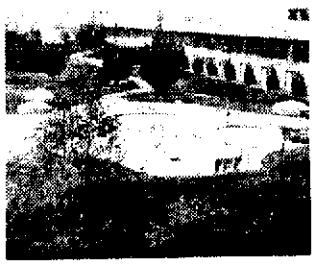

The meeting will begin with a social hour at 6 p.m. followed by the dinner and program at 7. Also attending will be William MacDougall, Orange County planning commissioner.

The meeting is open to the public.

U.S. aids rights-violating nations

Torture, imprisonment alleged in State Dept. report

By W. DALE NELSON
WASHINGTON (AP) — The State Department has told Congress that six nations for which $3.7 billion in military assistance and sales have been earmarked this fiscal year have violated human rights.

The department, in a report released Saturday by the House International Relations Committee, recommended nevertheless that aid to the countries be continued. It did not specify any level of aid.

The report dealt with Argentina, Haiti, Indonesia, Iran, Peru and the Philippines. The committee had asked the department for a report on these countries.

The report was the first made by the department under a law passed last year requiring it to provide the information within 30 days when asked for it by a member of Congress.

A committee spokesman said the committee singled out the six nations because there had been widespread reports of human rights violations in all of them and its subcommittee on international organizations had held hearings on all except Peru.

The report contained little new information and corresponded in large part with testimony given at the hearings.

The department responded to the committee's request by submitting a secret report in November. Rep. Donald Fraser, D—Minn., chairman of the subcommittee and principal author of the new law, asked that the report be declassified. The department agreed.

The report said no other subject has been discussed with the Argentine government by the United States more extensively than the subject of human rights. It said terrorists of the left and right, as well as the Argentine government, had regularly violated rights of life, liberty and security.

It said Argentine security forces occasionally torture political prisoners to obtain information. It recommended continued aid because of the strategic importance of the 1,000-mile Argentine coastline and in order to "preserve a professional relationship with the Argentine armed forces."

The report on Haiti said the current government under Jean-Claude Duvalier had made improvements in the observance of human rights. It said further improvement was needed but that elimination of U.S. "security assistance" would have little impact in this regard. The United States has only a small military training program in Haiti.

Regarding Indonesia, the report said most of the Communists imprisoned in 1965 have been released and the rest may be released after elections this year. It cites Indonesia's strategic location in Southeast Asia and its potential as a leader of the Third World nations.

In its report on Iran, which accounts for $1.2 billion of U.S. military aid and sales for fiscal 1977, the department said there was no "verifiable evidence" of widepsread torture. It said American officials had privately discussed human rights in Iran in the past two years and public discussion would be "self-defeating."

It recommended continued aid because of Iran's closeness to the Soviet border and the Persian Gulf and its oil resources.

The report on Peru said there are unsubstantiated reports of missing persons but that most are released after questioning. It gave only the general reason of "maintenance of constructive relations" as a reason for continuing aid.

The department said aid to the Philippines should be continued in order to preserve U.S. access to military bases there, despite what it said were "reports of torture . . . cruel, inhuman and degrading punishment" for political prisoners.

U.S. quits Atlantic fishery panel

WASHINGTON (AP) — United States withdrawal from the International Convention for Northwest Atlantic Fisheries was confirmed Saturday by Acting Secretary of State Charles W. Robinson.

Robinson added, however, that U.S. management plans for 1977 would take into account the proposals developed by the convention at its December meeting in the Canary Islands.

The United States and Canada served notice Dec. 10 of their intention to withdraw because both have extended their offshore fishing zones to 200 miles.

BOATER'S VIEW OF MARINA PACIFICA CONDOMINIUMS AND SLIPS

All homes in Marina Pacifica taken; resale office to open

All 570 homes at Marina Pacifica, water-oriented condominium development along Alamitos Bay, have been sold, according to Kent Heyl, president of Coast Equities, which is handling sales for the project.

The Long Beach real estate firm has sold 270 units since February, totaling $15,500,000.

Marina Pacifica, a Southern California Financial Corp. (SCFC) development, initially opened in January 1973. SCFC is the real estate subsidiary of City Investing Co.

Coast Equities, which in two years has grown from three to 56 broker-associates, plans to open a second office designed primarily to provide resale and general real estate services to the 570 Marina Pacifica homeowners.

The new offices are to open in February at the $25 million Marina Pacifica Village shopping center, adjacent to the condominium community.

The firm also will continue operating from its original location at 5546 E. Second St.

"When Marina Pacifica first opened, there was a serious marketing dilemma," recalled Prentiss (Chris) Knowlton, president of the Marina Pacifica Home Owners Association.

"Coast Equities took over and using innovative sales techniques changed the entire complexion of this project.

"For instance, they showed Marina Pacifica units by appointment only, which was a departure from the typical condominium sales approach. The real estate firm educated the homeowner, and helped raise the stature of the entire area," Knowlton said.

Wiedmann, as first vice president, will succeed to the presidency in 1978, subject to election.

Some 50 statewide committees and subcommittees will meet on Thursday and Friday to organize and plan activities for 1977, reporting at the 406th session of CAR's board of directors Saturday morning.

On Friday there will be a special awards luncheon honoring real estate boards for outstanding support of the California Real Estate Political Action Committee.

The California chapter of the Women's Council of Realtors, National Association of Realtors, will conduct its annual installation dinner at 7:30 p.m. Thursday.

Environmentalists confront whalers, sealers

By TOM HENNESSY
Knight News Service

SAN FRANCISCO — In March, when the harp seals come south from the Arctic, Al Johnson will take temporary leave from his American Airlines 747 for a confrontation on the forbidding coastal ice off Newfoundland.

Bucking the winds and bitter cold, he and several others will wait for that moment when the first ship crunches through the ice and its crew disembarks to take the prized white fur of the newborn seals.

At 41, pilot Johnson, of Sausalito, is one of about three dozen activists who form the nucleus of the Greenpeace Foundation, a militant environmental group that employs the Quaker concept of "bearing witness" as a means of wrenching public attention to environmental exploitation.

Its Quaker-based philosophy notwithstanding, Greenpeace is not for the timid. "We take risks," concedes Johnson, "but we feel they are worth it."

Indeed they do take risks.

IN THE PAST five years, Greenpeace members have "invaded" American and French nuclear-testing zones, flung themselves between whales and Soviet whaling ships and — in the case of the harp seals — jousted with Norwegian and Canadian sealers.

The group's roots actually trace to 1969, when they were a loose amalgam of conservationists, draft resisters and Quakers. "At first, it was sort of a hippie thing," admits member Matt Middleton of Tucson, Ariz.

Says Johnson, "It became Greenpeace in 1971 in the course of our first voyage against American nuclear testing in Amchitka, Alaska."

Originally a Canadian organization, Greenpeace now is taking on a more international flavor. Within the last year, it has opened a U.S. headquarters in San Francisco, hired an accountant from Fiji and accepted financial support from, among others, French actress Brigitte Bardot.

When a Greenpeace vessel sailed out in pursuit of Soviet whalers last summer, its captain was a Czechoslovakian refugee from a Siberian prison camp.

From 1971 to 1973, Greenpeace's efforts, directed primarily against American and French nuclear testing, bore little success. They did, however, produce an occasional headline.

In 1973, for example, French commandos boarded a Greenpeace ship as it neared the Mururoa Atoll nuclear testing ground in the Pacific. Greenpeace said camera equipment was seized and that one member was beaten to the point of nearly losing an eye.

When France denied the incident, Greenpeace produced embarrassing evidence — a film that had been concealed on the person of a member. The beaten man now has a suit pending against the French government.

"In 1975," recalls Johnson, "we became concerned about the plight of the world's whales. We got an 80-foot halibut seiner from Halifax and went looking for the Russians. After about 60 days at sea, we found them 60 miles off California, in an area called the Mendocino Ridge."

Greenpeacers launched a small rubber boat, maneuvering it between the Russian ship and an intended whale victim. In an instant, a grenade-tipped harpoon aimed at the whale nearly hit the rubber boat instead.

"BECAUSE of the tactic of people being willing to lay their lives on the line, that incident got worldwide attention," Johnson declared. "The Russian whaling fleet didn't come within 1,500 miles of California this year."

Johnson said this illustration of Soviet skittishness may represent Russia's reluctance to tangle with Greenpeace demonstrators in an "international incident."

Bob Cummings, a Greenpeace member from Vancouver, B.C., explains: "We monitor the Russians with radar. We can tell by their speeds whether or not the ships are whaling."

Last March, Greenpeace turned its attention to the annual seal hunt that takes place along a barren Canadian Maritime coastal area known as the Front.

Norwegian and Canadian sealers, like their forebears for the past 150 years, visit the area each March, soon after the pups are born, to club and skin the young seals for their white fur. (The fur's color fades and the pelts lose their market value as the seals grow to maturity.)

The first sealers encountered by 15 Greenpeace members were Norwegians. Johnson, who speaks fluent Norwegian, gives this account:

"There was a live baby seal on the ice, and two sealers were heading for it. I told them, 'If you kill that seal, you'll have to kill me first.' So I threw myself on top of the seal, and the Norwegians sort of backed off. We did manage to talk a few of them into going back to their ships."

For their efforts, Greenpeacers managed little more than to get themselves arrested. They were charged with landing helicopters too close to the seal herd, a violation of Canada's Seal Protection Act.

Months later, Johnson got a small measure of revenge. On a trip to Norway, he encountered the same sealing ship in port and plastered it with pro-seal bumper stickers.

"I told the Norwegians that as long as Norway continues sealing I'd be ashamed of my Norwegian ancestry," says Johnson. "They have to get over this macho-Viking thing about killing the seals."

Greenpeace says its seal confrontation next March will be better planned with, hopefully, far better results. "There are going to be tactics on the ice that you wouldn't believe," predicts Johnson.

Gary Zimmerman, U.S. president of Greenpeace, adds, "We are really hoping to be able to stop the seal killing."

As part of its 1977 strategy, Greenpeace hopes to set up facilities that will enable the group to film the seal kill and dispatch the footage quickly to U.S. and Canadian television stations.

"That's how we'll make people bear witness to it," says Johnson. "Then they can't say they're not responsible. Someday, we're all going to have to answer for what we're doing.

"In about 10 years, for example, there won't be any harp seals at the present rate of killing. They killed 169,000 last year. Only about 200,000 were born, and some of them became prey to polar bears."

Cummings added, "The only way to let people know what is happening is to go out physically and try and stop it."

While Greenpeace claims support from several thousand members, the organization admits that its "front-line troops" are limited to a daring three dozen or so. "We don't believe in martyrdom," says Johnson, "but there are people in Greenpeace who will lay their lives on the line."

Meanwhile Greenpeace has undergone a considerable transformation since its beginning as a "sort of hippie thing."

Says member Middleton: "Now Greenpeace is getting applications from people like doctors. A 56-year-old attorney wants to go out on our next whale campaign."

A relatively recent recruit himself, Middleton adds: "When I first heard about Greenpeace a couple of years ago, it really knocked me out. Everybody was talking about saving the whales. These guys were actually doing it."

For the future, Greenpeace also plans to protest the proposed construction of supertankers to transport the world's oil. The group fears the potential for massive oil spills.

While avoiding details of the supertanker campaign, Johnson promises: "The tanker protest won't be a lot of flag-waving. It will be direct action."

Garage burglars get $600 haul

Long Beach police reported Saturday that burglars who pried open a garage door at the home of Lestean Johnson, 115 E. 68th St., took two power lawnmowers, three bicycles and hoses with a total value of $600.

Environmentalists confront whalers, sealers

By TOM HENNESSY
Knight News Service

SAN FRANCISCO — In March, when the harp seals come south from the Arctic, Al Johnson will take temporary leave from his American Airlines 747 for a confrontation on the forbidding coastal ice off Newfoundland.

Bucking the winds and bitter cold, he and several others will wait for that moment when the first ship crunches through the ice and its crew disembarks to take the prized white fur of the newborn seals.

At 41, pilot Johnson, of Sausalito, is one of about three dozen activists who form the nucleus of the Greenpeace Foundation, a militant environmental group that employs the Quaker concept of "bearing witness" as a means of wrenching public attention to environmental exploitation.

Its Quaker-based philosophy notwithstanding, Greenpeace is not for the timid. "We take risks," concedes Johnson, "but we feel they are worth it."

Indeed they do take risks.

IN THE PAST five years, Greenpeace members have "invaded" American and French nuclear-testing zones, flung themselves between whales and Soviet whaling ships and — in the case of the harp seals — jousted with Norwegian and Canadian sealers.

The group's roots actually trace to 1969, when they were a loose amalgam of conservationists, draft resisters and Quakers. "At first, it was sort of a hippie thing," admits member Matt Middleton of Tucson, Ariz.

Says Johnson, "It became Greenpeace in 1971 in the course of our first voyage against American nuclear testing in Amchitka, Alaska."

Originally a Canadian organization, Greenpeace now is taking on a more international flavor. Within the last year, it has opened a U.S. headquarters in San Francisco, hired an accountant from Fiji and accepted financial support from, among others, French actress Brigitte Bardot.

When a Greenpeace vessel sailed out in pursuit of Soviet whalers last summer, its captain was a Czechoslovakian refugee from a Siberian prison camp.

From 1971 to 1973, Greenpeace's efforts, directed primarily against American and French nuclear testing, bore little success. They did, however, produce an occasional headline.

In 1973, for example, French commandos boarded a Greenpeace ship as it neared the Mururoa Atoll nuclear testing ground in the Pacific. Greenpeace said camera equipment was seized and that one member was beaten to the point of nearly losing an eye.

When France denied the incident, Greenpeace produced embarrassing evidence — a film that had been concealed on the person of a member. The beaten man now has a suit pending against the French government.

Greenpeacers launched a small rubber boat, maneuvering it between the Russian ship and an intended whale victim. In an instant, a grenade-tipped harpoon aimed at the whale nearly hit the rubber boat instead.

"BECAUSE of the tactic of people being willing to lay their lives on the line, that incident got worldwide attention," Johnson declared. "The Russian whaling fleet didn't come within 1,500 miles of California this year."

Johnson said this illustration of Soviet skittishness may represent Russia's reluctance to tangle with Greenpeace demonstrators in an "international incident."

Bob Cummings, a Greenpeace member from Vancouver, B.C., explains: "We monitor the Russians with radar. We can tell by their speeds whether or not the ships are whaling."

NO.1 PITT SILENCES THE DOUBTERS, 27-3

By CHUCK NEWMAN
Knight News Service

NEW ORLEANS — The parade to the dressing room was eerily silent, almost devoid of emotion. Players filed through the humanity that clogged the dressing room doors expressionless.

The tranquility, which belied the moment, was maintained until Johnny Majors got inside. The Pitt coach paused for what seemed an interminable time, then thrust one finger high in the air. Only then was this team — one that has been surrounded by skepticism, encompassed by doubters, derided by critics — sure.

"It was the first time this year he (Majors) even indicated anything about being the best," Pitt quarterback Matt Cavanaugh rejoiced after a convincing 27-3 smothering of 4th-ranked Georgia in the Sugar Bowl at the Superdome Saturday, a result that almost surely will land the Panthers (12-0) the mythical national championship.

The margin and the method must surely have silenced some of the criticism. One of the pre-game doubters, Georgia coach Vince Dooley, made it official. "They (Pitt) proved today they are the best in the country," he said. "They have amazing balance. They are the best defensive team we've seen — I think that is obvious. They are also the best offensive team we've faced."

The cold statistics bear that out. Tony Dorsett completed the greatest career ever compiled by a collegiate running back by gaining 202 yards to break the Sugar Bowl record of 199 set by Eddie Prokop of Georgia Tech in 1944 against Tulsa. The Panthers' defense stymied a team that had averaged more than 30 points a game, allowing it only 135 yards rushing in 40 tries and 46 yards passing.

By halftime the score was 21-0, with Cavanaugh, who barely outpolled Dorsett as the game's most valuable player, befuddling the famed defense of the "Junkyard Dogs." After testing the eight-man Georgia front stacked to stop Dorsett, he riddled the vulnerable Bulldog secondary with passes. He completed throws of 13 and 34 yards in an 80-yard first quarter drive, then used the trailing Dorsett as a decoy on an option play and ducked inside himself to score from six yards out with 9:16 played.

In the second quarter, the Pitt junior — who missed three games this season with a broken leg, shoulder and elbow problems — drove Pitt 74 yards in three plays, completing a 15-yard sideline throw to flanker Willie Taylor and then hitting split end Gordon Jones on a 59-yard scoring play, the Pitt receiver stepping over a defensive back at the Georgia 25 and boogalooing the rest of the way.

With 2:02 until intermission, Cavanaugh sent Dorsett sweeping right to score from 11 yards out to complete a 67-yard drive

Evans proves USC not a one-act show

By LOEL SCHRADER
Staff Writer

He was No. 8 in their programs. . .but was he at last No. 1 in their hearts?

Booed as a bumbler for two years, Vince Evans finally won the acclaim of USC fans Saturday when he rallied the Trojans to a 14-6 Rose Bowl victory over favored Michigan before a crowd of 106,182.

Some people had thought USC was a one-act show.

So, when all-America tailback Ricky Bell went down with a ringing, aching head on his fourth turn with the ball, the Trojans seemed doomed to defeat in their 21st Rose Bowl appearance.

But Evans, who had injured an ankle on Wednesday, completed 14 of 20 passes for 181 yards, scored a touchdown on a nifty fake, and comported himself like a professional as the Pacific-8 registered its seventh win over the Big Ten in eight years.

"It feels so darned good, I can't believe it," said Evans, who joined a select list that includes O.J. Simpson and Jim Plunkett as Player of the Game.

USC COACH John Robinson also was in an ecstatic frame of mind, so much so that he claimed a national championship for the Trojans, despite the fact that No. 1 Pitt had tamed Georgia in the Sugar Bowl, 27-3, to finish the season undefeated.

"You're damned right I do," said Robinson, when asked if he believed the Trojans should be ranked No. 1 in final wire service polls. "I still feel the way I did before the game on that subject. If a club can claim a share of the national championship, it should."

Robinson grinned. "Besides, one poll already has picked us No. 1. It's the USC poll."

Despite support from Michigan coach Bo Schembechler, Robinson is likely to be a lone voice in the wilderness. The Trojans lost their chance for a national championship on Sept. 11, when Missouri blitzed 'em, 46-25.

SCHEMBECHLER said he "would vote USC as No. 1, if I still had a ballot" in the coaches' poll, a position he resigned last season.

"I've seen quick teams and strong teams, but I've never seen a team as strong and quick as USC," said the Wolverine coach. "As far as I'm concerned, they're the No. 1 team in the nation."

The Trojans showed Schembechler a lot after Bell went reeling to the sidelines, never to return, after taking a blow to the side of the head.

Freshman Charles White replaced Bell, and San Fernando Swifty compiled 114 yards in 32 rushing attempts and scored the clinching touchdown on a seven-yard run in the fourth quarter.

Flanker Shelton Diggs, who had been one of the heroes of USC's 18-17 Rose Bowl win over Ohio State two years ago, caught eight passes for 98 yards.

Fullback Mosi Tatupu churned for 60 yards in seven carries, in addition to offering splendid blocking for White.

But perhaps most instrumental in USC's third successive Rose Bowl win over the Wolverines was the defense, which clamped down on all-America Rob Lytle (67 yards in 18 carries) and Russell Davis (39 in 10).

49ers tumble Illinois

By JIM McCORMACK
Staff Writer

Coach Dwight Jones has praised the depth of his Long Beach State basketball team since the season began.

Saturday night, Illinois coach Lou Henson joined in the applause.

"Long Beach's talent is as good as I've seen in a long, long time," Henson said after watching the 49ers topple his weary Illini, 84-70.

"They have at least nine quality players," Henson continued. "When he substitutes, there's no dropoff in talent."

Jones made his first "substitutions" before the game began.

The third-year 49er coach inserted Tony McGee and Michael Wiley into the starting lineup, replacing season-long regulars Larry Hudson and Clarence Ruffen.

"The change was made because of a very temporary problem," Jones said. "They missed practice Thursday so I didn't start them tonight. They'll be in the lineup Thursday against UC Santa Barbara."

Hudson still saw enough action (30 minutes) to impress a Long Beach Arena New Year's night turnout of 4,030.

The 6-6 junior from Jordan High School contributed 15 points to the 49ers' ninth victory in 12 games.

The standout in the triumph, however, was 6-5 Lloyd McMillian, a transfer from Loyola University.

Schembechler gracious in defeat; heaps praise on SC

Bo Schembechler and his Michigan Wolverines are trying hard to make Southern Californians forget Woody Hayes and his Ohio State Buckeyes.

Schembechler's manners after Saturday's 14-6 Rose Bowl loss to USC were impeccable. No photographers were suffering impaired vision and no sportswriters had blistered ears from a barrage of expletives.

When the Michigan coach met the press after the game, and his players departed for waiting buses, nary a tear remained. They had all been shed in the locker room.

In a contest billed as a potential national championship decider, the Wolverines were found wanting at every turn.

"They made the big play offensively and defensively," said Bo, "and we didn't. Most of what we didn't do on offense should be attributed to their defense."

Michigan arrived in Pasadena boasting national leadership in total offense (448.1 yards a game), rushing (362.5) and scoring (38.7 points). Its defense had limited 11 previous opponents to a norm of 114 yards afoot.

The figures against the Trojan defense were 231 total yards, 155 rushing, six points and 200 yards allowed on the ground.

"They shut off our short-yardage situations," said the coach, "and we're not used to that."

Schembechler was lavish in his praise of the Trojans, saying that if he had a vote for the national champion it would go to USC.

"They have a tremendous football team. They have players who are great athletes and great young men and they conducted themselves accordingly. They're the best team I've seen this season."

Bo could find no fault with his own players.

"I make no apologies for the way we played. We have a very young team and these kids gave everything they had. I think we'll be back very soon. We just have to get better."

Houston runs away from Maryland

Three first-period TDs ruin Terps' 15-game win streak

DALLAS (AP) — Sixth-ranked Houston stunned Maryland with three first- period touchdowns on the blazing runs of Dyral Thomas and Alois Blackwell Saturday and then withstood a Terrapin rally to whip the previously unbeaten, fourth-ranked Easterners 30-21 in the 41st Cotton Bowl.

The Cougars, co-champions of the Southwest Conference, thoroughly dominated Maryland and built a 27-7 halftime lead before Terp quarterback Mark Manges set fire to his listless team in the numbing 29-degree cold.

Houston, making its first appearance in the Cotton Bowl, controlled Maryland with incredible ease in a less than six-minute span of the first period as the Atlantic Coast Conference champions' 15-game winning streak was snapped.

PASSING—Houston, Davis 5-8-0, 198 yards. Maryland, Manges 17-32-0, 179.

The Cougars flipped an 11-yard scoring pass to freshman tight end Eric Sievers and Tim Wilson plunged one yard with 8:46 remaining to put the Terps within winning range.

However, Davis completed a crucial third-down pass and Lennard Coplin kicked a 28-yard field goal with 18 seconds to play.

The key play in Houston's final scoring drive that set up Coplin's field goal originated from the Houston 12-yard line on third and six. Davis faded back to pass, dodged a horde of Terp tacklers, and winged a 13-yard completion to Robert Lavergne to keep the vital drive alive.

Blackwell gained 149 yards in 22 carries against a Terp defense which was ranked sixth nationally against the rush. Thomas romped for 104 yards in 14 carries as Houston gained 320 yards on the ground.

Maryland, which was the second-ranked total defensive team in the country, had not allowed a touchdown on the ground in 22 quarters until Houston's first-period blitz.

An estimated crowd of 58,500 watched.

Manges completed 17 of 32 passes for 179 yards as the Terps continuously drove up and down the field. Twice Maryland missed chip- shot field goals and once drove 86 yards to the Houston one-yard line where the Terps had to surrender the ball on downs.

Two big defensive plays by Houston defensive back Mark Mohr put the Cougars in position for two of their lightning first-period scores. Mohr blocked Mike Sochko's punt and recovered a fumble by Manges on plays that earned him the most valuable defensive player of the game award.

Blackwell, a 5-foot-11, 186-pounder from Cureo, Tex., was chosen the most valuable offensive player.

Determined try pays off

Houston's Mark Mohr barrels over Maryland blocker to get hand on punt by Terps' Mike Sochko in first period of Cotton Bowl game Saturday. Block helped set up second Houston score. Wildcats led 21-0 and hung on for 30-21 victory.

Miami climate to Woody's liking, 27-10

Buckeyes rally behind Gerald after Colorado has 10-0 lead

MIAMI (AP) — Woody Hayes, who would not appear for interviews after a bitter Rose Bowl loss a year ago, was a charming winner after his Ohio State team had recorded a 27-10 Orange Bowl victory over Colorado Saturday night.

"I feel better than I did a year ago today," said Hayes, breaking into a big smile before a horde of newsmen outside his team's dressing room.

Hayes kept the media waiting only 15 minutes, a marked contrast to last January when they waited more than one hour to discover he would not discuss a 23-10 loss to UCLA.

Hayes said the turning points of the game were the insertion of Gerald at quarterback for Jim Pacenta and the use of tailback Jeff Logan at fullback.

"The game started turning around for us with Rod Gerald," said Hayes, who replaced Pacenta with his swift sophomore early in the second quarter.

Gerald, who started the first seven games this season for the 9-2-1 Big Ten co-champions, darted 17 yards on his first play.

"Gerald got outside on the first play. He stretched them out like an accordian. It gave them a different problem."

Gerald wound up running 14 times for 81 yards and completed two of six passes for 59 yards.

Hayes had not used Logan as a fullback this year, since Logan gained more than 1,000 yards at tailback. However, he decided to use the 182-pound junior in place of 238-pound Pete Johnson at fullback.

Ron Springs took over Logan's old spot at tailback.

Said Hayes of the strategy: "It made a difference. They (Colorado) weren't ready for that kind of speed. Springs is a good back, but Logan has more experience."

Ohio State, the Big Ten co-champion, had minus-20 yards in offense when the 173-pound Gerald took over with his team trailing 10-0 in the first quarter.

After Gerald's 17-yard run on his first play, Logan ran 36 yards through the middle for a touchdown that started the Buckeyes' comeback and snapped their two-game losing streak in bowl competition.

Gerald closed the Buckeye scoring in the final minute with a four-yard run.

Kicking specialist Tom Skladany booted field goals of 28 and 20 yards and Johnson scored his 58th career touchdown on a three-yard run to account for the remainder of Ohio State's scoring.

The Buckeyes surged into the lead on a 99-yard drive shortly before halftime and dominated play from the second quarter on with a ball-control attack.

Colorado, which jumped to a quick 10-0 lead on Mark Zetterberg's 26-yard field goal and Emery Moorehead's 11-yard scoring catch from Jeff Knapple, got good field position only once in the second half—when it recovered a fumble at the Buckeye 26.

That was erased two plays later when Tom Cousineau intercepted a pass with 11 minutes left in the third quarter, and the Buffaloes (8-4) never threatened again.

The victory snapped a four-game losing streak in bowls for Big Ten teams, and the defeat for Big Eight tri-champion Colorado was the first in four bowls for the Big Eight Conference.

"I'm not much on losses," said Colorado coach Bill Mallory, a former assistant to Hayes at Ohio State. "We didn't play as well as we can."

Mallory cited the kicking game as a major difference, with Ohio State's Skladany booting two field goals, booming kickoffs consistently to the end zone and punting well on the rare occasions when the Buckeyes were forced to kick.

The Buckeyes probably could have turned the game into more of a rout but missed on several scoring opportunities in the second half, taking over five times from near midfield or closer and producing only 10 points.

Senior quarterback Jim Pacenta had trouble getting the Buckeyes untracked despite two long kickoff returns in the opening minutes of the game, 39 yards by Matt Jackson and 49 yards by Logan.

It was a fumble by Pacenta that set up Colorado's first score, the 26-yard field goal by Zetterberg. With Pacenta attempting to pass, Mark Haynes knocked the ball from his hands and Randy Westendorf recovered on the Ohio State 43.

The Buffalo touchdown drive covered 80 yards and featured a 20-yard pass from Knapple to Moorehead and a 40-yard reverse by Billy Waddy.

Ohio State's 99-yard scoring drive came in the final six minutes of the half and turned the game around, giving the Buckeyes a 17-10 halftime advantage.

Tackle Nick Buonamici was credited with blocking Zetterberg's field goal attempt that went out of bounds on the one.

Majors given a Sugary farewell

By then the Panthers were confident they had made a proper decision, testing the highest-ranked team they could face in the post-season. "We could have backed away, taken more money by going somewhere else," Majors said. "But, in spite of what people say, we took a calculated risk and won. If that doesn't prove something, well there's not much we can do about it."

This was before the Rose Bowl had even begun and somebody brought up the statement of Michigan coach Bo Schembechler that the team that won the Rose Bowl should be No. 1. And the charge that Pitt could never beat Michigan or Southern California. "I don't want to start a vendetta," Majors said, getting a bit red. "I've had my butt kicked as a coach in different parts of the country but I don't wear blinders and look only in my own back yard."

All in the winners dressing room agreed. The majority opinion was that the Panthers knew they were better than Georgia early in the game. "We were knocking 10 guys on their rear every play," said tight end Jim Corbett, the team's resident free-spirit. "You do that and have Dorsett running, how are you going to lose?"

Linebacker Arnie Weatherington, who along with linebacker James Cramer continually jammed the Dogs' offense, indicated Georgia was not really a test. "I thought going into the game that there is only one team that can beat us and that is ourselves," he declared.

He got support from all-America middle guard Al Romano. "I knew if everybody did their job, they could never move us."

An indication that Pitt would not take the easy route, play conservatively and hope to back into a national championship came early, during the first TD drive. Pitt came up fourth-and-one at midfield and snubbed a punt although the game was only six minutes old. "There was no decision to make," Cavanaugh said, "only what play we would use. Contrary to public opinion," he said with a smile, "we have confidence in ourselves."

So Cavanaugh followed a furious takeoff by the offensive line for the necessary yardage and the Panthers continued to the goal line.

It was at this point Cavanaugh also doubted the Bulldogs' ability to cope. "Right then I knew we could move on them," he said. "They were not a real hard-hitting team. Notre Dame was more physical."

Majors had come to Pitt in 1973, to a team coming off a 1-10 season and 10 straight sub-.500 campaigns.

He took quick and drastic action, inviting 90 athletes to the school. The results were devastating. In 1973, the Panthers were 6-5 and went to the Fiesta Bowl. In 1974, they got their first television exposure, went 7-4 and their attendance doubled.

Last season, Pitt went 8-4 and played in the Sun Bowl. It was the harbinger of things to come.

All the time, the team was taking on a special character. "There were times," Majors noted, "that you had to lock the door on these guys and throw away the key."

But going into the Sugar Bowl, in the bid for the ultimate reward, a national championship, it was a team with a mind of its own. While the Georgia players adhered to a strict 11 p.m. curfew, the Panthers were unabashedly partying on Bourbon Street to the amazement of establishment coaches and journalists. The curfew, it seemed, was the time you got back to the hotel. "I don't think it was such a big thing," Majors defended. "They showed me at practice they were ready. If they didn't they would have been in their rooms."

Corbett said 2 a.m. was the unofficial curfew. "And I know almost everybody was in," he said. "Because we were all in the hotel pool at that time."

Many of the players dressed quickly to continue their revelry on Bourbon Street. Some expected that they might retire to see the Rose Bowl game on television.

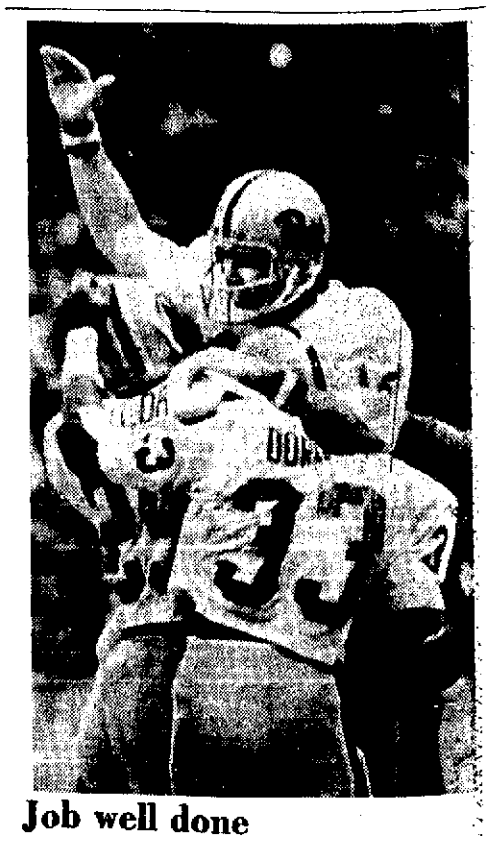

"As far as I'm concerned, that game doesn't have any relevance" Cavanaugh said.

"They can't take it away from us now," Romano countered. "They might as well call it (the Rose Bowl) off."

Houston runs away from Maryland

Three first-period TDs ruin Terps' 15-game win streak

DALLAS (AP) — Sixth-ranked Houston stunned Maryland with three first- period touchdowns on the blazing runs of Dyral Thomas and Alois Blackwell Saturday and then withstood a Terrapin rally to whip the previously unbeaten, fourth-ranked Easterners 30-21 in the 41st Cotton Bowl.

The Cougars, co-champions of the Southwest Conference, thoroughly dominated Maryland and built a 27-7 halftime lead before Terp quarterback Mark Manges set fire to his listless team in the numbing 28-degree cold.

Houston, making its first appearance in the Cotton Bowl, controlled Maryland with incredible ease in a less than six-minute span of the first period as the Atlantic Coast Conference champions' 15-game winning streak was snapped.

PASSING—Houston, Davis 5-8-0, 168 yards, Maryland, Manges 17-32-0, 179.

Manges flipped an 11-yard scoring pass to freshman tight end Eric Sievers and Tim Wilson plunged one yard with 8:46 remaining to put the Terps within winning range.

However, Davis completed a crucial third-down pass and Leonard Coplin kicked a 28-yard field goal with 18 seconds to play.

The key play in Houston's final scoring drive that set up Coplin's field goal originated from the Houston 12-yard line on third and six. Davis faded back to pass, dodged a horde of Terp tacklers, and winged a 13-yard completion to Robert Lavergne to keep the vital drive alive.

Blackwell gained 149 yards in 22 carries against a Terp defense which was ranked sixth nationally against the rush. Thomas romped for 104 yards in 14 carries as Houston gained 320 yards on the ground.

Maryland, which was the second-ranked total defensive team in the country, had not allowed a touchdown on the ground in 22 quarters until Houston's first-period blitz.

An estimated crowd of 58,500 watched.

Manges completed 17 of 32 passes for 179 yards as the Terps continuously drove up and down the field. Twice Maryland missed chip- shot field goals and once drove 86 yards to the Houston one-yard line where the Terps had to surrender the ball on downs.

Two big defensive plays by Houston defensive back Mark Mohr put the Cougars in position for two of their lightning first-period scores. Mohr blocked Mike Sochko's punt and recovered a fumble by Manges on plays that earned him the most valuable defensive player of the game award.

Blackwell, a 5-foot-11, 186-pounder from Cureo, Tex., was chosen the most valuable offensive player.

Determined try pays off

Miami climate to Woody's liking, 27-10

Buckeyes rally behind Gerald after Colorado has 10-0 lead

MIAMI (AP) — Woody Hayes, who would not appear for interviews after a bitter Rose Bowl loss a year ago, was a charming winner after his Ohio State team had recorded a 27-10 Orange Bowl victory over Colorado Saturday night.

"I feel better than I did a year ago today," said Hayes, breaking into a big smile before a horde of newsmen outside his team's dressing room.

Hayes kept the media waiting only 15 minutes, a marked contrast to last January when they waited more than one hour to discover he would not discuss a 23-10 loss to UCLA.

Hayes said the turning points of the game were the insertion of Gerald at quarterback for Jim Pacenta and the use of tailback Jeff Logan at fullback.

"The game started turning around for us with Rod Gerald," said Hayes, who replaced Pacenta with his swift sophomore early in the second quarter.

Gerald, who started the first seven games this season for the 9-2-1 Big Ten co-champions, darted 17 yards on his first play.

"Gerald got outside on the first play. He stretched them out like an accordian. It gave them a different problem."

Gerald wound up running 14 times for 81 yards and completed two of six passes for 59 yards.

Hayes had not used Logan as a fullback this year, since Logan gained more than 1,000 yards at tailback. However, he decided to use the 182-pound junior in place of 238-pound Pete Johnson at fullback.

Ron Springs took over Logan's old spot at tailback.

Said Hayes of the strategy: "It made a difference. They (Colorado) weren't ready for that kind of speed. Springs is a good back, but Logan has more experience."

Ohio State, the Big Ten co-champion, had minus-20 yards in offense when the 173-pound Gerald took over with his team trailing 10-0 in the first quarter.

After Gerald's 17-yard run on his first play, Logan ran 36 yards through the middle for a touchdown that started the Buckeyes' comeback and snapped their two-game losing streak in bowl competition.

Gerald closed the Buckeye scoring in the final minute with a four-yard run.

Kicking specialist Tom Skladany booted field goals of 28 and 20 yards and Johnson scored his 58th career touchdown on a three-yard run to account for the remainder of Ohio State's scoring.

The Buckeyes surged into the lead on a 99-yard drive shortly before halftime and dominated play from the second quarter on with a ball-control attack.

Colorado, which jumped to a quick 10-0 lead on Mark Zetterberg's 26-yard field goal and Emery Moorehead's 11-yard scoring catch from Jeff Knapple, got good field position only once in the second half—when it recovered a fumble at the Buckeye 26.

That was erased two plays later when Tom Cousineau intercepted a pass with 11 minutes left in the third quarter, and the Buffaloes (8-4) never threatened again.

The victory snapped a four-game losing streak in bowls for Big Ten teams, and the defeat for Big Eight tri-champion Colorado was the first in four bowls for the Big Eight Conference.

"I'm not much on losses," said Colorado coach Bill Mallory, a former assistant to Hayes at Ohio State. "We didn't play as well as we can."

Mallory cited the kicking game as a major difference, with Ohio State's Skladany booting two field goals, booming kickoffs consistently to the end zone and punting well on the rare occasions when the Buckeyes were forced to kick.

The Buckeyes probably could have turned the game into more of a rout but missed on several scoring opportunities in the second half, taking over five times from near midfield or closer and producing only 10 points.

Senior quarterback Jim Pacenta had trouble getting the Buckeyes untracked despite two long kickoff returns in the opening minutes of the game, 39 yards by Matt Jackson and 49 yards by Logan.

It was a fumble by Pacenta that set up Colorado's first score, the 26-yard field goal by Zetterberg. With Pacenta attempting to pass, Mark Haynes knocked the ball from his hands and Randy Westendorf recovered on the Ohio State 43.

The Buffalo touchdown drive covered 80 yards and featured a 20-yard pass from Knapple to Moorehead and a 40-yard reverse by Billy Waddy.

Ohio State's 99-yard scoring drive came in the final six minutes of the half and turned the game around, giving the Buckeyes a 17-10 halftime advantage.

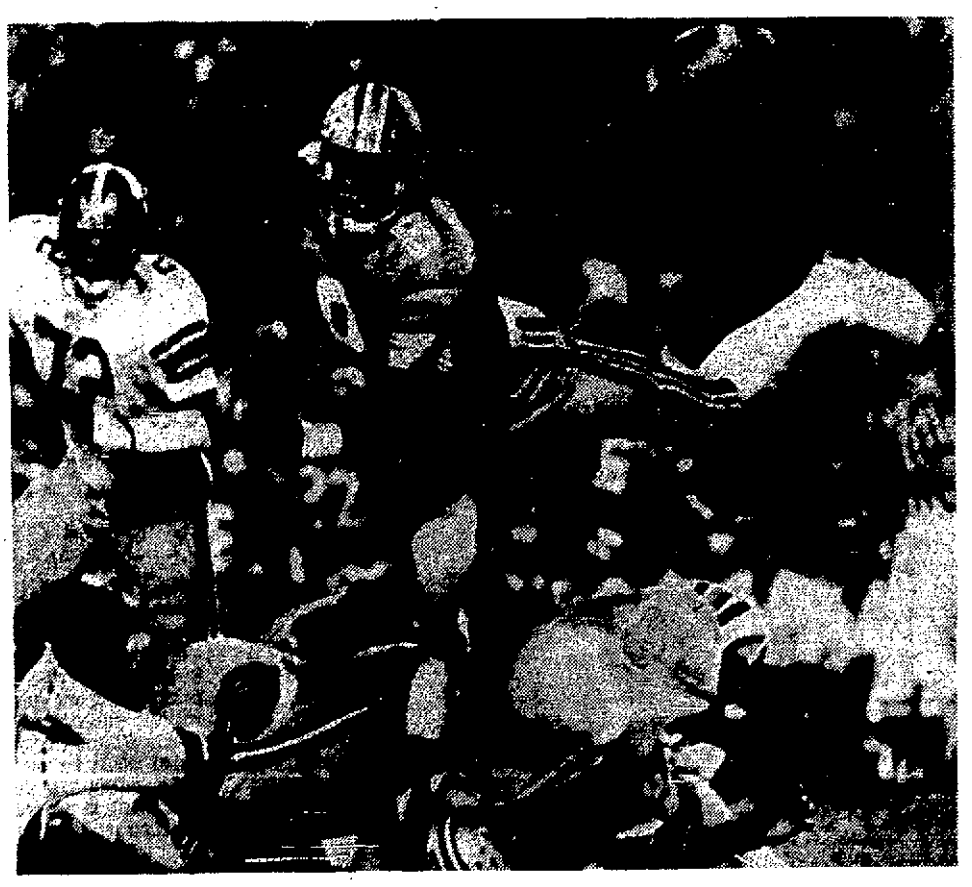

Tackle Nick Buonamici was credited with blocking Zetterberg's field goal attempt that went out of bounds on the one.

UCLA may start freshman against Houston in TV tussle today

By GARY RAUSCH
Staff Writer

Gene Bartow was contemplating his starting lineup for this afternoon's nationally televised intersectional with Houston (channel 4, 1 o'clock).

The thought crossed his mind and those of his interrogators that UCLA could start a freshman against the nationally ranked Cougars. Bartow thought of the consequences.

"I don't worry about the heat," he said of the anticipated barrage of criticism. "I've learned to like it."

Bartow indicated after Wednesday's 88-68, come-from-behind victory over Utah State that his lineup would likely include senior Marques Johnson and sophomore David Greenwood in the front line and senior Jimmy Spillane and junior Ray Townsend in the backcourt.

The fifth spot is a tossup among freshman Gig Sims, junior Brett Vroman and senior Wilbert Olinde. Each has his strongpoints and weaknesses.

In his longest stint of the season, 23 minutes, Sims improved his shooting percentage to .591 by connecting on four of six shots and eight points. He also grabbed four rebounds and impressed Dutch Belnap.

"Gig defensed Mike Santos the best of anyone we've met this season," said the Aggies' coach.

Beat Bruins—snap Forum jinx

Kings start the new year right, 5-2

By AL LARSON
Staff Writer

The Kings kept their New Year's resolution Saturday night.

Determined to turn around their dismal home record by playing 60 minutes of sustained hockey, the Kings outskated the Boston Bruins, 5-2, and were rewarded with a standing ovation from the holiday turnout of 11,337 at the Forum.

With Gene Carr, Bert Wilson, Shelly Kanneglesser, Whitey Widing and Bob Berry providing the firepower, the Kings registered only their second win at home in the last 14 games dating back to Oct. 30.

The Kings not only ended a four-game losing streak on the unfriendly Forum ice but remained two points behind Pittsburgh in the battle for second place in the Norris Division. The win also gave coach Bob Pulford's skaters a six-point bulge over fourth-place Detroit.

The five goals were the biggest outburst at the Forum since the Kings disposed of Atlanta, 5-1, on Oct. 28 and it marked the first time the Kings had beaten Boston goalie Gerry Cheevers in regular-season play since Dec. 10, 1967. The 36-year-old Cheevers enjoyed a remarkable 18-1 won-lost record against L.A.

Although the Bruins outshot the Kings 23-20, they never led.

The Kings jumped off to a 2-0 lead on first-period goals by Carr and Wilson.

Don Marcotte's eighth goal of the campaign cut the gap to 2-1, but Kanneglesser's first goal of the season restored the two-goal lead at 1:33 of the second period.

Widing's third goal made it 4-1, but Bobby Schmautz's unassisted 25-foot blast made it 4-2 with 5:38 remaining in the middle period.

Berry's breakaway with 8:27 to go wrapped up the scoring. It was only Berry's third goal of the season.

The five goals matched the previous high that Cheevers gave up this season. However, in that game he escaped with a 5-5 tie against Washington on Dec. 5.

The game was in sharp contrast to the first Kings-Bruins meeting when Terry O'Reilly and the Kings' Dave Schultz engaged in two fights while the Bruins were blazing, 4-2. Saturday's match was free of any violence.

The win boosted the Kings home record to 7-9-4 while the defeat cost Boston a chance to move into a tie for first place since Buffalo was ambushed by the Penguins, 6-3.

KING NOTES: The Kings start a seven-game pilgrimage Tuesday in St. Louis and don't return home until Jan. 18 when they open a four-game stand against Toronto...The Kings are the only team in the NHL with a better road record (6-7-6) than home mark (6-9-4)...Goalie Gerry Cheevers had lost only once to the Kings in 19 regular-season confrontations (18-1-0), including a 4-2 triumph earlier this season. Cheevers began the game with a 3.11 GAA and 13-4-2 record...Boston is second in the NHL in penalty killing, allowing 18 power goals. The Kings are seventh, yielding 27...Marcel Dionne continues to chase Montreal's Guy Lafleur for the scoring lead with 54 points. Lafleur has 30 goals and 29 assists for 59 points...Gene Carr's first-period goal was a NHL career high 12, surpassing the 11 he scored with St. Louis (3) and the N.Y. Rangers (8) in the 1971-72 season.

LONG BEACH STATE—

McMillian hit his first seven shots in the first half as Long Beach established a 38-32 lead. He finished with 27 points — the most a 49er has scored this season — while hitting 12 of 14 field goal attempts and all three free throws.

"Offensively, that was probably the best college game I've ever played," said McMillian. "I can't remember any better."

The reason?

"Our offense," said McMillian. "They were in a 'man' defense most of the night and we ran a lot of passing game, which I think is best suited to my talents."

The passing game is an active, up-tempo offense from which most of the 49ers prospered.

Utilizing it to key their fast break, the 49ers shot 64 per cent (18 of 28) in the first half and 57 per cent (33 of 58) for the game.

"Long Beach's shooting percentage was indicative of how well it played," said Henson. "We're not mobile enough to stay with a team like that."

While the Illini had trouble defensively, they operate an effective screen-and-pass offense which gave the 49ers problems.

Playing a team that arrived on the mainland Friday after participating in the University of Hawaii's week-long Rainbow Classic, the 49ers led by only two, 20-18, midway through the first half.

A 12-footer by Hudson and McMillian's fast break tip-in gave the hosts some breathing room, but Long Beach was never able to establish control until late in the final half.

The 49ers led by as many as 13 points four times early in the second half, but each time the Illini (8-4) battled back into contention.

They did it primarily on the inside shooting of 6-8 junior Rich Adams, who finished with 20 points.

Consecutive baskets by Adams led to Illinois' last serious comeback, trimming Long Beach's lead to 53-48.

Hudson stopped that spurt with a pair of free throws and then McMillian hit a 12-footer off the fast break and Hudson drove the lane for a basket—and the 49ers were able to secure their 102nd home court triumph in the past eight and one-half seasons.

Long Beach's largest margin was 16 points, amassed when Hudson converted a three-point play with 23 seconds left.

Illinois' Levi Cobb suffered a gash over his eye that will require stitches, and the 49ers' Donnie Martin didn't play the final 20 minutes because of an injury.

"Donnie pulled a leg muscle," reported Jones, "and we don't know how bad it is."

Walton may not play tonight against Lakers

The Lakers gun for their 14th consecutive Forum victory tonight at 7 when they take on the Pacific Division-leading Portland Trail Blazers, who may be in trouble with injuries.

Portland's talented center, Bill Walton, missed Saturday night's game against Chicago with a bruised knee and is doubtful for tonight. Forward Maurice Lucas, who has a groin pull, did play Saturday and scored 16 points. Guard Dave Twardzik also is hurting.

The Lakers, who trail Portland by two games, have beaten the Blazers twice this season, by three points at the Forum and by four in overtime at Portland.

The Lakers (21-13) begin a 19-day, seven-game road trip Wednesday in Philadelphia.

UCLA may start freshman against Houston in TV tussle today

By GARY RAUSCH
Staff Writer

Gene Bartow was contemplating his starting lineup for this afternoon's nationally televised intersectional with Houston (channel 4, 1 o'clock).

The thought crossed his mind and those of his interrogators that UCLA could start a freshman against the nationally ranked Cougars. Bartow thought of the consequences.

"I don't worry about the heat," he said of the anticipated barrage of criticism. "I've learned to like it."

Bartow indicated after Wednesday's 88-68, come-from-behind victory over Utah State that his lineup would likely include senior Marques Johnson and sophomore David Greenwood in the front line and senior Jimmy Spillane and junior Ray Townsend in the backcourt.

The fifth spot is a tossup among freshman Gig Sims, junior Brett Vroman and senior Wilbert Olinde. Each has his strongpoints and weaknesses.

In his longest stint of the season, 23 minutes, Sims, improved his shooting percentage to .591 by connecting on four of six shots and eight points. He also grabbed four rebounds and impressed Dutch Belnap.

"Gig defensed Mike Santos the best of anyone we've met this season," said the Aggies' coach.

Beat Bruins—snap Forum jinx

Kings start the new year right, 5-2

By AL LARSON
Staff Writer

The Kings kept their New Year's resolution Saturday night.

Determined to turn around their dismal home record by playing 60 minutes of sustained hockey, the Kings outskated the Boston Bruins, 5-2, and were rewarded with a standing ovation from the holiday turnout of 11,337 at the Forum.

With Gene Carr, Bert Wilson, Shelly Kannegiesser, Whitey Widing and Bob Berry providing the firepower, the Kings registered only their second win at home in the last 14 games dating back to Oct. 30.

The Kings not only ended a four-game losing streak on the unfriendly Forum ice but remained two points behind Pittsburgh in the battle for second place in the Norris Division. The win also gave coach Bob Pulford's skaters a six-point bulge over fourth-place Detroit.

The five goals were the biggest outburst at the Forum since the Kings disposed of Atlanta, 5-1, on Oct. 28 and it marked the first time the Kings had beaten Boston goalie Gerry Cheevers in regular-season play since Dec. 10, 1967. The 36-year-old Cheevers enjoyed a remarkable 18-1 won-lost record against L.A.

Although the Bruins outshot the Kings 23-20, they never led.

The Kings jumped off to a 2-0 lead on first-period goals by Carr and Wilson.

Don Marcotte's eighth goal of the campaign cut the gap to 2-1, but Kannegiesser's first goal of the season restored the two-goal lead at 1:33 of the second period.

Widing's third goal made it 4-1, but Bobby Schmautz's unassisted 25-foot blast made it 4-2 with 5:38 remaining in the middle period.

Berry's breakaway with 8:27 to go wrapped up the scoring. It was only Berry's third goal of the season.

The five goals matched the previous high that Cheevers gave up this season. However, in that game he escaped with a 5-5 tie against Washington on Dec. 5.

The game was in sharp contrast to the first Kings-Bruins meeting when Terry O'Reilly and the Kings' Dave Schultz engaged in two fights while the Bruins were blazing, 4-2. Saturday's match was free of any violence.

The win boosted the Kings home record to 7-9-4 while the defeat cost Boston a chance to move into a tie for first place since Buffalo was ambushed by the Penguins, 6-3.

KING NOTES: The Kings start a seven-game pilgrimage Tuesday in St. Louis and don't return home until Jan. 18 when they open a four-game stand against Toronto...The Kings are the only team in the NHL with a better road record (6-7-6) than home mark (6-8-4)...Goalie Gerry Cheevers had lost only once to the Kings in 19 regular-season confrontations (18-1-0), including a 4-2 triumph earlier this season. Cheevers began the game with a 3.11 GAA and 13-4-2 record...Boston is second in the NHL in penalty killing, allowing 18 power goals. The Kings are seventh, yielding 27...Marcel Dionne continues to chase Montreal's Guy Lafleur for the scoring lead with 54 points. Lafleur has 30 goals and 29 assists for 59 points...Gene Carr's first-period goal was a NHL career high 12, surpassing the 11 he scored with St. Louis (3) and the N.Y. Rangerss (8) in the 1971-72 season.

McMillian soars

Lloyd McMillian of Long Beach State soars over teammate Francois Wise and Rich Adams of Illinois to tip in shot in first half of intersectional game Saturday night in L.B. Arena.

McMillian hit his first seven shots in the first half as Long Beach established a 38-32 lead. He finished with 27 points — the most a 49er has scored this season — while hitting 12 of 14 field goal attempts and all three free throws.

"Offensively, that was probably the best college game I've ever played," said McMillian. "I can't remember any better."

The reason?

"Our offense," said McMillian. "They were in a 'man' defense most of the night and we ran a lot of passing game, which I think is best suited to my talents."

The passing game is an active, up-tempo offense from which most of the 49ers prospered.

Utilizing it to key their fast break, the 49ers shot 64 per cent (18 of 28) in the first half and 57 per cent (33 of 58) for the game.

"Long Beach's shooting percentage was indicative of how well it played," said Henson. "We're not mobile enough to stay with a team like that."

While the Illini had trouble defensively, they operate an effective screen-and-pass offense which gave the 49ers problems.

Playing a team that arrived on the mainland Friday after participating in the University of Hawaii's week-long Rainbow Classic, the 49ers led by only two, 20-18, midway through the first half.

A 12-footer by Hudson and McMillian's fast break tip-in gave the hosts some breathing room, but Long Beach was never able to establish control until late in the final half.

The 49ers led by as many as 13 points four times early in the second half, but each time the Illini (8-4) battled back into contention.

They did it primarily on the inside shooting of 6-8 junior Rich Adams, who finished with 20 points.

Consecutive baskets by Adams led to Illinois' last serious comeback, trimming Long Beach's lead to 53-48.

Hudson stopped that spurt with a pair of free throws and then McMillian hit a 12-footer off the fast break and Hudson drove the lane for a basket—and the 49ers were able to secure their 102nd home court triumph in the past eight and one-half seasons.

Long Beach's largest margin was 16 points, amassed when Hudson converted a three-point play with 23 seconds left.

Illinois' Levi Cobb suffered a gash over his eye that will require stitches, and the 49ers' Donnie Martin didn't play the final 20 minutes because of an injury.

"Donnie pulled a leg muscle," reported Jones, "and we don't know how bad it is."

Walton may not play tonight against Lakers

The Lakers gun for their 14th consecutive Forum victory tonight at 7 when they take on the Pacific Division-leading Portland Trail Blazers, who may be in trouble with injuries.

Portland's talented center, Bill Walton, missed Saturday night's game against Chicago with a bruised knee and is doubtful for tonight. Forward Maurice Lucas, who has a groin pull, did play Saturday and scored 16 points. Guard Dave Twardzik also is hurting.

The Lakers, who trail Portland by two games, have beaten the Blazers twice this season, by three points at the Forum and by four in overtime at Portland.

The Lakers (21-13) begin a 19-day, seven-game road trip Wednesday in Philadelphia.

Wistful Bell 'proud of the guys'

Ricky Bell said it. Otherwise, it might have sounded immodest.

"I was proud of the way the guys hung in there and won it without me."

He was talking about the University of Southern California's 14-6 triumph over Michigan in the 63rd renewal of the great commotion in the Rose Bowl at Pasadena.

Well, who would have thought the Trojans could produce such heroics without Bell? It is Ricky, the authorities say, who may be the greatest of all in the endless parade of tailbacks to operate at USC.

The Wolverines put the boff on Bell Saturday on USC's first series of downs after he had carried four times for 16 yards. They rang Ricky's bell and he was still suffering from a severe headache and dizziness in the locker room when the noise of congratulation commenced.

"I wish I could have played," Ricky said, looking at the floor, "but we won and that's the idea in coming here."

A guy suggested it was a crying shame Ricky Bell could not have concluded his college career with a day befitting the archives at Pasadena. But Ricky has been visited by bad luck in the months of football just passed.

He entered the 1976 season as one of the favorites to win the Heisman Trophy, the item of silverware which makes millionaires out of penniless football players. He missed one game of the regular season with an assortment of injuries and fell too far behind to catch Pittsburgh's Tony Dorsett, the subsequent winner.

Now there was a report that Bell and Dorsett were planning to engage the services of the same flesh peddler and enter professional football as a package deal.

Some package.

But Bell said the report may have come from a New Year's Eve celebrant sitting alone in a wire service office someplace.

"There is no truth to that at all," Bell said. "I have offers from several agents and I haven't made up my mind. Actually, I haven't been thinking about it. I've been thinking about this game.

"Yes, I plan to play pro football."

A bystander expressed an opinion on such a prospect. He was O.J. Simpson, one of the Trojan tailbacks of tradition, who has been quite successful in the professional dodge.

BUD TUCKER

Simpson is more than a former Trojan football player. He is an alumnus, an old grad. O.J. comes back to USC football games and waves a banner and toots a tin horn. He had lost his paper hat on the way to the locker room to slap palms and yell, "All .... right."

"I won a lot of dinners on this game," O.J. said. "I knew we could beat Michigan because of all our dimensions. The fact we lost Ricky early proved the point. We had a lot of other ways to go.

"Michigan was a one-dimension team. A good team, mind you, but not as good as our team."

Vince Evans, the Trojan quarterback had worked many months for this day. A lot of fingers had been pointed at him for the failure of the Trojans to finish with respectability in 1975.

Now Bill Schroeder, the little man who has been making the presentation for 30 years, was naming Evans Player of the Game and handing him a trophy.

"You guys are the greatest," Evans sobbed. "This is the best day."

'I wish I could have had a better day," Ricky Bell said.

"You'll have a lot of days," O.J. Simpson told him.

Ricky Bell and Tony Dorsett in the same backfield? Quite a package.

Somebody suggested that with this kind of runner on the way, O.J. Simpson may have to make room.

"I'm way ahead of you," O.J. said with a smile. "I already have."

O.J. Simpson and Ricky Bell running through the same airport to a car rental counter?

Quite a package.

USC impresses Schembechler

Writers questioned whether Michigan should have gone for shorter pass patterns in the face of quarterback Rick Leach's 4-of-12 performance. Also, why the Wolverine secondary didn't tighten up its zone coverage, especially on Shelton Diggs, who caught eight Vince Evans passes for 98 yards.

"If you're trying to say I got out-coached," smiled Bo, "You'll have to judge that for yourselves."

Michigan was hurt early when wolfman and holder Jerry Zuver suffered a head injury similar to that which sidelined Trojan tailback Ricky Bell a few plays earlier.

"It wasn't a bad hold," said Bo in defense of Curt Stephenson on the extra point. "Bob (Wood) just didn't get the ball up in the air."

"The guy (Walt Underwood) came between center and guard," said Wood of the man who blocked his attempt. We've practiced with Curt all season."

"The game was decided because our defense was on the field too long," said tackle Greg Morton, who was in on seven tackles. "We didn't make any changes at halftime. All Bo said was we'd have to keep the offense on the field more.

"We failed to stop the big plays defensively and our offense failed to make the big plays. We hate to lose and Bo hates to lose. He's told us all season if we give our best for 60 minutes, we'd never have to second-guess ourselves."

CALVIN O'NEAL, a 13-tackle performer at middle linebacker, echoed the feelings of his coach and teammate.

"Sure it's tough losing a game of this magnitude. Everybody wants to win, but somebody has to lose. That's life and there are other things to it besides football."

O'Neal, who snuffed out one Trojan drive with an interception at the Michigan 1 and tacked on a 21-yard return, neatly sidestepped answering whether the Wolverine defense was worn down and tired out by the Trojans.

"Anytime you're on the field with an offense like USC's that long, the defense is going to get tired."

Neither O'Neal nor Morton were in awe of player of the game Evans, who connected on 14 of 20 passes for 181 yards.

"He did an excellent job with the big play," opined O'Neal.

"He's a good scrambling quarterback, we knew that going in," added Morton. "He made it difficult for us to stay in our pass-defense lanes. We tried to force him inside to keep him from scrambling but he kept slipping away like he had grease on him."

EVANS' OPPOSITE, Leach, said the Wolverines worked many hours on their aerial game with him throwing as many as 50 passes in a practice session.

"I think we should pass more, but I'm not going to be the one to ask Bo about it," he said. Two Leach passes brought Michigan to the USC 23 in the closing minutes but three incompletions gave Troy the ball to sit on.

"On third down (at the 17), I saw a defensive back cutting under Stephenson and I purposely threw it out of bounds. On fourth down (an end zone toss to Rob Lytle), we went for broke and lost."

The sophomore quarterback, a veteran of two bowl games, said the game plan was a good one but breaks and lack of same proved the difference.

SC coach credits 'brute strength'

By HANK HOLLINGWORTH
Staff Writer

Brute strength, a Trojan trademark for many, many years, ultimately was responsible for USC's gruelling 14-6 Rose Bowl victory ove· a tough Michigan squad Saturday, in the opinion of SC coach John Robinson.

"It was one of the great football games I've been involved in," said a weary, but happy Robinson. "I believe it also was one of the toughest games.

"There were a lot of collisions out there, but we just wore them down. It was our idea to run at them, wear them out, then throw some passes.

"MAINLY, WE had to stop their run. I believe we succeeded there. We felt that if we got Michigan into passing situations we would have them playing our game.

"That's because our defense is absolutely fantastic. I have no way of describing how great the Trojan defense was today, and all season."

The early loss of Ricky Bell revved up the Trojan offense, Robinson surprisingly claimed.

"If we had gotten down when Ricky went out, we'd have lost the game," insisted the Trojan boss. "Instead, Vince (Evans) tightened his belt and played a super game. There's nothing more pleasing to me than to say that.

"You've got to feel good, too, about the way Charles (White) played. He stepped in for Ricky and carried the ball all day (32 times). His performance was sensational, especially since he's just a freshman and hasn't played all that much this season."

Evans completed 14 of 20 passes, but Robinson insisted, "Michigan had the best pass defense we played against this season.

"WE THOUGHT we could throw away from Michigan's strength. But we really didn't. When we did have guys open, they weren't open by much. It's just that Vince's passes were right on target. He seemed always to know where (Shelton) Diggs would be. I'll say it again—Vince was absolutely brilliant."

En route to their game-clinching last quarter touchdown, the Trojans were playing with the ferocity of a team that was behind instead of on the front end of a 7-6 score. Robinson said that fierce play was no accident.

"I told the team at halftime that we were going to play the last two quarters as if the game were all tied, or that we were behind. You can't sit on a one-point lead. Some teams might play close to the vest when they have any kind of lead, but not any team I coach."

Asked if he would like to see a playoff between USC and Pittsburgh for the national championship, Robinson roared back with an emphatic "No!."

"These bowl games and polls are better than a playoff. Right now, our kids are behind in school, and they've been playing hard football for five months. It's OK for the pros to have a Super Bowl, but not college kids.

"A playoff would be great for sportswriters and coaches, but it's bad for the players. Anyway, now we can have fun arguing the rest of the winter about who's No. 1."

Eighteen-year-old White said that he felt bad when Bell got hurt, but that the pressure of a Rose Bowl load on his shoulders didn't last long.

"THIS WAS supposed to be Ricky's big year, but he's had tough breaks and I was sorry to see him leave today," said the soft-spoken freshman. "I knew that I had to do the job in his place.

"The pressure was off the first time I got hit. After that, I wasn't a bit nervous. I'm not that tired, either. I feel ready to play another game right now.

"What made the day easy for me was that great line in front of me. I'm looking forward to a lot of fun the next three years.

"Right now, though, the only thing on my mind is going back to class. I want to keep my grades up for track season."

Flanker Diggs said that he also was aware of pressure, but the responsibility didn't prevent the San Bernardino senior from catching eight passes for 98 yards, the day's top receiving effort.

"I knew a lot depended on me because Randy (Simmrin) was hurt," acknowledged Shelton. "I expected all week to be the primary receiver.

"But I wasn't really worried because I know that Vince can do a job. Instead of Randy, I was the guy he was looking for today. Vince did a great job reading their defense and a super job throwing the ball .

"Our game plan was to take what the other team would give us—and Michigan was giving us the 'outs' and short passes. They might have been tough on the bomb, but we were satisfied with the shorter gains.

"This was my third Rose Bowl, and it's the happiest because it's the culmination of four great years for a lot of us seniors."

LINEBACKER Dave Lewis conceded that the Wolverines were probably USC's toughest opponent of the season, and also the quickest. "We're about a half-second apart, but the Trojans have the half-second edge.

"Like the coach said," continued Lewis, who made 10 tackles during the game, "we wore Michigan out. We had to learn a lot of defense for this game, but that's what made this game fun.

"(Rick) Leach is quick and very smart—he reminds me a lot of John Sciarra—but he can't pass. By the time he's a senior in two years, though, he'll really be something.

"(Tailback Rob) Lytle is pretty good, too, but not the best we ever faced. He was a tough kid, but we wore him down, too."

Defensive tackle Gary Jeter also claimed that the loss of Bell spurred the Trojans.

"Ricky's loss was more of a boost than a letdown," said Jeter. "He's a helluva player and an individual, and we knew we had to go just that much harder.

"Leach burned me a couple times, but he's awfully tough to bring down. He'd duck, and I'd fall for it, then he'd set me up. I have a lot of respect for that man."

Evans, SC defense smother Michigan

Going into the New Year's Day struggle, Michigan had ranked No. 1 in the nation in total offense (448.1 yards per game), rushing (362.6) and scoring offense (38.7 points per game).

The Wolverines were touted as quick and mobile, slick with the option and resourceful with a "big play" passing game on sophomore quarterback Rick Leach's arm.

INSTEAD, they came off as dull and unimaginative as the Trojans played textbook defense—the battering, swarming kind that had bottled UCLA's option attack six weeks earlier.

Michigan wound up the afternoon with 231 yards in total offense, 155 on the ground.

USC stationed its tackles a yard or two off the line of scrimmage in the first half, giving the Trojans a better read as Michigan's option plays developed.

But in the second half, when the Trojans' physical superiority began to wear down the Wolverines, USC played tight on the line of scrimmage and fired hard at Leach when he faded to pass.

Three days before the game, USC defensive tackle Gary Jeter had said: "They're good drive blockers, but they can't pass-block worth a damn."

HE WAS right. The Wolverines relied on passing so seldom during the regular season that protecting the quarterback wasn't among their strengths. Consequently, Jeter and linebackers Rod Martin, Dave Lewis and Clay Matthews were able to tee off on Leach in obvious passing situations.

On offense, the Trojans took what the Wolverines gave them.

"They didn't do anything on defense we didn't expect," said Evans. "They were good athletes, but I think their coach told them not to get beat deep on passes.

"In our game plan, we felt we had to run the ball effectively and throw the short, underneath patterns to defeat their three-deep coverage."

Evans took full advantage of Michigan's soft underbelly, shooting medium-range curls and slants to Diggs, split end Randy Simmrin and tight end Bill Gay.

When Evans had the Wolverines back on their heels with passes, he would shoot White and Tatupu between the tackles for sizable gains.

USC chalked up 381 yards in total offense, 200 on the ground and 181 through the air.

Placekicker Glen Walker missed two field goal attempts, the first from 23 yards and the second from 45.

AT FIRST USC was lethargic, and the Trojans were blocking as though they had read the Conrad Dobler Blocking Manual. A holding penalty against them helped set up Michigan's touchdown.

After being penalized back to their 10, the Trojans punted only to midfield early in the second quarter.

From there, Michigan drove for a touchdown in 12 plays, Lytle diving over a stack of defenders at the 1.

But USC's Walt Underwood broke through and leaped high to block Bob Wood's placement, holding Michigan's lead to 6-0.

Evans was brilliant as the Trojans came right back to go 80 yards for a touchdown in 12 plays.

He hit Diggs on passes of 9 and 30 yards as the Wolverines failed to put on pressure, then stayed on the ground for the last 18 yards.

White and Tatupu pounded to the 1, where Evans faced a fourth down.

He called a timeout, conferred with Robinson and assistant Paul Hackett, then came back to fool the Wolverines with a slick move.

Evans faked a dive to White, delayed until Michigan converged on the Trojan runner, then rolled around left end for an easy touchdown. Walker's placement gave USC a 7-6 halftime lead.

EARLY IN the third quarter, Lytle fumbled a pitchout and USC recovered at the Michigan 8. But on the next play, White didn't get a firm grasp on a handoff and the ball bounced off his right knee as he approached the line. Michigan's Dom Tedesco recovered at the 9.

Each team had drives aborted early in the fourth quarter, Michigan's at the Trojan 36 and USC's at the Wolverine 2 on an interception.

But midway in the final period, the Trojans drove 58 yards in 8 plays for the clinching touchdown, a 27-yard pass to Simmrin and a 20-yard burst by Tatupu setting up White's seven-yard TD run.

Michigan showed one flurry of passing effectiveness, reaching the USC 17, chiefly on a brilliant 32-yard reception by wingback Jim Smith.

But Leach threw wildly on third and fourth downs, and the Trojans took possession with 2:09 remaining.

As the Trojans raced into their dressing quarters, Robinson clenched a fist and shouted: "Let's hear it for good, old Vince Evans."

It was about time somebody had a kind word for good, old Vince.

Evans: 'I'll treasure this rest of my life'

BY RICH ROBERTS
Staff Writer

In defense of Vince Evans, who once could not hit the bottom of the Grand Canyon with a forward pass, let it be said: Yes, he can.

The Rose Bowl? Not so good. The USC quarterback hit the bottom of the Arroyo Seco only five times in 20 tries during Saturday's 14-6 win over Michigan.

One pass was intercepted. The other 14 fell into the hands of his receivers, a wonder to behold.

"I just disregarded all those bad comments," Evans said after receiving the Citizens Savings Athletic Foundation trophy as the outstanding player in the game.

"I think if I would have listened to them, it would have weakened me as a player."

EVANS' ONLY WEAKNESS Saturday was in his right ankle, which he injured so severely in practice three days earlier that he feared his destiny would be denied.

"Oh, man," he said, "this was the biggest game of my life. I think I would have played hurt just to be able to play in this game.

"It was terrible. I couldn't walk Thursday. But I got a super tape job on it, tremendous treatment, a couple of shots, and the Lord was with me.

"This was my ultimate goal, man, to come to the Rose Bowl and be the leader of this team. It's been with me ever since 1967 when I fell in love with this school. I always dreamed to come here and be the quarterback of this team. This capped it off. I'm happy that we won the game and that I had a good game and that we're going out a winner. That's the only way to go."

Evans had something else going for him Saturday: mother power.

"Yeah, my mother's here, man," Vince beamed. "She's seen me play (in college) only once...back in Pittsburgh two years ago."

ON THAT OCCASION, Evans relieved Pat Haden, who was knocked silly, and brought the Trojans from 7-3 behind to a 16-7 win, although he did it more by running than passing.

"I just had a feeling I was going to do well today," Vince said. "Every time my mother's around I play well. She's a good luck piece for me. I wish I could carry her around in my pocket."

Mrs. Reva C. Evans would be a much lighter burden than the world's- worst-passer stigma Evans carried around until this season, when he improved dramatically from a 31 per cent thrower to a 52 per cent sharpshooter.

The Rose Bowl buried the old image for good, but he wasn't sure it was his best passing day.

"Well, I, uh...what were my stats?" he asked. "At Purdue I was 13 for 16. But I felt good for this game, really good."

He even forgot about the ankle.

"I wasn't thinking about it, man."

He certainly wasn't when he called his own number on two important running plays—USC's first touchdown and a 22-yard sprint that maintained ball control near the finish.

MICHIGAN LED 6-0 near the end of the half when USC worked the ball to the one-yard line, fourth-and-goal. Evans called time and went to the bench to see coach John Robinson. They did not discuss the possibility of settling for a field goal.

"No, man," Vince said, "we were thinking touchdown all the way.

"I suggested to him (Robinson) that because we had run that straight dive up the middle, they (the Wolverines) were suckering for that. So I advised the coach, 'Coach, why don't you let me keep the ball and go around the side, because nobody's out there?' He listened to me and it worked perfectly."

USC hadn't used the play since last season.

"Twenty-two Blast Keep is what we call it, so we got out of it. Then we cranked it up for this game because they hadn't seen it since last year."

The second time, two people in the world knew Evans was only going to fake a handoff to tailback Charles White.

"Coach told me to keep the ball," Vince said with a smile, "but don't tell the other players I'm gonna keep it. That takes away from the fake."

HIS TEAMMATES didn't get upset about the deception.

"After I gained long yardage," Vince said, "they loved it."

Evans disregarded No. 1-rated Pitt's 27-3 win over Georgia in the Sugar Bowl earlier in the day.

"The way we played today," he said, "I think it's evident that we're probably the best team in the nation."

Vince is happy with a Rose Bowl win and his shiny silver trophy.

"Where is it?" he said with a frantic start, jumping up off his seat.

IT WAS QUICKLY located a few feet away and Evans, greatly relieved, drew the symbol of his redemption to his side.

"It's a great tribute," he said, "like a boyhood dream come true.

"Basically, what it all is, if you have the confidence in yourself that you can do a competent job, good coaching like I've had from coach (Paul) Hackett and just going out and working hard every day and trying to be the best you can be, that's all there is to it.

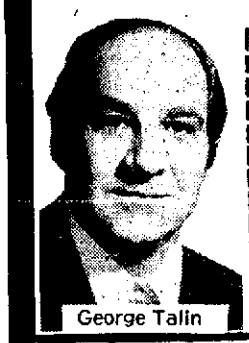

"I always wanted to come to USC and be able to be in the Rose Bowl. O.J. Simpson, the Trojan horse, the band playing Conquest...a combination of things.

"I'll treasure this moment for the rest of my life."

Dorsett, Bell to vie in Hula Bowl

HONOLULU (AP) — Heisman Trophy winner Tony Dorsett of Pitt is expected to spearhead the East attack while all-America running back Ricky Bell of USC leads the West offense in the 31st Hula Bowl football game Jan. 8.

Along with Dorsett, the 39th Heisman winner to be in the Hula Bowl, the East team will feature running back Rob Lytle of Michigan and quarterback Rick Slager of Notre Dame.

Wistful Bell 'proud of the guys'

Ricky Bell said it. Otherwise, it might have sounded immodest.

"I was proud of the way the guys hung in there and won it without me."

He was talking about the University of Southern California's 14-6 triumph over Michigan in the 63rd renewal of the great commotion in the Rose Bowl at Pasadena.

Well, who would have thought the Trojans could produce such heroics without Bell? It is Ricky, the authorities say, who may be the greatest of all in the endless parade of tailbacks to operate at USC.

The Wolverines put the boff on Bell Saturday on USC's first series of downs after he had carried four times for 16 yards. They rang Ricky's bell and he was still suffering from a severe headache and dizziness in the locker room when the noise of congratulation commenced.

"I wish I could have played," Ricky said, looking at the floor, "but we won and that's the idea in coming here."

A guy suggested it was a crying shame Ricky Bell could not have concluded his college career with a day befitting the archives at Pasadena. But Ricky has been visited by bad luck in the months of football just passed.

He entered the 1976 season as one of the favorites to win the Heisman Trophy, the item of silverware which makes millionaires out of penniless football players. He missed one game of the regular season with an assortment of injuries and fell too far behind to catch Pittsburgh's Tony Dorsett, the subsequent winner.

Now there was a report that Bell and Dorsett were planning to engage the services of the same flesh peddler and enter professional football as a package deal.

Some package.

But Bell said the report may have come from a New Year's Eve celebrant sitting alone in a wire service office someplace.

"There is no truth to that at all," Bell said. "I have offers from several agents and I haven't made up my mind. Actually, I haven't been thinking about it. I've been thinking about this game.

"Yes, I plan to play pro football."

A bystander expressed an opinion on such a prospect. He was O.J. Simpson, one of the Trojan tailbacks of tradition, who has been quite successful in the professional dodge.

BUD TUCKER

Simpson is more than a former Trojan football player. He is an alumnus, an old grad. O.J. comes back to USC football games and waves a banner and toots a tin horn. He had lost his paper hat on the way to the locker room to slap palms and yell, "All .... right."

"I won a lot of dinners on this game," O.J. said. "I knew we could beat Michigan because of all our dimensions. The fact we lost Ricky early proved the point. We had a lot of other ways to go.

"Michigan was a one-dimension team. A good team, mind you, but not as good as our team."

Vince Evans, the Trojan quarterback had worked many months for this day. A lot of fingers had been pointed at him for the failure of the Trojans to finish with respectability in 1975.

Now Bill Schroeder, the little man who has been making the presentation for 30 years, was naming Evans Player of the Game and handing him a trophy.

"You guys are the greatest," Evans sobbed. "This is the best day."

"I wish I could have had a better day," Ricky Bell said.

"You'll have a lot of days," O.J. Simpson told him.

Ricky Bell and Tony Dorsett in the same backfield? Quite a package.

Somebody suggested that with this kind of runner on the way, O.J. Simpson may have to make room.

"I'm way ahead of you," O.J. said with a smile. "I already have."

O.J. Simpson and Ricky Bell running through the same airport to a car rental counter?

Quite a package.

Writers questioned whether Michigan should have gone for shorter pass patterns in the face of quarterback Rick Leach's 4-of-12 performance. Also, why the Wolverine secondary didn't tighten up its zone coverage, especially on Shelton Diggs, who caught eight Vince Evans passes for 98 yards.

"If you're trying to say I got out-coached," smiled Bo, "You'll have to judge that for yourselves."

Michigan was hurt early when wolfman and holder Jerry Zuver suffered a head injury similar to that which sidelined Trojan tailback Ricky Bell a few plays earlier.

"It wasn't a bad hold," said Bo in defense of Curt Stephenson on the extra point. "Bob (Wood) just didn't get the ball up in the air."

"The guy (Walt Underwood) came between center and guard," said Wood of the man who blocked his attempt. We've practiced with Curt all season."

"The game was decided because our defense was on the field too long," said tackle Greg Morton, who was in on seven tackles. "We didn't make any changes at halftime. All Bo said was we'd have to keep the offense on the field more.

"We failed to stop the big plays defensively and our offense failed to make the big plays. We hate to lose and Bo hates to lose. He's told us all season if we give our best for 60 minutes, we'd never have to second-guess ourselves."

CALVIN O'NEAL, a 13-tackle performer at middle linebacker, echoed the feelings of his coach and teammate.

"Sure it's tough losing a game of this magnitude. Everybody wants to win, but somebody has to lose. That's life and there are other things to it besides football."

O'Neal, who snuffed out one Trojan drive with an interception at the Michigan 1 and tacked on a 21-yard return, neatly sidestepped answering whether the Wolverine defense was worn down and tired out by the Trojans.

"Anytime you're on the field with an offense like USC's that long, the defense is going to get tired."

Neither O'Neal nor Morton were in awe of player of the game Evans, who connected on 14 of 20 passes for 181 yards.

"He did an excellent job with the big play," opined O'Neal.

"He's a good scrambling quarterback, we knew that going in," added Morton. "He made it difficult for us to stay in our pass-defense lanes. We tried to force him inside to keep him from scrambling but he kept slipping away like he had grease on him."

EVANS' OPPOSITE, Leach, said the Wolverines worked many hours on their aerial game with him throwing as many as 50 passes in a practice session.

"I think we should pass more, but I'm not going to be the one to ask Bo about it," he said. Two Leach passes brought Michigan to the USC 23 in the closing minutes but three incompletions gave Troy the ball to sit on.

"On third down (at the 17), I saw a defensive back cutting under Stephenson and I purposely threw it out of bounds. On fourth down (an end zone toss to Rob Lytle), we went for broke and lost."

The sophomore quarterback, a veteran of two bowl games, said the game plan was a good one but breaks and lack of same proved the difference.

SC coach credits 'brute strength'

By HANK HOLLINGWORTH
Staff Writer

Brute strength, a Trojan trademark for many, many years, ultimately was responsible for USC's gruelling 14-6 Rose Bowl victory ove a tough Michigan squad Saturday, in the opinion of SC coach John Robinson.

"It was one of the great football games I've been involved in," said a weary, but happy Robinson. "I believe it also was one of the toughest games.

"There were a lot of collisions out there, but we just wore them down. It was our idea to run at them, wear them out, then throw some passes.

"MAINLY, WE had to stop their run. I believe we succeeded there. We felt that if we got Michigan into passing situations we would have them playing our game.

"That's because our defense is absolutely fantastic. I have no way of describing how great the Trojan defense was today, and all season."

The early loss of Ricky Bell revved up the Trojan offense, Robinson surprisingly claimed.

"If we had gotten down when Ricky went out, we'd have lost the game," insisted the Trojan boss. "Instead, Vince (Evans) tightened his belt and played a super game. There's nothing more pleasing to me than to say that.

"You've got to feel good, too, about the way Charles (White) played. He stepped in for Ricky and carried the ball all day (32 times). His performance was sensational, especially since he's just a freshman and hasn't played all that much this season."

Evans completed 14 of 20 passes, but Robinson insisted, "Michigan had the best pass defense we played against this season.

"WE THOUGHT we could throw away from Michigan's strength. But we really didn't. When we did have guys open, they weren't open by much. It's just that Vince's passes were right on target. He seemed always to know where (Shelton) Diggs would be. I'll say it again—Vince was absolutely brilliant."

En route to their game-clinching last quarter touchdown, the Trojans were playing with the ferocity of a team that was behind instead of on the front end of a 7-6 score. Robinson said that fierce play was no accident.

"I told the team at halftime that we were going to play the last two quarters as if the game were all tied, or that we were behind. You can't sit on a one-point lead. Some teams might play close to the vest when they have any kind of lead, but not any team I coach."

Asked if he would like to see a playoff between USC and Pittsburgh for the national championship, Robinson roared back with an emphatic "No!."

"These bowl games and polls are better than a playoff. Right now, our kids are behind in school, and they've been playing hard football for five months. It's OK for the pros to have a Super Bowl, but not college kids.

"A playoff would be great for sportswriters and coaches, but it's bad for the players. Anyway, now we can have fun arguing the rest of the winter about who's No. 1."

Eighteen-year-old White said that he felt bad when Bell got hurt, but that the pressure of a Rose Bowl load on his shoulders didn't last long.

"THIS WAS supposed to be Ricky's big year, but he's had tough breaks and I was sorry to see him leave today," said the soft-spoken freshman. "I knew that I had to do the job in his place.

"The pressure was off the first time I got hit. After that, I wasn't a bit nervous. I'm not that tired, either. I feel ready to play another game right now.

"What made the day easy for me was that great line in front of me. I'm looking forward to a lot of fun the next three years.

"Right now, though, the only thing on my mind is going back to class. I want to keep my grades up for track season."

Flanker Diggs said that he also was aware of pressure, but the responsibility didn't prevent the San Bernardino senior from catching eight passes for 98 yards, the day's top receiving effort.

"I knew a lot depended on me because Randy (Simmrin) was hurt," acknowledged Shelton. "I expected all week to be the primary receiver.

"But I wasn't really worried because I know that Vince can do a job. Instead of Randy, I was the guy he was looking for today. Vince did a great job reading their defense and a super job throwing the ball.

"Our game plan was to take what the other team would give us—and Michigan was giving us the 'outs' and short passes. They might have been tough on the bomb, but we were satisfied with the shorter gains.

"This was my third Rose Bowl, and it's the happiest because it's the culmination of four great years for a lot of us seniors."

LINEBACKER Dave Lewis conceded that the Wolverines were probably USC's toughest opponent of the season, and also the quickest. "We're about a half-second apart, but the Trojans have the half-second edge.

"Like the coach said," continued Lewis, who made 10 tackles during the game, "we wore Michigan out. We had to learn a lot of defense for this game, but that's what made this game fun.

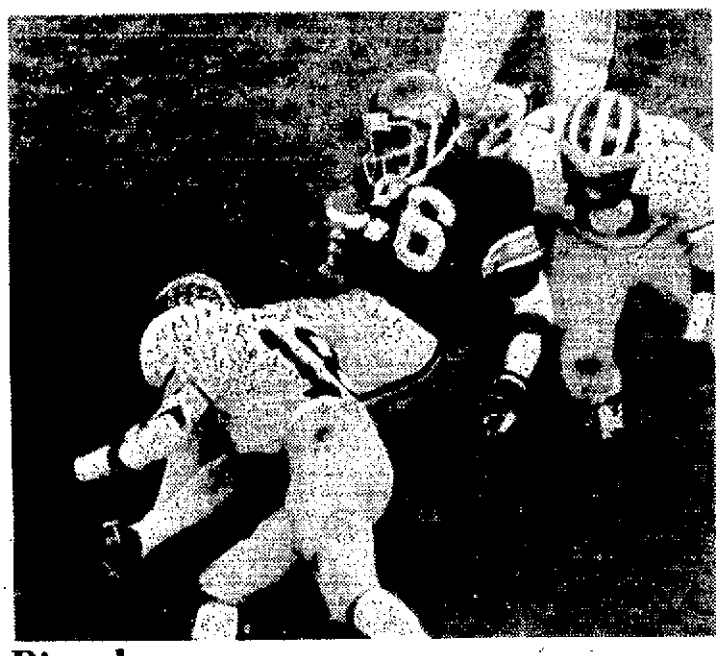

"(Rick) Leach is quick and very smart—he reminds me a lot of John Sciarra—but he can't pass. By the time he's a senior in two years, though, he'll really be something.

"(Tailback Rob) Lytle is pretty good, too, but not the best we ever faced. He was a tough kid, but we wore him down, too."

Defensive tackle Gary Jeter also claimed that the loss of Bell spurred the Trojans.

"Ricky's loss was more of a boost than a letdown," said Jeter. "He's a helluva player and an individual, and we knew we had to go just that much harder.

"Leach burned me a couple times, but he's awfully tough to bring down. He'd duck, and I'd fall for it, then he'd set me up. I have a lot of respect for that man."

Evans, SC defense smother Michigan

Going into the New Year's Day struggle, Michigan had ranked No. 1 in the nation in total offense (448.1 yards per game), rushing (362.6) and scoring offense (38.7 points per game).

The Wolverines were touted as quick and mobile, slick with the option and resourceful with a "big play" passing game on sophomore quarterback Rick Leach's arm.

INSTEAD, they came off as dull and unimaginative as the Trojans played textbook defense—the battering, swarming kind that had bottled UCLA's option attack six weeks earlier.

Michigan wound up the afternoon with 231 yards in total offense, 155 on the ground.

USC stationed its tackles a yard or two off the line of scrimmage in the first half, giving the Trojans a better read as Michigan's option plays developed.

But in the second half, when the Trojans' physical superiority began to wear down the Wolverines, USC played tight on the line of scrimmage and fired hard at Leach when he faded to pass.

Three days before the game, USC defensive tackle Gary Jeter had said: "They're good drive blockers, but they can't pass-block worth a damn."

HE WAS right. The Wolverines relied on passing so seldom during the regular season that protecting the quarterback wasn't among their strengths. Consequently, Jeter and linebackers Rod Martin, Dave Lewis and Clay Matthews were able to tee off on Leach in obvious passing situations.

On offense, the Trojans took what the Wolverines gave them.

"They didn't do anything on defense we didn't expect," said Evans. "They were good athletes, but I think their coach told them not to get beat deep on passes.

"In our game plan, we felt we had to run the ball effectively and throw the short, underneath patterns to defeat their three-deep coverage."

Evans took full advantage of Michigan's soft underbelly, shooting medium-range curls and slants to Diggs, split end Randy Simmrin and tight end Bill Gay.

When Evans had the Wolverines back on their heels with passes, he would shoot White and Tatupu between the tackles for sizable gains.

USC chalked up 381 yards in total offense, 200 on the ground and 181 through the air.

Placekicker Glen Walker missed two field goal attempts, the first from 23 yards and the second from 45.

AT FIRST USC was lethargic, and the Trojans were blocking as though they had read the Conrad Dobler Blocking Manual. A holding penalty against them helped set up Michigan's touchdown.

After being penalized back to their 10, the Trojans punted only to midfield early in the second quarter.

From there, Michigan drove for a touchdown in 12 plays, Lytle diving over a stack of defenders at the 1.

But USC's Walt Underwood broke through and leaped high to block Bob Wood's placement, holding Michigan's lead to 6-0.

Evans was brilliant as the Trojans came right back to go 80 yards for a touchdown in 12 plays.

He hit Diggs on passes of 9 and 30 yards as the Wolverines failed to put on pressure, then stayed on the ground for the last 18 yards.

White and Tatupu pounded to the 1, where Evans faced a fourth down.

He called a timeout, conferred with Robinson and assistant Paul Hackett, then came back to fool the Wolverines with a slick move.

Evans faked a dive to White, delayed until Michigan converged on the Trojan runner, then rolled around left end for an easy touchdown. Walker's placement gave USC a 7-6 halftime lead.

EARLY IN the third quarter, Lytle fumbled a pitchout and USC recovered at the Michigan 8. But on the next play, White didn't get a firm grasp on a handoff and the ball bounced off his right knee as he approached the line. Michigan's Dom Tedesco recovered at the 9.

Each team had drives aborted early in the fourth quarter, Michigan's at the Trojan 36 and USC's at the Wolverine 2 on an interception.

But midway in the final period, the Trojans drove 58 yards in 8 plays for the clinching touchdown, a 27-yard pass to Simmrin and a 20-yard burst by Tatupu setting up White's seven-yard TD run.

Michigan showed one flurry of passing effectiveness, reaching the USC 17, chiefly on a brilliant 22-yard reception by wingback Jim Smith.

But Leach threw wildly on third and fourth downs, and the Trojans took possession with 2:09 remaining.

As the Trojans raced into their dressing quarters, Robinson clenched a fist and shouted: "Let's hear it for good, old Vince Evans."

It was about time somebody had a kind word for good, old Vince.

Evans: 'I'll treasure this rest of my life'

BY RICH ROBERTS
Staff Writer

In defense of Vince Evans, who once could not hit the bottom of the Grand Canyon with a forward pass, let it be said: Yes, he can.

The Rose Bowl? Not so good. The USC quarterback hit the bottom of the Arroyo Seco only five times in 20 tries during Saturday's 14-6 win over Michigan.

One pass was intercepted. The other 14 fell into the hands of his receivers, a wonder to behold.

"I just disregarded all those bad comments," Evans said after receiving the Citizens Savings Athletic Foundation trophy as the outstanding player in the game.

"I think if I would have listened to them, it would have weakened me as a player."

EVANS' ONLY WEAKNESS Saturday was in his right ankle, which he injured so severely in practice three days earlier that he feared his destiny would be denied.

"Oh, man," he said, "this was the biggest game of my life. I think I would have played hurt just to be able to play in this game.

"It was terrible. I couldn't walk Thursday. But I got a super tape job on it, tremendous treatment, a couple of shots, and the Lord was with me.

"This was my ultimate goal, man, to come to the Rose Bowl and be the leader of this team. It's been with me ever since 1967 when I fell in love with this school. I always dreamed to come here and be the quarterback of this team. This capped it off. I'm happy that we won the game and that I had a good game and that we're going out a winner. That's the only way to go."

Evans had something else going for him Saturday: mother power.

"Yeah, my mother's here, man," Vince beamed. "She's seen me play (in college) only once...back in Pittsburgh two years ago."

ON THAT OCCASION, Evans relieved Pat Haden, who was knocked silly, and brought the Trojans from 7-3 behind to a 16-7 win, although he did it more by running than passing.

"I just had a feeling I was going to do well today," Vince said. "Every time my mother's around I play well. She's a good luck piece for me. I wish I could carry her around in my pocket."

Mrs. Reva C. Evans would be a much lighter burden than the world's- worst-passer stigma Evans carried around until this season, when he improved dramatically from a 31 per cent thrower to a 52 per cent sharpshooter.

The Rose Bowl buried the old image for good, but he wasn't sure it was his best passing day.

"Well, I, uh...what were my stats?" he asked. "At Purdue I was 13 for 16. But I felt good for this game, really good."

He even forgot about the ankle.

"I wasn't thinking about it, man."

He certainly wasn't when he called his own number on two important running plays—USC's first touchdown and a 22-yard sprint that maintained ball control near the finish.

MICHIGAN LED 6-0 near the end of the half when USC worked the ball to the one-yard line, fourth-and-goal. Evans called time and went to the bench to see coach John Robinson. They did not discuss the possibility of settling for a field goal.

"No, man," Vince said, "we were thinking touchdown all the way.

"I suggested to him (Robinson) that because we had run that straight dive up the middle, they (the Wolverines) were suckering for that. So I advised the coach, 'Coach, why don't you let me keep the ball and go around the side, because nobody's out there?' He listened to me and it worked perfectly."

USC hadn't used the play since last season.

"Twenty-two Blast Keep is what we call it, so we got out of it. Then we cranked it up for this game because they hadn't seen it since last year."

The second time, two people in the world knew Evans was only going to fake a handoff to tailback Charles White.

"Coach told me to keep the ball," Vince said with a smile, "but don't tell the other players I'm gonna keep it. That takes away from the fake."

HIS TEAMMATES didn't get upset about the deception.

"After I gained long yardage," Vince said, "they loved it."

Evans disregarded No. 1-rated Pitt's 27-3 win over Georgia in the Sugar Bowl earlier in the day.

"The way we played today," he said, "I think it's evident that we're probably the best team in the nation."

Vince is happy with a Rose Bowl win and his shiny silver trophy.

"Where is it?" he said with a frantic start, jumping up off his seat.

IT WAS QUICKLY located a few feet away and Evans, greatly relieved, drew the symbol of his redemption to his side.

"It's a great tribute," he said, "like a boyhood dream come true.

"Basically, what it all is, if you have the confidence in yourself that you can do a competent job, good coaching like I've had from coach (Paul) Hackett and just going out and working hard every day and trying to be the best you can be, that's all there is to it.

"I always wanted to come to USC and be able to be in the Rose Bowl. O.J. Simpson, the Trojan horse, the band playing Conquest...a combination of things.

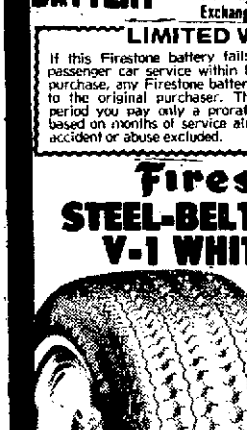

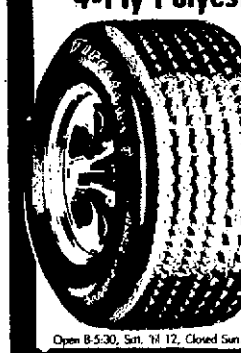

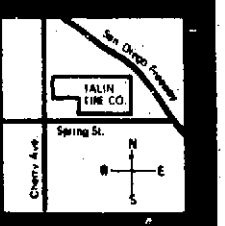

"I'll treasure this moment for the rest of my life."

Sports, Vacation Show opens today

The nation's first outdoor show—H. Werner Buck's 12th Sports, Vacation and Recreational Vehicle Exposition—begins at noon today at the Anaheim Convention Center. It will run through next Sunday. Hours are from noon to 8 p.m. today and next Sunday, 2-10 p.m. on weekday. Closing hours next Friday and Saturday will be 10:30 p.m.

The exposition will be several shows in one, with emphasis on fishing tackle, camping and backpacking gear, travel and vacation and a huge array of recreational vehicles. With the exception of the modular homes, most of the RVs seen at Dodger Stadium last year will be on display again. Even the Sikorsky Heli-Home, a gigantic helicopter finished like a recreational vehicle, will be on display.

THERE WILL BE travel booths from many states and countries along with a Foreign Film Festival that will see movies run continuously through the show hours.

Buck has also assembled a stage show in the Arena section of the Anaheim Center. Topping that show will be the water-skiing team from Cypress Gardens, Fla. Members of that team will do ballet, jumps and comic acts on the skis. They will be pulled by a power winch that will propel them on the tank's surface at high speed.

A Huck Finn Trout Pond is ready for the youmger set and the kids may try their luck at catching trout. Adults looking for new fishing tackle and wanting to learn how to use it will have the casting pools in the middle of Tackle Row.

Southern Gentlemen

Los Alamitos winner

Southern Gentlemen, a finalist in last month's $75,000 Champion of Champions, outran a strong field of allowance sprinters to win the featured Happy New Year Purse at Los Alamitos Race Course Saturday night.

Southern Gentlemen ran with the bunched field early in the 400-yard dash but started pulling ahead midway through the stretch and was a neck in front of Ed Dee at the wire. Luke Myles was in the saddle as the 4-year-old gelding registered his first victory in three starts at Los Alamitos this winter.

Southern Gentlemen had closed out his sophomore campaign by running fifth to Dash For Cash in the Champion of Champions and had a 1976 bankroll of slightly more than $55,000. A nominee to the Vessels Maturity next summer, Southern Gentlemen was clocked in 20.40 seconds over an "off" track.

Ed Dee, a 23-1 outsider, ran a big race under veteran jockey Robert Adair and just failed to get up. Dr. Twiehaus, another longshot, ran third. Hyjonijet, second choice in the betting to the winner by a slight margin, ran seventh.

Southern Gentlemen returned $5, $4 and $3.20 as the 3-2 favorite.

Major, minor stars vie today in Shrine Game

PALO ALTO (AP) — Several small-college stars, perhaps destined to become big names in pro football, will match talents against major college all-Americas in today's 52nd Shrine East-West football game.

West quarterbacks Joe Roth of California and Mark Jackson of Baylor will have as receivers such players as Gerald Butler of Nicholls, La., State and Doug Long of Whitworth College.

The East roster includes Eastern Kentucky wide receiver Elmo Boyd, who caught 48 passes this season. Boyd, Butler and Long are considered good bets to win starting berths in the National Football League.

The East-West game is played for the benefit of Shriners' hospitals for crippled children. Proceeds from last year's game, which drew a crowd of 76,000 to Stanford Stadium, increased to $7.2 million the amount raised for the charity through 51 years.

Scouts from NFL teams benefit from the game, too, watching many small-college players against major college stars. Five first-team all-Americas will be playing.

The East all-Americas are defensive lineman Eddie Edwards of Miami, Fla., and defensive back Bill Armstrong of Wake Forest. The West has offensive linemen Ted Albrecht of Cal and John Yarno of Idaho and defensive back Gary Green of Baylor.

U.S.-Russ swim meet

American and Russian swimmers will be looking for good early season times when they compete in a special meet at Mission Viejo today.

Swimmers from USC, UCLA, Long Beach State and the Mission Viejo Nadadores will compete against the Soviets in the meet at Mission Viejo's Marguerite Recreation Center pool beginning at noon.

Marina Koshevaia, who collected a gold medal in Montreal in the 200-meter breaststroke, heads a list of Russians that includes Marina Yurechenia, silver medalist in the 200 breaststroke; butterfly swimmer Tamara Shelofastova, and distance freestyler Vladimir Salnikov.

Shelofastova was a finalist in both the 100 and 200-meter butterfly, while Salnikov finished fifth in the 1,500-meter freestyle. Other freestylers are Larissa Tsareva, Irina Vlasova, Olga Klevakina, and Sergy Rusin.

The U.S. contingent is led by Tim Shaw, Shirley Babashoff, Brian Goodell and John Naber.

Riot in Paris takes on trio of East's best

Bill Shoemaker and Riot in Paris figure to be a tough combination to beat at Santa Anita today.

Even with high weight of 125 pounds, Bradley and Whittingham's multi-stakes winner is expected to be favored to turn back three quality challengers from the East in the featured $56,500 San Gabriel Handicap.

The recent rainstorm has forced the 30th running of the 1⅛-mile turf event for 3-year-olds and up to be moved to the main course.

Voted Del Mar's horse of the meeting by virtue of his win over Avatar in the Del Mar Invitational this summer, Riot in Paris has also won the Bel Air Handicap and a division of the Inglewood Handicap at Hollywood Park this year.

The Kentucky-bred was third in the San Gabriel last year and is trained by Charlie Whittingham. Shoemaker will have the mount.

Rouge Sang, Distant Land and Teddy's Courage figure to challenge.

Second high-weight at 122 pounds, Rouge Sange won Italy's prized Gran Premio de Milano. He was third in the Man O'War Stakes at Belmont Park in his U.S. debut but went unplaced in his first race in California, the Oak Tree Invitational. Marco Castaneda is the jockey.

Distant Land, who holds the track record at Aqueduct for 1 1/16-miles on grass, comes off a win in the Stuyvesant Handicap at that New York track on Dec. 1. With only 115 pounds, the King Ranch horse will have Angel Cordero in the saddle.

The third Eastern invader is Harbor View Farm's Teddy's Courage, who will carry 116 pounds with Darrel McHargue aboard.

After missing by a neck in the $100,000-added Hawthorne Gold Cup, the colt was runnerup to subsequent Jockey Club Gold Cup star Great Contractor in a division of the Lawrence Realization, and again was second in Aqueduct's Discovery Cap on Dec. 4.

Completing the small field of seven are Exact Duplicate, Ribot Grande and Sibirri. The latter is coupled with Riot in Paris.

SPRINTER My Juliet started 1977 on a positive note Saturday, running away with the 6-furlong Las Flores Handicap while beating six distaff rivals.

Ridden by regular jockey Tony Black, who flew in from Philadelphia for the race, George Weasel's just-turned 5-year-old jumped in front at the start, battled Modus Vivendi down the backstretch, then began pulling away to win by a length in the $44,750 race.

Winner of racing's coveted Eclipse award as the best sprinter of 1976, My Juliet was an odds-on favorite of the crowd of 25,455, returning $3.80, $3 and $2.40 on a track that was labeled good. Her 128-pound impost was a record weight a winner has carried for the Las Flores, which was run in 1:10⅘.

Just a Kick, with Laffit Pincay was second, Juliana F. with Fernado Toro aboard, third.

Silver Streak did a detour

By BOB THOMAS
Associated Press

Ever hear of an express train that made the run from Los Angeles to Chicago via the Canadian Rockies?

That's what happened with the production of the new 20th Century-Fox film, "Silver Streak," and its makers are distressed by the roundabout route. Says director Arthur Hiller, "I think it's terrible that at a time when the film industry is trying to keep production in this country, other industries help send production elsewhere."

"Silver Streak" concerns intrigue and murder aboard a crack Los Angeles-Chicago train, and it climaxes when the runaway engine crashes into the Chicago terminal. The obvious place to film it would have been along the Atchison, Topeka and Santa Fe route. But Santa Fe said no thanks.

"MAYBE they didn't like the script," suggested Hiller. "I also heard the Santa Fe had a serious accident during the filming of a movie a few years ago and was leery of any more film connections.

"Amtrak was agreeable to cooperate, but it only owns trains, not roadbeds. We couldn't find any railroad that offered the locales we needed: mountains, desert, prairies and Illinois farmland. So we had to go to Canada."

For Hiller, that wasn't a sacrifice. He was born in Edmonton, Canada, got his start as a director with the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation; he enjoyed working with Canadian actors and set workers, who comprised one-third of the crew.

"IT WAS fun in that respect," said Hiller. But he added that it meant loss of money to American film workers and suppliers who would have had a bigger share of the film's $6 million budget. Hiller filmed scenes of the Silver Streak leaving the Los Angeles Union Station and arriving in Chicago, but the journey between was shot in Calgary, Toronto and along the route of the Canadian Pacific.

The climactic scene of the locomotive plowing through the terminal was filmed at Burbank's Lockheed Aircraft plant, of all places.

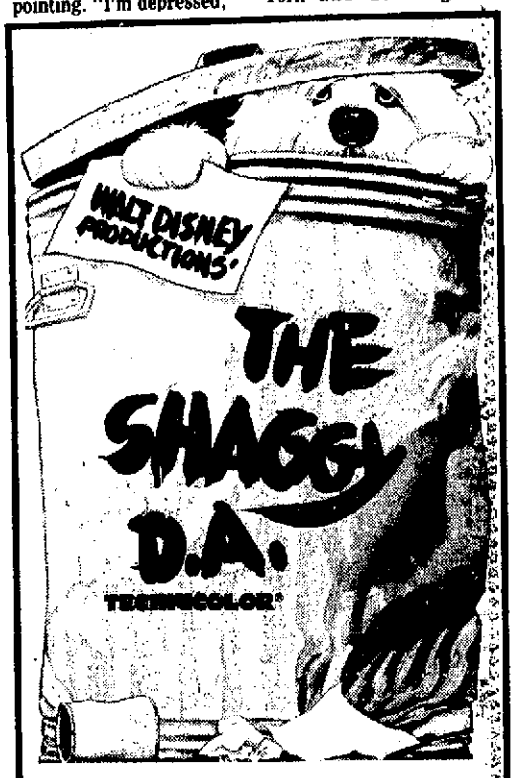

"That was entirely the work of the production designer, Al Sweeney," said Hiller, 53. "We had talked about using miniatures or matte shots, but Al said, 'Why not go full-scale?' We laughed, but Al was serious. He built portions of the station and the gift shop in two hangars at Lockheed, then constructed a full-scale mockup of the engine, just the front itself, nothing on the other side.

"THE MOCKUP was placed on a truck bed, and a stunt man crashed it through the set, driving without seeing where he was going. All the angles were worked out with a half-dozen cameras. Fortunately, we only had to do it once."

Hiller, whose credits include "The Americanization of Emily," "Love Story," "The Hospital," "Plaza Suite" and "Man of La Mancha," remarked that "Silver Streak" proved his toughest film. Not because of the actors, who included Gene Wilder, Jill Clayburgh, Richard Pryor, Patrick McGoohan, Ray Walston and Ned Beatty. The hard part was directing the trains, which could take hours to be turned around for another take.

"Silver Streak" was Fox's holiday attraction and will continue in release around the country.

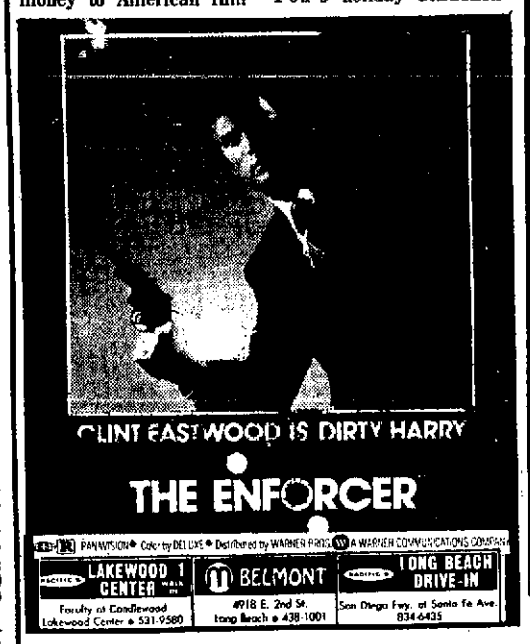

HILLER said initial reviews have been disappointing. "I'm depressed," said the director. "Our sneak previews had a terrific reaction, as did the selective previews at several theaters in New York and Los Angeles.

PRAGUE (AP) — Canada, getting goals from six players, beat the United States, 8-2, Saturday night at the World Junior Ice Hockey Championships at Zvolen, Slovakia.

DONNELL CULPEPPER

Sports, Vacation Show opens today

The nation's first outdoor show—H. Werner Buck's 12th Sports, Vacation and Recreational Vehicle Exposition—begins at noon today at the Anaheim Convention Center. It will run through next Sunday. Hours are from noon to 8 p.m. today and next Sunday, 2-10 p.m. on weekday. Closing hours next Friday and Saturday will be 10:30 p.m.

The exposition will be several shows in one, with emphasis on fishing tackle, camping and backpacking gear, travel and vacation and a huge array of recreational vehicles. With the exception of the modular homes, most of the RVs seen at Dodger Stadium last year will be on display again. Even the Sikorsky Helidome, a gigantic helicopter finished like a recreational vehicle, will be on display.

THERE WILL BE travel booths from many states and countries along with a Foreign Film Festival that will see movies run continuously through the show hours.

Buck has also assembled a stage show in the Arena section of the Anaheim Center. Topping that show will be the water-skiing team from Cypress Gardens, Fla. Members of that team will do ballet, jumps and comic acts on the skis. They will be pulled by a power winch that will propel them on the tank's surface at high speed.

A Huck Finn Trout Pond is ready for the younger set and the kids may try their luck at catching trout. Adults looking for new fishing tackle and wanting to learn how to use it will have the casting pools in the middle of Tackle Row.

Major, minor stars vie today in Shrine Game

PALO ALTO (AP) — Several small-college stars, perhaps destined to become big names in pro football, will match talents against major college all-Americans in today's 52nd Shrine East-West football game.

West quarterbacks Joe Roth of California and Mark Jackson of Baylor will have as receivers such players as Gerald Butler of Nicholls, La., State and Doug Long of Whitworth College.

The East roster includes Eastern Kentucky wide receiver Elmo Boyd, who caught 48 passes this season. Boyd, Butler and Long are considered good bets to win starting berths in the National Football League.

The East-West game is played for the benefit of Shriners' hospitals for crippled children. Proceeds from last year's game, which drew a crowd of 76,000 to Stanford Stadium, increased to $7.2 million the amount raised for the charity through 51 years.

Scouts from NFL teams benefit from the game, too, watching many small-college players against major college stars. Five first-team all-Americas will be playing.

The East all-Americas are defensive lineman Eddie Edwards of Miami, Fla., and defensive back Bill Armstrong of Wake Forest. The West has offensive linemen Ed Albrecht of Cal and John Yarno of Idaho and defensive back Gary Green of Baylor.

U.S.-Russ swim meet

American and Russian swimmers will be looking for good early season times when they compete in a special meet at Mission Viejo today.

Swimmers from USC, UCLA, Long Beach State and the Mission Viejo Nadadores will compete against the Soviets in the meet at Mission Viejo's Marguerite Recreation Center pool beginning at noon.

Marina Koshevaia, who collected a gold medal in Montreal in the 200-meter breaststroke, heads a list of Russians that includes Marina Yurechenia, silver medalist in the 200 breaststroke; butterfly swimmer Tamara Shelofastova, and distance freestyler Vladimir Salnikov.

Shelofastova was a finalist in both the 100 and 200-meter butterfly, while Salnikov finished fifth in the 1,500-meter freestyle. Other freestylers are Larissa Tsareva, Irina Vlasova, Olga Klevakina, and Sergy Rusin.

The U.S. contingent is led by Tim Shaw, Shirley Babashoff, Brian Goodell and John Naber.

Southern Gentlemen Los Alamitos winner

Southern Gentlemen, a finalist in last month's $75,000 Champion of Champions, outran a strong field of allowance sprinters to win the featured Happy New Year Purse at Los Alamitos Race Course Saturday night.

Southern Gentlemen ran with the bunched field early in the 400-yard dash but started pulling ahead midway through the stretch and was a neck in front of Ed Dee at the wire. Luke Myles was in the saddle as the 4-year-old gelding registered his first victory in three starts at Los Alamitos this winter.

Southern Gentlemen had closed out his sophomore campaign by running fifth to Dash For Cash in the Champion of Champions and had a 1976 bankroll of slightly more than $55,000. A nominee to the Vessels Maturity next summer, Southern Gentlemen was clocked in 20.40 seconds over an "off" track.

Ed Dee, a 23-1 outsider, ran a big race under veteran jockey Robert Adair and just failed to get up. Dr. Twiehaus, another longshot, ran third. Hyjonijet, second choice in the betting to the winner by a slight margin, ran seventh.

Southern Gentlemen returned $5, $4 and $3.20 as the 3-2 favorite.

Riot in Paris takes on trio of East's best

Bill Shoemaker and Riot in Paris figure to be a tough combination to beat at Santa Anita today.

Even with high weight of 125 pounds, Bradley and Whittingham's multi-stakes winner is expected to be favored to turn back three quality challengers from the East in the featured $56,500 San Gabriel Handicap.

The recent rainstorm has forced the 30th running of the 1⅛-mile turf event for 3-year-olds and up to be moved to the main course.

Voted Del Mar's horse of the meeting by virtue of his win over Avatar in the Del Mar Invitational this summer, Riot in Paris has also won the Bel Air Handicap and a division of the Inglewood Handicap at Hollywood Park this year.

The Kentucky-bred was third in the San Gabriel last year and is trained by Charlie Whittingham. Shoemaker will have the mount.

Rouge Sang, Distant Land and Teddy's Courage figure to challenge.

Second high-weight at 122 pounds, Rouge Sange won Italy's prized Gran Premio de Milano. He was third in the Man O'War Stakes at Belmont Park in his U.S. debut but went unplaced in his first race in California, the Oak Tree Invitational. Marco Castaneda is the jockey.

Distant Land, who holds the track record at Aqueduct for 1 1/16-miles on grass, comes off a win in the Stuyvesant Handicap at that New York track on Dec. 1. With only 115 pounds, the King Ranch horse will have Angel Cordero in the saddle.

The third Eastern invader is Harbor View Farm's Teddy's Courage, who will carry 116 pounds with Darrel McHargue aboard.

After missing by a neck in the $100,000-added Hawthorne Gold Cup, the colt was runnerup to subsequent Jockey Club Gold Cup star Great Contractor in a division of the Lawrence Realization, and again was second in Aqueduct's Discovery Cap on Dec. 4.

Completing the small field of seven are Exact Duplicate, Ribot Grande and Sibirri. The latter is coupled with Riot in Paris.

SPRINTER My Juliet started 1977 on a positive note Saturday, running away with the 6-furlong Las Flores Handicap while beating six distaff rivals.

Ridden by regular jockey Tony Black, who flew in from Philadelphia for the race, George Weasel's just-turned 5-year-old jumped in front at the start, battled Modus Vivendi down the backstretch, then began pulling away to win by a length in the $44,750 race.

Winner of racing's coveted Eclipse award as the best sprinter of 1976, My Juliet was an odds-on favorite of the crowd of 25,455, returning $3.80, $3 and $2.40 on a track that was labeled good. Her 128-pound impost was a record weight a winner has carried for the Las Flores, which was run in 1:10⅘.

Just a Kick, with Laffit Pincay was second, Juliana F. with Fernado Toro aboard, third.

Silver Streak did a detour

By BOB THOMAS
Associated Press

Ever hear of an express train that made the run from Los Angeles to Chicago via the Canadian Rockies?

That's what happened with the production of the new 20th Century-Fox film, "Silver Streak," and its makers are distressed by the roundabout route. Says director Arthur Hiller, "I think it's terrible that at a time when the film industry is trying to keep production in this country, other industries help send production elsewhere."

"Silver Streak" concerns intrigue and murder aboard a crack Los Angeles-Chicago train, and it climaxes when the runaway engine crashes into the Chicago terminal. The obvious place to film it would have been along the Atchison, Topeka and Santa Fe route. But Santa Fe said no thanks.

"MAYBE they didn't like the script," suggested Hiller. "I also heard the Santa Fe had a serious accident during the filming of a movie a few years ago and was leery of any more film connections.

"Amtrak was agreeable to cooperate, but it only owns trains, not roadbeds. We couldn't find any railroad that offered the locales we needed: mountains, desert, prairies and Illinois farmland. So we had to go to Canada."

For Hiller, that wasn't a sacrifice. He was born in Edmonton, Canada, got his start as a director with the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation; he enjoyed working with Canadian actors and set workers, who comprised one-third of the crew.

"IT WAS fun in that respect," said Hiller. But he added that it meant loss of money to American film workers and suppliers who would have had a bigger share of the film's $6 million budget. Hiller filmed scenes of the Silver Streak leaving the Los Angeles Union Station and arriving in Chicago, but the journey between was shot in Calgary, Toronto and along the route of the Canadian Pacific.

The climactic scene of the locomotive plowing through the terminal was filmed at Burbank's Lockheed Aircraft plant, of all places.

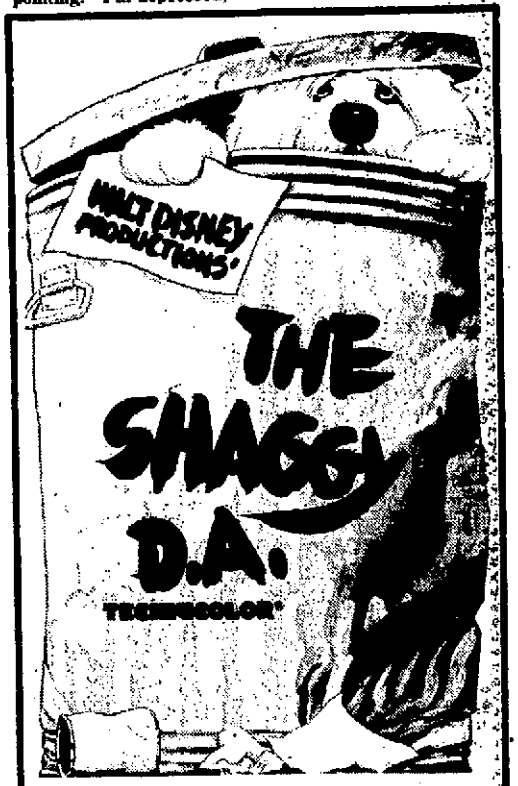

"That was entirely the work of the production designer, Al Sweeney," said Hiller, 53. "We had talked about using miniatures or matte shots, but Al said, 'Why not go full-scale?' We laughed, but Al was serious. He built portions of the station and the gift shop in two hangars at Lockheed, then constructed a full-scale mockup of the engine, just the front itself, nothing on the other side.

"THE MOCKUP was placed on a truck bed, and a stunt man crashed it through the set, driving without seeing where he was going. All the angles were worked out with a half-dozen cameras. Fortunately, we only had to do it once."

Hiller, whose credits include "The Americanization of Emily," "Love Story," "The Hospital, "Plaza Suite" and "Man of La Mancha," remarked that "Silver Streak" proved his toughest film. Not because of the actors, who included Gene Wilder, Jill Clayburgh, Richard Pryor, Patrick McGoohan, Ray Walston and Ned Beatty. The hard part was directing the trains, which could take hours to be turned around for another take.

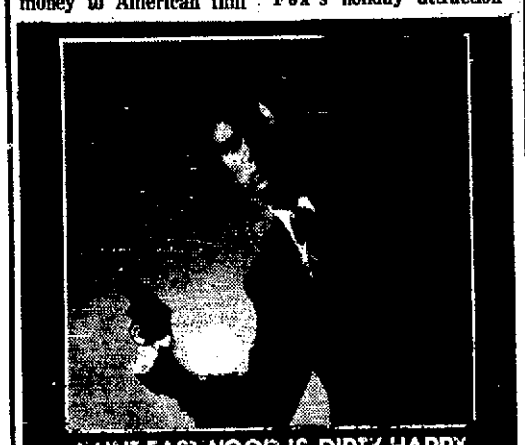

"Silver Streak" was Fox's holiday attraction and will continue in release around the country.

HILLER said initial reviews have been disappointing. "I'm depressed," said the director. "Our sneak previews had a terrific reaction, as did the selective previews at several theaters in New York and Los Angeles.

Watergate film called a gem in so-so year

By NORM GOLDSTEIN

NEW YORK (AP)—Perhaps it is only fitting in this presidential election year that the outstanding film of 1976 be a politically related one: "All the President's Men."

And perhaps, too, it is only fitting in a time of monstrous movie costs that the year ended with the mammoth, $20-million-plus remake of the classic monster movie, "King Kong."

Beyond those movie "events," however, the 1976 movie year seemed a sometime thing—no "blockbusters" a la "The Exorcist" or "Jaws" or "The Godfather." There were a lot of "pretty good" attractions, many with good things in mediocre efforts, many with superb performances in disappointing entries and disappointing things in near-excellent ones.

ROBERT REDFORD

So, instead of choosing the traditional "Top 10" — there aren't that many Hollywood efforts that truly suit the description—here's a random reflection on the cinema sights of '76:

"All the President's Men" is a gem. Based on the Woodward-Bernstein book recounting the successful efforts of those two Washington reporters in uncovering the Watergate scandal, it is marvelously more than a "political" picture. It is just fine movie-making and movie-watching in all its aspects.

From the real, "human" portrayals of the two reporters, by Robert Redford and Dustin Hoffman—two superstars deserving of the description—to the featured roles of Jason Robards and Hal Holbrook, among others, the well-paced directing (Alan Pakula), the attention to detail in every respect, this one hits the peak.

There were other cinematic looks at "Americana," historical and contemporary, but mostly disappointing.

"Buffalo Bill and the Indians" goes back 100 years or so to debunk the Buffalo Bill legend via Paul Newman and director Robert Altman. Altman publicly stated his own disappointment with the effort. Only a few disagreed with him.

DUSTIN HOFFMAN

"The Front" recalls the show business blacklist in television and general Communist hysteria of the 1950s — with the offbeat casting of Woody Allen in the lead role. Somehow, it doesn't seem to capture the scope and significance of its chosen subject.

A more contemporary satire on the American phenomenon of television—and a stronger attraction—is "Network." A combination of Paddy Chayefsky's powerful screenplay and Peter Finch's performance produced heavy audience reaction.

The movie version of folk singer Woody Guthrie's biography, "Bound for Glory," is a fine effort led by David Carradine in the starring role.

On the lighter side, Mel Brooks was back (after "Blazing Saddles" and "Young Frankenstein") with "Silent Movie," a sometimes hilarious spoof of the silent movie (what else?) genre. No dialogue. The most sound you hear is your own laughter.

AND WHAT would a comedy year be without a pink panther? "The Pink Panther Strikes Again"—and it does—in this fourth of the Blake Edwards-Peter Sellers (Inspector Clouseau) laugh fests.

"Murder By Death" took another popular genre, the murder mystery, down the satire street, with an "all-star" cast portraying recognizable detectives of fiction—and a deaf maid and a blind butler—from a Neil Simon screenplay.

"Bad News Bears" turned out to be a surprising comedy find of the year with Walter Matthau.

America took ride on Freedom Train

MIAMI (AP) — They were some seven million strong, the throngs of Americans who turned out during the past 21 months to see the Freedom Train before it chugged away from its last tour stop in Florida.

They were parents and children and the elderly. And often they stood in line for up to eight hours for a 24-minute conveyorbelt ride through 10 display cars filled with memorabilia of American history like an original copy of Tom Paine's "Common Sense," Shirley Temple's teddy bear and boxer Joe Frazier's robe.

They came to see the red, white and blue exhibit for different reasons. Barbara Sefton of Pembroke Pines, Fla., brought her children "so the kids can see all the things there are, like history."

Barbara Brown of Hialeah said she brought her family "because it's about our country, the Bicentennial, an overview of the United States."

Henry Stein of Miami said he brought his two young sons because "it's the only time they'll ever get to see anything like this in a lifetime."

The Freedom Train started its 25,833-mile, cross-country run on April 1, 1975. And since that time, the train and its more than 550 artifacts have stopped in 138 cities in 48 states.

Petr Spurney, president and chief executive officer of the American Freedom Train Foundation, said the biggest crowds turned out in Anaheim. He said daily crowds averaged 17,846 there.

The final count, New Year's Eve, was 6,762,965. The last visitors were four members of the Frederick Rockwell family of Fort Lauderdale.

"The Southwest and the Midwest generated a little bit more Americana than the Northeast because the Bicentennial was much stronger there," Spurney said. "In some of the smaller towns, we were the Bicentennial to many of the people. In the Northeast we were one of many projects."

But Spurney said even in the Northeast, crowds consistently ran to 80 per cent of capacity. He said he expected the $17.5 million project to break even once the cars and some artifacts are sold.

He said $5.5 million was donated by several large corporate sponsors and some smaller ones and the rest of the cost was made up by ticket sales. The foundation is asking $750,000 for the cars.

The train is heading toward Washington, for dismantling, and the staff is getting ready to head toward homes around the country.

Fireman Allan Phillips, 37, of Fort Lauderdale said he stayed with the train since the concept was first developed by a New York commodity broker in 1969 even though "it's been a long, hard job."

"I got dedicated to the engine. I just couldn't get over these guys who put in thousand of dollars and hours to make this thing work."

Judy Booth, 28, went to work for the train seven months ago when it was passing through Knoxville, Tenn., and has stayed with it since.

Moonshiners kept on run by agents

WASHINGTON (AP)— Moonshiners are still suffering from a year-long hangover because of tough agents and less demand for "white lightning," the government says.

The Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms reported Saturday that the number of illegal stills put out of business by the government dropped from 721 in 1975 to 557 in 1976, a record low since the repeal of Prohibition in 1933.

Rex D. Davis, director of the bureau, said fewer stills were seized because fewer stills were in operation last year. He attributed this to tough law enforcement and diminished demand.

"Increased cost and lower public demand for often poisonous moonshine now make it less profitable for moonshiners to operate," he said.

BUT HE said the 557 stills that were destroyed were capable of producing 289,000 gallons a year, representing a potential tax loss to the government of $3 million. About 11,000 gallons of liquor actually were destroyed by the bureau's agents, he said.

All but a handful of the stills were in the southeastern United States, with 137 in North Carolina alone. Next was Georgia with 127, followed by Alabama with 112.

The largest still destroyed by agents was in Johnston County, N.C. It was capable of producing 120 gallons of moonshine liquor daily, Davis said.

THE U.S. Customs Service said in a year-end report that drug seizures were up 10 per cent in 1976 from the previous year. There were 23,000 drug seizures with a potential street-sale value of $631 million, a dollar total that was 39 per cent above the previous year.

Seizures included 271 pounds of heroin, 1,135 pounds of cocaine, 7,953 pounds of hashish and 388 tons of marijuana.

There were 21,000 persons arrested on drug violations, up 5 per cent from 1975.

Thieves turn to CB radios

SACRAMENTO (AP) — All you good buddies out there better keep a close watch on your CB radios.

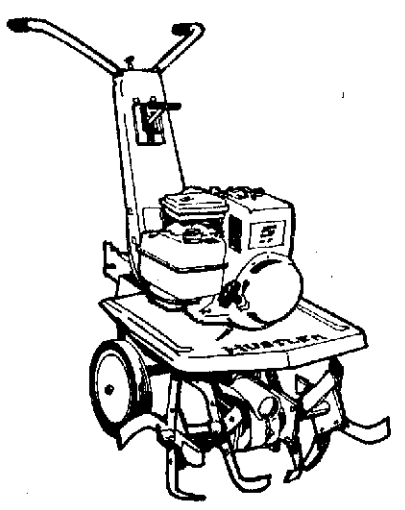

The Sacramento County sheriff's office said Saturday there were at least 1,730 CB thefts in the county area outside the city of Sacramento in 1976.

And those were only the reported thefts, said Sheriff's Lt. Louis Fatur. He estimated that the value of those radios reported stolen was over $302,000.

Watergate film called a gem in so-so year

By NORM GOLDSTEIN

NEW YORK (AP)—Perhaps it is only fitting in this presidential election year that the outstanding film of 1976 be a politically related one: "All the President's Men."

And perhaps, too, it is only fitting in a time of monstrous movie costs that the year ended with the mammoth, $20-million-plus remake of the classic monster movie, "King Kong."

Beyond those movie "events," however, the 1976 movie year seemed a sometime thing—no "blockbusters" a la "The Exorcist" or "Jaws" or "The Godfather." There were a lot of "pretty good" attractions, many with good things in mediocre efforts, many with superb performances in disappointing entries and disappointing things in near-excellent ones.

ROBERT REDFORD

So, instead of choosing the traditional "Top 10" — there aren't that many Hollywood efforts that truly suit the description—here's a random reflection on the cinema sights of '76:

"All the President's Men" is a gem. Based on the Woodward-Bernstein book recounting the successful efforts of those two Washington reporters in uncovering the Watergate scandal, it is marvelously more than a "political" picture. It is just fine movie-making and movie-watching in all its aspects.

From the real, "human" portrayals of the two reporters, by Robert Redford and Dustin Hoffman—two superstars deserving of the description—to the featured roles of Jason Robards and Hal Holbrook, among others, the well-paced directing (Alan Pakula), the attention to detail in every respect, this one hits the peak.

There were other cinematic looks at "Americana," historical and contemporary, but mostly disappointing.

"Buffalo Bill and the Indians" goes back 100 years or so to debunk the Buffalo Bill legend via Paul Newman and director Robert Altman. Altman publicly stated his own disappointment with the effort. Only a few disagreed with him.

DUSTIN HOFFMAN

"The Front" recalls the show business blacklist in television and general Communist hysteria of the 1950s — with the offbeat casting of Woody Allen in the lead role. Somebow, it doesn't seem to capture the scope and significance of its chosen subject.

A more contemporary satire on the American phenomenon of television—and a stronger attraction—is "Network." A combination of Paddy Chayefsky's powerful screenplay and Peter Finch's performance produced heavy audience reaction.

The movie version of folk singer Woody Guthrie's biography, "Bound for Glory," is a fine effort led by David Carradine in the starring role.

On the lighter side, Mel Brooks was back (after "Blazing Saddles" and "Young Frankenstein") with "Silent Movie," a sometimes hilarious spoof of the silent movie (what else?) genre. No dialogue. The most sound you hear is your own laughter.

AND WHAT would a comedy year be without a pink panther? "The Pink Panther Strikes Again"—and it does—in this fourth of the Blake Edwards-Peter Sellers (Inspector Clouseau) laugh fests.

"Murder By Death" took another popular genre, the murder mystery, down the satire street, with an "all-star" cast portraying recognizable detectives of fiction—and a deaf maid and a blind butler—from a Neil Simon screenplay.

"Bad News Bears" turned out to be a surprising comedy find of the year with Walter Matthau.

America took ride on Freedom Train

MIAMI (AP) — They were some seven million strong, the throngs of Americans who turned out during the past 21 months to see the Freedom Train before it chugged away from its last tour stop in Florida.

They were parents and children and the elderly. And often they stood in line for up to eight hours for a 24-minute conveyor-belt ride through 10 display cars filled with memorabilia of American history like an original copy of Tom Paine's "Common Sense," Shirley Temple's teddy bear and boxer Joe Frazier's robe.

They came to see the red, white and blue exhibit for different reasons. Barbara Sefton of Pembroke Pines, Fla., brought her children "so the kids can see all the things there are, like history."

Barbara Brown of Hialeah said she brought her family "because it's about our country, the Bicentennial, an overview of the United States."

Henry Stein of Miami said he brought his two young sons because "it's the only time they'll ever get to see anything like this in a lifetime."

The Freedom Train started its 25,833-mile, cross-country run on April 1, 1975. And since that time, the train and its more than 550 artifacts have stopped in 138 cities in 48 states.

Petr Spurney, president and chief executive officer of the American Freedom Train Foundation, said the biggest crowds turned out in Anaheim. He said daily crowds averaged 17,846 there.

The final count, New Year's Eve, was 6,762,965. The last visitors were four members of the Frederick Rockwell family of Fort Lauderdale.

"The Southwest and the Midwest generated a little bit more Americana than the Northeast because the Bicentennial was much stronger there," Spurney said. "In some of the smaller towns, we were the Bicentennial to many of the people. In the Northeast we were one of many projects."

But Spurney said even in the Northeast, crowds consistently ran to 80 per cent of capacity. He said he expected the $17.5 million project to break even once the cars and some artifacts are sold.

He said $6.5 million was donated by several large corporate sponsors and some smaller ones and the rest of the cost was made up by ticket sales. The foundation is asking $750,000 for the cars.

The train is heading toward Washington, for dismantling, and the staff is getting ready to head toward homes around the country.

Fireman Allan Phillips, 37, of Fort Lauderdale said he stayed with the train since the concept was first developed by a New York commodity broker in 1969 even though "it's been a long, hard job."

"I got dedicated to the engine. I just couldn't get over these guys who put in thousand of dollars and hours to make this thing work."

Judy Booth, 28, went to work for the train seven months ago when it was passing through Knoxville, Tenn., and has stayed with it since.

Moonshiners kept on run by agents

WASHINGTON (AP)— Moonshiners are still suffering from a year-long hangover because of tough agents and less demand for "white lightning," the government says.

The Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms reported Saturday that the number of illegal stills put out of business by the government dropped from 721 in 1975 to 557 in 1976, a record low since the repeal of Prohibition in 1933.

Rex D. Davis, director of the bureau, said fewer stills were seized because fewer stills were in operation last year. He attributed this to tough law enforcement and diminished demand.

"Increased cost and lower public demand for often poisonous moonshine now make it less profitable for moonshiners to operate," he said.

BUT HE said the 557 stills that were destroyed were capable of producing 289,000 gallons a year, representing a potential tax loss to the government of $3 million. About 11,000 gallons of liquor actually were destroyed by the bureau's agents, he said.

All but a handful of the stills were in the southeastern United States, with 137 in North Carolina alone. Next was Georgia with 127, followed by Alabama with 112.

The largest still destroyed by agents was in Johnston County, N.C. It was capable of producing 120 gallons of moonshine liquor daily, Davis said.

THE U.S. Customs Service said in a year-end report that drug seizures were up 10 per cent in 1976 from the previous year. There were 23,000 drug seizures with a potential street-sale value of $631 million, a dollar total that was 39 per cent above the previous year.

Seizures included 271 pounds of heroin, 1,135 pounds of cocaine, 7,953 pounds of hashish and 388 tons of marijuana.

There were 21,000 persons arrested on drug violations, up 5 per cent from 1975.

Thieves turn to CB radios

SACRAMENTO (AP) — All you good buddies out there better keep a close watch on your CB radios.

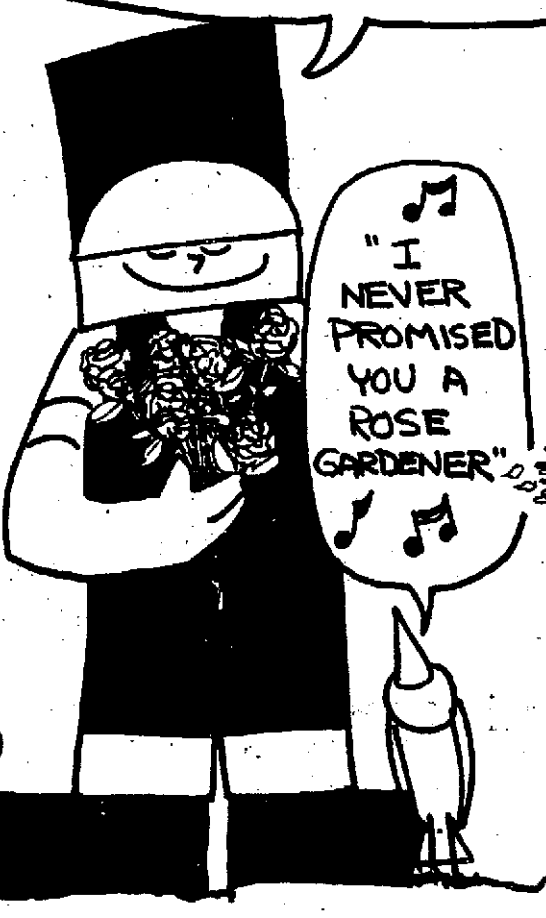

The Sacramento County sheriff's office said Saturday there were at least 1,730 CB thefts in the county area outside the city of Sacramento in 1976.

And those were only the reported thefts, said Sheriff's Lt. Louis Fatur. He estimated that the value of those radios reported stolen was over $302,000.

Women's impact felt in '76

By JOY STILLEY
AP Newsfeatures Writer

NEW YORK (UPI) — While a Bicentennial-conscious nation was taking a year-long nostalgic look at its past, American women were writing new history in 1976.

They broke the sex barrier at the U.S. military academies, enrolling at West Point, Annapolis and the Air Force Academy, after a law signed by President Ford abolished the all-male tradition at those institutions.

Women also entered the Coast Guard Academy, to become the first female cadets there since its founding in 1876.

In a presidential election year, women's political impact was evident and by the time Rosalynn Carter became First Lady-elect her face and her stand on various issues were already familiar all over the United States.

Wives of the major candidates — Mrs. Carter, Joan Mondale, Betty Ford and Elizabeth Dole — struck out on their own across the country on tough campaign tours. In hard-hitting speeches they gave their own views, as well as explained their husbands' positions, which they sometimes didn't agree with.

WOMEN IN POLITICS

A woman even campaigned for president, on an anti-abortion platform: Ellen McCormack, 49-year-old Long Island housewife, mother and grandmother, came in fifth in the balloting at the Democratic National Convention.

That gathering saw Rep. Lindy Boggs, D-La., presiding as permanent "chairperson," the first woman to hold that position in the party's history, while Rep. Barbara Jordan, D-Tex., was keynote speaker.

Mary Louise Smith, 62, first woman to be Republican National Chairman, was continued in that post after the Republican convention but in November announced her resignation.

The election of Dixy Lee Ray as governor of Washington gave the nation a second female state government head, along with Gov. Ella Grasso of Connecticut. But otherwise gains were meager. There will be no woman in the Senate and the number of women holding House seats will decline by one, to 18, in the next Congress.

However, women everywhere were increasingly active in politics. Anne Armstrong of Texas, 48, a longtime Republican party worker and former White House counselor, was named by President Ford as the first woman to serve as U.S. Ambassador to Great Britain.

Rosemary L. Ginn, 63, Republican national committee woman from Missouri, succeeded Ruth L. Farkas as U.S. Ambassador to Luxemburg, and President Ford nominated Patricia M. Byrne, 51, as ambassador to Mali.

Shirley Temple Black, former child movie star who was previously ambassador to Ghana, became the first woman to hold the post of U.S. Chief of Protocol.

BY THE time she got to the Democratic Convention in July, Rosalynn Carter's face was as familiar as that of 'the girl next door' to the majority of the nation's voters, who elected her husband President in November.

JOAN Mondale, wife of vice president-elect Walter Mondale, also campaigned for the Democratic ticket.

A NEWSMAKER wherever she went, Betty Ford hit the campaign trail in support of her husband's candidacy for President. With her at right is Happy Rockefeller, wife of vice president Nelson Rockefeller.

ELIZABETH Dole, below, wife of Republican vice presidential candidate Robert Dole, struck out on her own to campaign for her husband.

FORMER White House counselor Anne Armstrong was named by President Ford as the first woman to serve as U.S. Ambassador to Great Britain.

Jeanne M. Holm, 54, retired from the Air Force, where she had been the nation's first woman major general, was appointed by President Ford as his special assistant for women's affairs. In that post she succeeded Patricia Sullivan Lindh, former Republican national committeewoman from Louisiana, who was named deputy assistant secretary of state for education and public affairs.

Evelyn Gandy, a 55-year-old attorney, became Mississippi's first woman lieutenant governor, elected to the post after serving two times as state treasurer.

In Annapolis, Md., 18-year-old Toni Louise Zimmerman, saying that her name infringed on her "dignity," officially changed it to Zimmerwoman.

Former Rep. Louise Day Hicks, an outspoken opponent of forced school desegregation busing, was elected president of the Boston City Council, the first woman in the city's history to hold the top council post.

Sally Stanford, as top vote getter in the city council election, was named mayor of Sausalito, a small community across the Golden Gate from her old home town of San Francisco, where she was once that city's best known bordello operator.

In political news abroad, Isabel Peron, 45, was ousted from office by a bloodless military coup after 21 months as president of Argentina following the death of her husband, Juan Peron. And Chian Ching, 63, lost her power in China after the death of her husband, Mao Tse-Tung.

Former first ladies were in the news during the year: Mamie Eisenhower, who spent 11 weeks in Washington's Walter Reed Army Medical Center with a viral infection, celebrated her 80th birthday; Lady Bird Johnson visited Israel; and Pat Nixon was hospitalized after suffering a stroke.

INVADING MALE STRONGHOLDS

Women seeking a toehold on the career ladder in fields previously dominated by men could take heart from the successes of their sisters during the year.

REP. Lindy Boggs, D-La., became the first female chairperson to preside at a Democratic Convention.

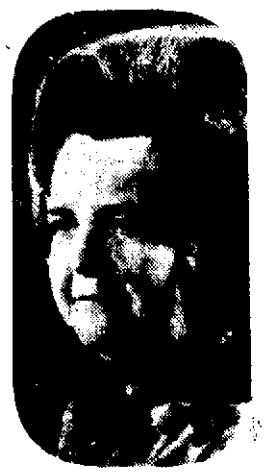

TEXAS Democratic Rep. Barbara Jordan was the keynote speaker at the party's nominating convention in New York.

ANOTHER "first" for women was the appointment of former child star Shirley Temple Black as U.S. Chief of Protocol.

TWO WOMEN lost their political power base in 1973: Isabel Peron, left, was ousted from office after 21 months as president of Argentina, and Chiang Ching, who fell from power after the death of her husband, Chairman Mao Tse-Tung of China.

AN OUTSPOKEN critic of forced school desegregation, Louise Day Hicks was elected president of the Boston City Council.

PLAYWRIGHT Tennessee Williams — survived bout with unusual form of cancer.

Q: Several years ago, you said in your column that Tennessee Williams once sailed to Bangkok to have surgery performed for what a specialist in New Orleans diagnosed as breast cancer. Does he explain the outcome of that scare in his newly published memoir? — Ms. Irene Dunbar, Buffalo.

A: Yes. The colorful Pulitzer prize-winning playwright goes explicitly into this scare. He also reveals his homosexual experiences beginning with his adolescence in St. Louis and his college days at the University of Missouri (where he "snuggled spoon-like" in bed with a fraternity brother). His heart doctor in New Orleans, who made the tentative diagnosis of a swelling under his left nipple, told him: "Carcinoma of the breat is extremely rare in men, but rare things do occur."

"The operation," Williams recounts, "was performed (in Bangkok), while I held my little bottle of nitroglycerin tablets in my hand, more worried about my heart than this alleged breast cancer ... It lasted for about an hour, and the pathological report was gynecomastia, which is a fairly commonplace enlargement of the male mammary gland in cases where the liver has been abused by heavy drinking.

"I returned to the States via San Francisco, and for the first time in my life I found my name hitting the headlines. One went something like this: 'Tennessee Williams Jokes About Cancer and Death.' Another described me as being 'ugly, elegant and arrogant.'" Though not exactly flattered, the author was happy to be alive to read the disparaging description.

Q: Did Jimmy Durante's wife throw a party this year, like she did last year, to celebrate his birthday? — Gerry Kreuger, Youngstown, Ohio.

A: Yes. Margie arranged a wingding for Jimmy's 83rd birthday. With an intimate group of some 800 friends there to toast the Schnoz by lighting candles and holding them aloft in the darkened Beverly-Hilton grand ballroom. Naturally the proceeds were donated to a worthy cause: the new Jimmy Durante Pavilion at the Villa Scabrini Home for the Aged.

Q: What was the longest sentence ever handed to infamous bank robber Willie Sutton? And who's been picked to play him in the movie of his life? — Sidney Galston, Queens, N.Y.

A: Dustin Hoffman and Al Pacino are the two names most mentioned for the lead in "Willie Sutton: Bankrobber," we're informed. It's likely the filming will be done this spring in New York, where Sutton was quite active in his chosen profession — robbing banks. Willie, incarcerated after escaping from Attica prison, said Judge Goldstein gave him a minimum of 132 years and a maximum of three lifetimes plus 105 years. The law relented and the then-68-year-old reprobate emerged a free man with many memories. What is he proudest of? Never, by accident or choice, did he ever kill or injure a victim of his sticky fingers. Asked whether he believes the adage "crime doesn't pay," Sutton grinned and added, "but writing about it does." Among the books found in his Dean Street (Brooklyn) room was "A Business of Your Own." Plus two best-sellers by noted clerics: Bishop Fulton J. Sheen's "Peace of Soul" and Rabbi Joshua Loth Liebman's "Peace of Mind."

Q: I heard that Carol Burnett is very religious and doesn't believe in doctors. Is this true? — J. Haignery, New Haven, Conn.

A: Yes and no. Yes, she is very religious. "I pray constantly and meditate," says Carol. "After all, praying is talking to God. Meditating is listening to Him. I was raised in the Christian Science religion and still hold to many of its beliefs. But I do go to doctors."

Q: Was Ben Vereen, the multi-award-winning star, really a minister before he entered show business? — Mrs. Carmen R., Minneapolis.

A: Almost. Ben had a yen for that calling in '65. "With no jobs in the offing and things getting real rough," he explained. "I went off to study for the Pentecostal ministry. My father was a deacon and my uncle a minister. But if there was any inspiration involved, it was from my godfather, who was a great influence on me. Things were bleak — desperate — and I needed to be somewhere. But it wasn't the seminary. I stayed six months and then decided I wasn't cut out for it."

Q: Do the Russians have any sense of humor about themselves? — Ms. Mary Rich, Tulsa, Okla.

A: Yes. They like to tell stories deftly mocking the socialist state, such as this one: "An American visited the Moscow zoo and was amazed to see both a lion and a lamb in the same cage. 'Do they get along well?' the Yank asked the Russian guide. 'They get along just fine,' was the reply. 'Of course, we have to put in a new lamb every day!'"

Q: Were tennis champs Chris Evert and her ex-beau, Jimmy Connors, ever formally engaged? — Robert Collins, Ft. Lauderdale, Fla.

A: Yes. They made the announcement Dec. 3, 1973. Later that month, when they were in South Africa for the South African Open, they went into a mine to watch a diamond being dug out of the earth. The sparkler was cut and shaped in their presence and later mounted in an engagement ring for Chris. The bride-to-be (or, as it turned out, not-to-be) gave Jimmy a gold ring and bracelet set entwined with elephant hair. Later, Jimmy's mother told them to wait, that "nobody wins Wimbledon on their honeymoon."

"THE SCHNOZ" Jimmy Durante and wife, Margie — celebrates another birthday with "several" hundred friends.

'Voyage of the Damned' a triumph of artistry

rex reed

As I expand my waistline with Christmas confections and resign myself to gluttony, commercial frenzy and the taxing, neurotic ritual of yet another holiday, I find it beneficial to have paused just long enough to savor one of the year's most moving, sensitive and sobering movie experiences, "Voyage of the Damned."

This wonderful film comes along at a time when most people don't want to think about anything serious, yet it will be a sad and despondent loss for anyone who misses it, for it carries more of the fragrance of human spirit than any other you will see.

"Voyage of the Damned" is the heartbreakingly true saga of the S.S. St. Louis, a luxury liner of the Hamburg-Amerika line that left Germany on May 13, 1939 with 937 Jewish refugees aboard on their way to political asylum in Cuba.

They thought they had purchased their freedom from Nazi tyranny, but what they didn't know was that the passenger list had been personally approved by Goebbels himself, the treasured exit permits and travel visas in their pockets were phony, the voyage was a massive propaganda move by the Fascists, and there was never any intention of allowing them to land safely.

While the heroic Morris Troper and his Jewish Agency joined forces with the brave, non-Nazi captain of the St. Louis to save the passengers' lives, the world waited calmly to see what would happen. We were on the eve of war, yet no country wanted to be responsible for its official outbreak, so the unfortunate passengers of the St. Louis found themselves pawns in an elaborate game of international chess as they floated in the Atlantic praying for a home.

"Voyage of the Damned" is the engrossing and powerful story of those innocent souls, of the chain of events that led them on their journey and of how some of them survived.

This is no "Ship of Fools." Nor is it one of those all-star catastrophies in which famous faces appear in cameos to serve tea and make sugary speeches about the fate of mankind. I kept waiting for one mangled accent, one corny line of dialogue, one scene out of sorts with the flow of the film. It never happened.

Director Stuart Rosenberg has done a magnificent job of assembling all the life stories so that every character has a purpose and a persona that adds weight and substance to the film. The entire body of the work itself stretches to encompass a wide panorama of endurance and experience.

THIS IS ONE epic film that has been made with precision, care and a myriad of cut-to-the-bone details that enrich and beautify its human fabric. At the end of its 2½ hour length, I was genuinely shocked to see it end.

I felt as though I had been a passenger, that these people with the dream of freedom in their hearts were personal friends. I didn't want to say goodby.

ACTRESS Katharine Ross is the surprise character in new film, "Voyage of the Damned," which receives high praise from reviewer Rex Reed.

It is one of the most touching things imaginable to see so many kindred spirits from so many diverse walks of life — knowing that a return to Germany meant a return to concentration camps, ghettos, brown-shirts, mob violence, the horrors of the Third Reich and certain death — joined in a common bond of hope.

Their joyless fates hang in the balance while the heartless structures of diplomatic red tape barter for them like cattle at a livestock show, yet they dance to Glenn Miller's "Moonlight Serenade," seizing each moment of borrowed happiness as though it's the last.

Books burned, families torn apart, homes defiled, their minds and their dreams are in fragments, like splinters of broken glass. Yet miraculously, they cling to life and an affirmation of life. It is more fulfilling and refreshing than I can tell you to see a movie about people instead of sex and violence and apathy.

And I do not believe there can be one potential member of the audience — even the most hardened among us — who will not feel as much love for them as I did.

TO WEAVE SUCH a splendid tapestry of humanity, a cast of unprecedented artistry was needed, and every performer in "Voyage of the Damned" has responded with the kind of collective sincerity and craftsmanship seldom encountered in today's cinema of selfishness and excess.

Everything about "Voyage of the Damned" has been touched by greatness, from Lalo Schifrin's adaptation of the German music, to the superb Spanish locations recreating the Havana harbor with its authentic flags, posters, Alfa Romeos, hibiscus and bougainvillaea blossoms, bamboo bars, coconut drinks and marimba bands. (Look closely and you'll even see the Cuban newspaper "La Habana" with its anti-semitic headlines of the exact days on which the real events took place.)

Every marcelled hairdo, cupid's-bow mouth, Art Deco ship decoration andlying swastika adds color and ambiance in just the right moment for just the right scene. No detail has been left untouched, on land or sea, to create a ship's log of the St. Louis' fateful journey. The massive job of cutting and editing is exemplary.

AND STILL, IT IS the acting one comes back to, for here is where the film's real strengths lie. There are so many things to praise it is difficult to know which moments to single out, but I especially admired Victor Spinetti, as a desperate doctor trying to get his children off the ship; Jose Ferrer's stupid-yet-cunning smirk as the corrupt Cuban immigration officer who holds so many trump cards in his slippery fingers; Malcolm McDowell's look of amusement when he sees aristocratic Faye Dunaway and Oskar Werner board the ship — not because they're Jewish but because they're dressed so elegantly among so many poor refugees, yet are in the same tragic position; Orson Wells, big as a housing development, as wise profiteer, who knows even the human race has a price; Helmut Griem, in another of his pretty, charming, blond Nazi roles, as an SS officer posing as a crew member to disrupt the ship's morale; the exhaustion and bewilderment laced with dignity on Wendy Hiller's face during her husband's burial at sea.

THESE ARE PEOPLE, not movie stars impersonating them. They are honest and sympathetic beyond offensiveness, and the tears they extract are profoundly honorable.

"Voyage of the Damned" is never sentimental. It is perceptive, eloquent and enduring, and many of the things in it moved me to tears without embarrassment or guilt. Most movies this year have shown nothing but contempt and hostility for their audiences; here, at last, is one that elevated its viewers.

That so many people with so much heart and talent have managed to weave so many individual accomplishments into a work of such magnitude at a time in movie history when even the best work is usually aborted and compromised is an amazing thing to applaud.

"Voyage of the Damned" towers above most ordinary movies in theme and execution, and I can only show my regard in terms of veneration and love. It's the perfect movie for this season, and for all seasons forthcoming.

Women's impact felt in '76

By JOY STILLEY
AP Newsfeatures Writer

NEW YORK (UPI) — While a Bicentennial-conscious nation was taking a year-long nostalgic look at its past, American women were writing new history in 1976.

They broke the sex barrier at the U.S. military academies, enrolling at West Point, Annapolis and the Air Force Academy, after a law signed by President Ford abolished the all-male tradition at those institutions.

Women also entered the Coast Guard Academy, to become the first female cadets there since its founding in 1876.

In a presidential election year, women's political impact was evident and by the time Rosalynn Carter became First Lady-elect her face and her stand on various issues were already familiar all over the United States.

Wives of the major candidates — Mrs. Carter, Joan Mondale, Betty Ford and Elizabeth Dole — struck out on their own across the country on tough campaign tours. In hard-hitting speeches they gave their own views, as well as explained their husbands' positions, which they sometimes didn't agree with.

WOMEN IN POLITICS

A woman even campaigned for president, on an anti-abortion platform: Ellen McCormack, 49-year-old Long Island housewife, mother and grandmother, came in fifth in the balloting at the Democratic National Convention.

That gathering saw Rep. Lindy Boggs, D-La., presiding as permanent "chairperson," the first woman to hold that position in the party's history, while Rep. Barbara Jordan, D-Tex., was keynote speaker.

Mary Louise Smith, 62, first woman to be Republican National Chairman, was continued in that post after the Republican convention but in November announced her resignation.

The election of Dixy Lee Ray as governor of Washington gave the nation a second female state government head, along with Gov. Ella Grasso of Connecticut. But otherwise gains were meager. There will be no woman in the Senate and the number of women holding House seats will decline by one, to 18, in the next Congress.

BY THE time she got to the Democratic Convention in July, Rosalynn Carter's face was as familiar as that of 'the girl next door' to the majority of the nation's voters, who elected her husband President in November.

JOAN Mondale, wife of vice president-elect Walter Mondale, also campaigned for the Democratic ticket.

However, women everywhere were increasingly active in politics. Anne Armstrong of Texas, 48, a longtime Republican party worker and former White House counselor, was named by President Ford as the first woman to serve as U.S. Ambassador to Great Britain.

Rosemary L. Ginn, 63, Republican national committee woman from Missouri, succeeded Ruth L. Farkas as U.S. Ambassador to Luxemburg, and President Ford nominated Patricia M. Byrne, 51, as ambassador to Mali.

Shirley Temple Black, former child movie star who was previously ambassador to Ghana, became the first woman to hold the post of U.S. Chief of Protocol.

REP. Lindy Boggs, D-La., became the first female chairperson to preside at a Democratic Convention.

TEXAS Democratic Rep. Barbara Jordan was the keynote speaker at the party's nominating convention in New York.

ANOTHER "first" for women was the appointment of former child star Shirley Temple Black as U.S. Chief of Protocol.

TWO WOMEN lost their political power base in 1973: Isabel Peron, left, was ousted from office after 21 months as president of Argentina, and Chiang Ching, who fell from power after the death of her husband, Chairman Mao Tse-Tung of China.

AN OUTSPOKEN critic of forced school desegregation, Louise Day Hicks was elected president of the Boston City Council.

A NEWSMAKER wherever she went, Betty Ford hit the campaign trail in support of her husband's candidacy for President. With her at right is Happy Rockefeller, wife of vice president Nelson Rockefeller.

ELIZABETH Dole, below, wife of Republican vice presidential candidate Robert Dole, struck out on her own to campaign for her husband.

FORMER White House counselor Anne Armstrong was named by President Ford as the first woman to serve as U.S. Ambassador to Great Britain.

Jeanne M. Holm, 54, retired from the Air Force, where she had been the nation's first woman major general, was appointed by President Ford as his special assistant for women's affairs. In that post she succeeded Patricia Sullivan Lindh, former Republican national committeewoman from Louisiana, who was named deputy assistant secretary of state for education and public affairs.

Evelyn Gandy, a 55-year-old attorney, became Mississippi's first woman lieutenant governor, elected to the post after serving two times as state treasurer.

In Annapolis, Md., 18-year-old Toni Louise Zimmerman, saying that her name infringed on her "diguity," officially changed it to Zimmerwoman.

Former Rep. Louise Day Hicks, an outspoken opponent of forced school desegregation busing, was elected president of the Boston City Council, the first woman in the city's history to hold the top council post.

Sally Stanford, as top vote getter in the city council election, was named mayor of Sausalito, a small community across the Golden Gate from her old home town of San Francisco, where she was once that city's best known bordello operator.

In political news abroad, Isabel Peron, 45, was ousted from office by a bloodless military coup after 21 months as president of Argentina following the death of her husband, Juan Peron. And Chian Ching, 63, lost her power in China after the death of her husband, Mao Tse-Tung.

Former first ladies were in the news during the year: Mamie Eisenhower, who spent 11 weeks in Washington's Walter Reed Army Medical Center with a viral infection, celebrated her 80th birthday; Lady Bird Johnson visited Israel; and Pat Nixon was hospitalized after suffering a stroke.

INVADING MALE STRONGHOLDS

Women seeking a toehold on the career ladder in fields previously dominated by men could take heart from the successes of their sisters during the year.

A: Yes. The colorful Pulitzer prize-winning playwright goes explicitly into this scare. He also reveals his homosexual experiences beginning with his adolescence in St. Louis and his college days at the University of Missouri (where he "snuggled spoon-like" in bed with a fraternity brother). Lost

The wind was strong and the surf was high when the baby wandered off from their beach house. . . .

And now they are still searching and the young father runs up and down the beach, desperately picking up bits of seaweed, anything, looking for a trace, looking out to sea, to the big sea, where to look, where to go, and his wife restrains him and tries to tell him there is nothing he can do, nothing.

Michael McDonald, 19 months old, had drowned.

This photograph of John McDonald and his wife was taken April 2, 1954, at Hermosa Beach, Calif. by Jack Gaunt of the Los Angeles Times. Gaunt was sitting in the front yard of his suburban beach house when he heard the sirens and a friend told him a boy was missing. Gaunt ran up the beach and snapped the picture from about 200 feet, not knowing what he was shooting but sensing the worst. The baby was found later, a mile up the beach.

Check school system when moving

dr. walt menninger

A couple of weeks ago, responding to a letter, I discussed the impact on children of making a move. If the move involves a change in your child's school, then you should visit the new school.

But what do you look for? I put that question to several people, including a school principal, and a former school board member who also happens to be my wife.

In any institution, the smoothness and effectiveness of the operation will depend in large measure on the leadership. Therefore, the critical element in any school is the principal. You should make a particular point to visit with him or her.

How does the principal greet you? Does he seem genuinely warm and glad you've come to see his school, or does he leave you feeling you are invading "his" territory? Is his school secretary warm and friendly, or more of a cool cookie?

As the principal takes you around, how comfortable is he in going into classrooms and introducing you to the teachers? Does the principal know the children by name? How do they relate to him? Do they spontaneously share things with him that they are doing? Or do they keep a distance, as if anxious about approaching him?

AS YOU VISIT with the principal, try to get a sense of his flexibility. How does he react to volunteer participation by parents? Or suggestions from parents? Would he bend the rules in the interest of a good educational experience?

When walking around the school, what do you see? Do the rooms look lived in or are they sterile in appearance? Be suspicious if they are too neat and tidy. Some organized chaos is good and means things are going on.

What's on the bulletin boards and the walls? Are there exhibits of projects? Are the students' products duplicates or is there evidence of individuality?

What about the library? Are the children active there? Is it busy and well utilized? Is it an inviting place?

Are volunteers present? Does the school create opportunities to involve the fathers as well as the mothers? I'll not soon forget being roped into a project a couple of years ago by my son's first grade teacher. She had the children making Christmas decorations with block prints, and I was "invited" to spend an hour in the morning assisting the children with the project, mixing the paint.

Though it may seem a bit odd, my wife calls attention to another quality of a school — its smell. Is it pleasing? Or not? In her experience, a well-run school has a pleasing odor, regardless of the age of the building or the kind of pupils.

FINALLY, HOW DO the teachers feel about the school? Do they use team teaching when it is appropriate to share the talents of different teachers? Do they encourage and sponsor field trips?

And do the kids like their school? Does it seem like an exciting place to be? Are adventuresome things going on?

Of course, you don't have to be planning to move to have reason to assess a school. You ought to be doing it at the school your children now attend. See how it measures up. And if it doesn't seem to, ask why. Share your ideas with the officers of the parent-teacher association.

As I have suggested before, parents must assume some responsibility for the school their children attend. You can justifiably expect the professional educators — administrators and teachers — to apply their expertise in teaching techniques and content. But you have an important role as a check upon and support to their efforts.

(Dr. Menninger invites your comments and questions. Write to him in care of the Independent, Press-Telegram. Because of the volume of mail, he cannot answer each individually but will handle questions of general interest in his column.)

Boys Club members have a Whitey Christmas

TWO HUNDRED and fifty young members of the Boy's Club had a merrier Christmas than they expected.

They were given toys donated by guests invited to a surprise birthday party for man-about-town Whitey Littlefield.

Although there were many of Whitey's friends involved in the surprise, his office manager at Somerset Distributors, Connie Casillas, and two women who work at Lombardo's Restaurant, Mary Deloach and Suzi Tracy hatched the original plot.

The party was held at the Gas Chamber, a night spot owned by Dave Lewis. Dave closed the establishment for the evening and even arranged the surprise for the surprisee. Dave invited Whitey to another restaurant for dinner. He arranged to have an emergency call at that restaurant, summoning him back to his own place. Naturally , Whitey had to go with him.

Even though the gifts for Whitey were passed along to one of his many philanthropies (I think the Boys Club is probably his favorite) money left from party proceeds went to widows of police officers. He did receive two gifts of his own.

Unfortunately he could only keep one. The Associates, a local organization for businesswomen, presented him with one of their T-shirts emblazoned with the name.

He also received a huge gift wrapped container. When he opened it, out popped a scantily clad beauty. He couldn't keep her.

He was also presented with a pie in the face by an anonymous "friend." Said friend must remain anonymous because Whitey still hasn't figured out exactly who the culprit was.

On a serious note, emcee Mike Tracy representing Long Beach Police Officers Association, introduced Bill Barnes who said thank yous on behalf of the Boy's Club. Don Dyer brought greetings from carolyn mcdowell

the 49er Foundation and Lance Shafer offered plaudits for Whitey's efforts on behalf of the Grand Prix.

It was a birthday party to remember for a life time.

Especially for Whitey. He told me that he had never had a birthday party in all of his 44 years.

I'VE WRITTEN about it, kidded other people about it in the column and, I hope, given readers a good laugh from time to time.

This time, the laugh was on me.

We arrived at Bruce and Jean Sanderson's Christmas open house exactly one hour before the party was to begin.

Bruce, in blue jeans, was carrying last minute supplies into the house. He didn't see us, so my helpful husband went to the trunk of Bruce's car and grabbed a few packages to take into the house.

He was nearly clobbered by Jean's brother, Bob Chapman, visiting from Reno. Bob had never met either of us and assumed we were looters. We explained we were too well dressed for looters.

We ambled into the kitchen where blue jeaned Jean welcomed us just as graciously as if we had arrived at the correct hour.

I didn't speak to the strange girl in the kitchen until she spoke to me. I have met Nancy Merwin several times but never with her hair in curlers. She and husband, Bob, left and returned about half an hour later looking stunning.

I offered my klutzy services but our hostess was so well organized that the only thing she had to do was scrub the kitchen floor where my husband and I had tracked in mud. (I still think it was the delivery boy from the liquor store. He almost joined the party too as his van refused to start.)

No outside catering for these hosts with Scandinavian heritage. Jean made hors d' oeuvres to serve the 100 guests. Bruce insisted that he made the 30 dozen Scandinavian cookies all by himself. I ate seven of them.

Jean's mom, Kathy, also came over earlier in the day to whip up some goodies. She later returned, with Jean's dad, Klaton Chapman, who caught me eating all the cookies.

CHRISTMAS is also a time for weddings.

Jack Dilday and Patricia (Trish) Storey tied the nuptial knot Dec. 11 aboard the Highwater Princess at Lake Tahoe.

Following the vow exchange, guests went for an afternoon cruise followed by a reception timed to catch the sunset in the Summit Room high atop Harrahs Hotel.

Jack is the son of Pauline Worsham and the late Jack Dilday. Trish's dad, Dr. George Reynolds, a former resident of this area, came from his home in St. Louis, Mo., to attend the ceremony.

Honor attendants were Trish's sister, Georgianne Knight, Jackie Slevin and Jack's brothers, Randy and Steve Dilday.

Trish, a teacher of the physically handicapped for Garden Grove schools, received her education at Wilson and Long Beach State University where she was a Tri Delt and winner of numerous beauty titles.

Jack graduated from Poly High and Long Beach State University where he was a member of SAE fraternity. He's hanging his business hat in Los Angeles these days as an investment broker with Blyth Eastman Dillon.

The couple will host a post-wedding reception in late January in their home in Naples.

SEVERAL SCROOGES are on the lose.

Bob and Mary Ann Machan, both Easterners by birth, have always missed having a white Christmas.

This year, they decided their two boys would have a snowman. (Person?) Obviously, there was no snow. What would be a good substitute? Tumbleweeds sprayed white, they decided.

So the family piled in the car for a tumbleweed hunting expedition. Bob didn't know that the pesky weeds were also full of thorns. He was bleeding and battered but the kids had their snowman in the front yard, with the help of good neighbors who gave advice and charcoal for the snowperson's eyes.

Along comes a vandal in the dead of night and destroys the snowperson. This has happened three times. But the Machans have the satisfaction of knowing that somewhere around town there are some people with nasty cuts from the prickly person.

Women are asking...

'How can a ski buff's complexion stay more pretty than prune?'

By REBA AND BONNIE CHURCHILL

Did you know the number of ski buffs has tripled during the past five years? Statistics point up if they aren't on skis, they are in snow mobiles, or outdoors participating in the fun of winter.

Thanks to today's economical transportation a resort area is only a short holiday away. So if you've circled "operation fun under the winter sun", here's a complexion rescue guide.

"The facial skin is the most delicate, continuously exposed flesh on the body," reports a dermatologist. "Also, it's the most prone to dryness. Wind, temperature changes and abuse caused by sports activities can turn a peachy complexion into a prune!"

Well, you know how a prune is dehydrated! Same thing can happen to the skin. Plump up your defenses with a rich, emollient lotion or creme. This is a must for fellows as well as girls.

Whatever your regimen, lotion, foundation (creme or stick types are more opaque), apply them indoors. If you're a nature girl, still do not face the elements without protective complexion gels. If skin is super sensitive, ask a dermatologist about a block-out creme or ointment, to keep flesh smooth, not rough.

Many recommend a pomade on brows and lashes. These add lubrication to hairs, which can weather-chap too. An extra heavy coat of lip gloss, whether you wear lipstick or not, gives that provocative moist look, but more important it helps keep mouth from parching. It's all gloss — but not wet.

When it comes to applying lotion protection, don't believe once in the morning does it. Just like sun-tanning, cremes, gels or block-outs need to be bolstered so they'll keep outworking the elements!

ira corn on bridge

Dear Mr. Corn:

Rubber bridge and the bidding goes:

Opp.	Part.	Opp.	Me
1♥	2♠	Pass	Pass
2♥	3♠	Pass	?

I held:

♠ 7 5 4
♥ 10 8 6 3
♣ A K 8 7 5

Should I bid anything at this point? If so, what?

Changing Horses,
Flushing, N.Y.

Answer: I would pass and be happy to give partner the ace and king of clubs in hopes that they will prove useful. Once you passed two diamonds (a correct decision), you should not suddenly find something extra to announce. Your partner's second bid is based on the deduction that you have "some high cards."

Dear Mr. Corn:

What is the correct opening with this hand? I was criticized for reversing.

♦ A Q 9 8 6
♣ A K Q 9 7 4

Backward Manors,
Montgomery, Ala.

Answer: I would open one club with the intention of rebidding in diamonds. True, the reverse usually shows more in high cards, however, the good distribution and excellent high card concentration make up for the missing points.

Dear Mr. Corn:

Is it proper to credit both sides with 50 points when both sides have a part score in an unfinished rubber? Pocket Calculator,
Rocky River, Ohio

Answer: In rubber bridge one bonus cancels the other and the net result is a standoff. However, if the game is progressive bridge with each side's total points carried, then each pair should receive the part score bonus.

Dear Mr. Corn:

How would you suggest reaching the good slam after North's overcall of one spade? These were the East-West hands:

West	East
♠ 7 5	♠ A J 3 2
♥ A Q J 9 2	♥ K 7
♦ K Q 9 7 6 4	♦ J 10 8
♣ —	♣ A J 7 4

Missed it,
Aptos, Calif.

Answer: A possible sequence to show West's distribution and to evaluate the fit would be:

West	East
1♦	2 NT	(over the overcall)
3♥	4♦	(cue bid)
4♥	4 NT
5♦	6♦

Dear Mr. Corn:

I opened a strong two bid with this hand:

♠ A Q J 10 8 4
♥ K Q J 10 9 6 3

My partner complained later that while my distribution was good, I didn't have the high cards for a game demand bid. Which side are you on?

Game Bidder,
Edison, N.J.

Answer: Yours! That hand should produce 11 tricks in whichever major suit partner prefers. If that's not a game demand bid, I guess I will never see one.

The wind was strong and the surf was high when the baby wandered off from their beach house. . . .

And now they are still searching and the young father runs up and down the beach, desperately picking up bits of seaweed, anything, looking for a trace, looking out to sea, to the big sea, where to look, where to go, and his wife restrains him and tries to tell him there is nothing he can do, nothing.

Michael McDonald, 19 months old, had drowned.

This photograph of John McDonald and his wife was taken April 2, 1954, at Hermosa Beach, Calif. by Jack Gaunt of the Los Angeles Times. Gaunt was sitting in the front yard of his suburban beach house when he heard the sirens and a friend told him a boy was missing. Gaunt ran up the beach and snapped the picture from about 200 feet, not knowing what he was shooting but sensing the worst. The baby was found later, a mile up the beach.

Check school system when moving

dr. walt menninger

A couple of weeks ago, responding to a letter, I discussed the impact on children of making a move. If the move involves a change in your child's school, then you should visit the new school.

But what do you look for? I put that question to several people, including a school principal, and a former school board member who also happens to be my wife.

In any institution, the smoothness and effectiveness of the operation will depend in large measure on the leadership. Therefore, the critical element in any school is the principal. You should make a particular point to visit with him or her.

How does the principal greet you? Does he seem genuinely warm and glad you've come to see his school, or does he leave you feeling you are invading "his" territory? Is his school secretary warm and friendly, or more of a cool cookie?

As the principal takes you around, how comfortable is he in going into classrooms and introducing you to the teachers? Does the principal know the children by name? How do they relate to him? Do they spontaneously share things with him that they are doing? Or do they keep a distance, as if anxious about approaching him?

AS YOU VISIT with the principal, try to get a sense of his flexibility. How does he react to volunteer participation by parents? Or suggestions from parents? Would he bend the rules in the interest of a good educational experience?

When walking around the school, what do you see? Do the rooms look lived in or are they sterile in appearance? Be suspicious if they are too neat and tidy. Some organized chaos is good and means things are going on.

What's on the bulletin boards and the walls? Are there exhibits of projects? Are the students' products duplicates or is there evidence of individuality?

What about the library? Are the children active there? Is it busy and well utilized? Is it an inviting place?

Are volunteers present? Does the school create opportunities to involve the fathers as well as the mothers? I'll not soon forget being roped into a project a couple of years ago by my son's first grade teacher. She had the children making Christmas decorations with block prints, and I was "invited" to spend an hour in the morning assisting the children with the project, mixing the paint.

Though it may seem a bit odd, my wife calls attention to another quality of a school — its smell. Is it pleasing? Or not? In her experience, a well-run school has a pleasing odor, regardless of the age of the building or the kind of pupils.

FINALLY, HOW DO the teachers feel about the school? Do they use team teaching when it is appropriate to share the talents of different teachers? Do they encourage and sponsor field trips?

And do the kids like their school? Does it seem like an exciting place to be? Are adventuresome things going on?

Of course, you don't have to be planning to move to have reason to assess a school. You ought to be doing it at the school your children now attend. See how it measures up. And if it doesn't seem to, ask why. Share your ideas with the officers of the parent-teacher association.

As I have suggested before, parents must assume some responsibility for the school their children attend. Dear Mr. Corn:

I opened a strong two bid with this hand:

♠ A Q J 10 8 4
♥ K Q J 10 9 6 3

My partner complained later that while my distribution was good, I didn't have the high cards for a game demand bid. Which side are you on?

Game Bidder,
Edison, N.J.

Answer: Yours! That hand should produce 11 tricks in whichever major suit partner prefers. If that's not a game demand bid, I guess I will never see one.

History shines in silver

By ELISE EMERY
Arts Editor

From ancient times, gold and silver have held magical attraction for artisans and artists. Archeologists today find evidence of this in finely wrought pieces by unnamed makers — long passed into anonymity, leaving their shining work to speak for them.

Of course, potentates and poor men alike have felt the precious metals' same magnetism and have coveted the elegant designs.

In more recent history, dating to 1815, Samuel Kirk and Son, American silver craftsmen, did such fine work that General LaFayette, the Astors and railroad tycoon Thomas Fortune Ryan owned pieces created by the company, still a family firm five generations later.

To see a superb collection of this silver, visit the California State Museum of Science and Industry in Exposition Park, Los Angeles, through next Sunday.

In the Kirk Silver Exhibit are late Federal, Empire, Victorian and contemporary designs. Pieces from this Baltimore silver firm comprise a capsule history of changing American taste in the 19th century; some, with inscriptions, recall bits of the nation's cultural and political history.

Kirk Silver is especially known for the repousse method, a European technique revived by Kirk in the 1820s to decorate the silver's surface by raising it from the back with a blunt tool.

The museum is open daily from 9:30 a.m. to 5 p.m. Admission is free.

TOM ENMAN, director of the Laguna Beach Museum of Art, will be juror for Long Beach Art Association's annual all-media Open Juried Show to be held in February. He will select winners of $475 in prizes. Entry forms will be mailed on request. Entries must be received by Jan. 24 from 10 a.m. to 7 p.m. by LBAA at the Long Beach Recreation Department, 155 Queen's Way Landing. Your parking ticket will be validated.

Another LBAA activity will be a bus tour, Jan. 28, to Pasadena Art Museum, leaving LBAA headquarters at 10:30 a.m. and returning at 4 p.m. Tickets, at $4 each, include bus fare and museum entrance fee. To make reservations, make checks payable to LBAA and mail to tour chairman Mrs. Albert Fluch, 333 Orange Ave., Long Beach 90812. You may call her for further information.

JAN ADLMANN, director of Long Beach Museum of Art, recently was asked by Western Association of Art Museums president Richard V. West to become a member of WAAM's board of trustees. Adlmann attended his first board meeting Dec. 11 at Mills College in Oakland.

Encompassing 12 western states, WAAM is the oldest and largest art museum association in the nation. A primary function is assembling exhibitions for circulation throughout the West. Several exhibitions mounted by the Long Beach Museum have been requested by WAAM in recent years for circulation.

A PUBLIC RECEPTION Thursday from 7 to 10 p.m. in the Empire Room of the Edgewater Hyatt House, 6400 E. Pacific Coast Highway, will be preliminary to a clay and fiber symposium.

The Opus Symposium, Friday, Saturday and next Sunday, will be conducted by Jim Melton and Biz Littell who own Opus Pottery in Sedalia, Colo.

DOLPHIN head spout, surrounded by dolphins, squirrels, fawn head and leaves, turns Kirk water jug and tray into silver art.

Baker will perform on four dates

Janet Baker, British mezzo-soprano, will appear four times at the Music Center Pavilion during this first week of 1977.

Thursday and Friday at 8:30 p.m. and next Sunday at 2:30 p.m., she will be soloist with the Los Angeles Philharmonic with Zubin Mehta conducting. The program will consist of two works, the American premiere of "Phaedra," a dramatic cantata by Benjamin Britten, and Mahler's "Symphony No. 3." Participating in the latter work will be the California Boys Choir and Women of the Los Angeles Master Chorale.

Tuesday at 8:30 p.m., Baker will open the Philharmonic's Celebrity Recital series with a program of music by Beethoven, Arne, Humfrey, Morley, Haydn, Schubert and Berkeley.

"PHAEDRA," believed to be the next-to-last work completed by England's great composer before his death Dec. 4, was written for Baker who first performed it June 16, 1976, at England's Aldeburgh Festival.

The text is from the play of the same title by Racine (1639-1699), in a verse translation by Robert Lowell.

In the Mahler symphony, the mezzo's solos occur in the fourth movement. The words are from Nietzsche's "Midnight Song" from "Thus Spake Zarathustra."

Ticket-holders to the Friday concert may attend a free pre-concert event from 7 to 7:45 p.m. In "A Tribute to Benjamin Britten (1913-1976)" Ernest Fleischmann "Remembers the Composer;" cellist Ronald Leonard will play Britten's "Suite for Cello" Op. 72, and the California Boys Choir will sing.

Concert tickets are on sale at the Music Center box office and agencies.

LBMA continues series

The Angeles Trio will play Long Beach Museum of Art's fourth chamber music program of the season next Sunday at 3 p.m. in Burnett Branch Library, 560 E. Hill St. Admission is free.

Earlier arrangements for the concerts to be held at the new downtown Long Beach Public Library, beginning in January, have been delayed until further notice.

Members of the trio are Kathryn Ando, pianist; Cynthia Daley, violinist; and Mary Lane, cellist. They will play "Trio in D Major, Op. 70, No. 1" by Beethoven; "Trio" by Donald Grantham (soon to be recorded by the Angeles Trio); and "Trio" by Ravel.

ANDO IS a faculty member at Long Beach State University; she received her D.M.A. at USC. Daley, former concertmaster of the Debut and USC orchestras, earned her M.M. at USC. Lane is a former member of the Buffalo Philharmonic Orchestra and of the Piatigorsky master class at USC. She received her B.M.A. at the New England Conservatory of Music.

The chamber music series is sponsored by the City of Long Beach and the Los Angeles County Board of Supervisors through the Los Angeles County Music and Performing Arts Commission. Directed by Sidney Stafford, the series is in its 24th season.

New sex barriers crumble

NBC "Today" show for the last two years and a writer and personality with the network for 12 years, accepted an offer of $1 million a year over the next five years to co-anchor "The Evening News" at ABC with Harry Reasoner.

Meanwhile, Lynn Sherr, 34, became the first woman to anchor a primetime network television news series when she was named host of public television's "U.S.A.: People and Politics."

Marlene Sanders, 45, was named vice president and director of documentaries for ABC News, the first woman vice president in the news division at that network. And network television news got its first woman bureau chief when Rebecca Bell became head of NBC's Paris Bureau.

Capt. Fran McKee, 49, in the service for 26 years, became the first woman line officer of the Navy to be promoted to rear admiral. The two previously named women admirals have been chiefs of the Nurse Corps.

Sue Peterson, 31, became the first female education instructor in West Point's 174-year history.

Not only was Deborah B. Doane of Essex, Conn., the Maine Maritime Academy's first female student, but she was its top ranking graduate this year and the first woman in the country to graduate from a four-year maritime school. The 26-year-old woman graduated with 104 classmates as an ensign with full qualification as a third mate.

Explaining that she had had training in judo and is a weightlifter, 6-foot, 275-pound Kathy Crumbley declared after her election as sheriff of Belmont County in Ohio:

"I can deck any man the present sheriff can and maybe a few more."

The Harvard Law Review elected its first woman president: 23-year-old Susan Estrich of Cambridge, Mass., a second-year student at the Harvard Law School.

Dr. Rosalyn Yalow became the first woman to receive an Albert Lasker Basic Medical Research Award in the 31-year history of the prizes.

OTHER "FIRSTS"

Dr. Sarah Kerr Myers, who has served as editor of the American Geographical Society's quarterly Geographical Review since 1973, became the first woman director of the society in its 124-year history.

Sarah Caldwell, who has her own opera company in Boston, where she stages and conducts, became the first woman ever to conduct at the New York Metropolitan Opera since it opened in 1883.

Sylvia E. Mathis, 26, a 1975 graduate of the University of North Carolina's Law School, became the first black woman to be recruited as an agent for the Federal Bureau of Investigation.

Roberta Kankus, 23-year-old graduate of Rensselaer Polytechnic Institute, became the first woman in the United States, and perhaps in the world, to be licensed as a commercial nuclear power plant operator.

Gwendolyn Brooks, the poet, became the first black woman to be elected to the 250-member National Institute of Arts and Letters.

Shirley Schlanger Abrahamson was named as the first woman Justice of the Wisconsin Supreme Court.

In other lands, women were racking up firsts also.

Just a month after Britain's new laws against sex discrimination went into effect, Libby Howie, 24, became the first woman auctioneer in the 232-year history of Sotheby's, London fine arts dealers. Jo Marshall, 48, had broken the British barrier just a week previously by conducting an auction for the 194-year-old firm of Phillips Sons and Neale.

Meanwhile, the Boy Scouts' executive board decided to give women greater leadership roles in the organization — within limits. Formerly allowed to serve only as "den mothers" of Cub Scouts, they may now serve as cubmaster and assistant cubmaster but are still barred from scoutmaster or assistant scoutmaster.

A resolution passed by the House of bishops and House of Deputies of the 2.9-million-member Episcopal Church approved the ordination of women as priests and bishops.

Women were competing against men in nearly every field, but they were still competing against their own sex in the traditional beauty contests.

Barbara Elaine Peterson, 22, was chosen Miss U.S.A. and her sister, Polly, 17, won the Miss Teen-Age Minnesota title. Rina Messinger, 20, former Israeli soldier and more recently a gliding instructor, was named Miss Universe. Miss Jamaica, 22-year-old Cindy Breakspeare, was chosen Miss World 1976.

Dorothy Kathleen Benham, 20, of Edina, Minn., was crowned Miss America 1977 at the annual pageant in Atlantic City. The 5 foot 7½, 120-pound blonde is a junior at Macalester College in St. Paul, majoring in vocal performance.

Twanna D. Kilgore, 21, of Washington, D.C., was chosen Miss Black America. An English major at Federal City College, she hopes to pursue a career in the arts.

Actress Angie Dickinson was named Woman of the Year by the Hollywood Radio and Television Society, for the success of her TV series, "Police Woman," the fourth woman ever to be given the society's top honor.

Tatum O'Neal, 12, was named "Female Star of the Year" by the National Association of Theater Owners. Dolly Parton, 30, was named top female vocalist for the second straight year by the Country Music Association.

Anthropologist and author Margaret Mead, 74, was inducted into the Women's Hall of Fame, located at Seneca Falls, N.Y.

For the second consecutive year, Trina Jarish, 34, of Costa Mesa, Calif. won the Powder Puff Derby cross-country air race. The race was sponsored by the Ninety-Nines, an organization of women pilots, who announced it was their last race.

SAN FRANCISCO'S best-known bordello operator, Sally Stanford, became mayor of nearby Sausalito in an election last year.

ANTHROPOLOGIST Margaret Mead was inducted into the Women's Hall of Fame in Seneca Falls, N.Y.

CAPT. Fran McKee became the first woman line officer of the Navy to be promoted to rear admiral.

AND A FEW LOSERS

It wasn't all good news for women during 1976. In the area of crime, they made their share of headlines. Sara Jane Moore, 45, was sentenced to life in prison, the maximum sentence prescribed by law, for attempting to kill President Ford on Sept. 22, 1975.

The stomach ulcer — once the almost exclusive preserve of man — is fast becoming one more symbol of women's emerging equality, medical researchers reported at a conference in Miami.

Thirty years ago, male ulcer patients outnumbered female patients 20 to 1, said Dr. Morton I. Grossman; director of the UCLA Center for Ulcer Research and Education. The ratio has dropped to 2 to 1.

Patricia Hearst, 22, was back with her family for the first time in almost three years, out on bail while appealing her bank robbery conviction for which she was sentenced to seven years in prison.

Actress Louise Lasser, 33, star of the TV soap opera, "Mary Hartman, Mary Hartman," completed a six-month diversionary program on a charge of possession of cocaine. The program is designed for first time drug offenders.

Caril Ann Fugate, 32, was paroled after spending

See YEAR SEES, Page L/S-12

THE HOLLYWOOD Radio and Television Society named Angie Dickinson, left, Woman of the Year for the success of her television series, "Police Woman." Barbara Walters negotiated $1 million a year for the next five years when she joined Harry Reasoner as co-anchorperson of the ABC "Evening News."

ACTRESS Elizabeth Taylor, left, got her second divorce from Richard Burton, then married former Navy Secretary John Warner; actress Zsa Zsa Gabor was wed for the seventh time in 1976.

SARA JANE MOORE, left, was sentenced to life in prison for attempting to assassinate President Ford. She was incarcerated at the Federal prison on Terminal Island, while Caril Ann Fugate, now 32, was paroled after spending more than half her life behind bars for a murder spree in the late 50s.

The program will consist of two works, the American premiere of "Phaedra," a dramatic cantata by Benjamin Britten, and Mahler's "Symphony No. 3." Participating in the latter work will be the California Boys Choir and Women of the Los Angeles Master Chorale.

Tuesday at 8:30 p.m., Baker will open the Philharmonic's Celebrity Recital series with a program of music by Beethoven, Arne, Humfrey, Morley, Haydn, Schubert and Berkeley.

"PHAEDRA," believed to be the next-to-last work completed by England's great composer before his death Dec. 4, was written for Baker who first performed it June 16, 1976, at England's Aldeburgh Festival.

The text is from the play of the same title by Racine (1639-1699), in a verse translation by Robert Lowell.

In the Mahler symphony, the mezzo's solos occur in the fourth movement. The words are from Nietzsche's "Midnight Song" from "Thus Spake Zarathustra."

Ticket-holders to the Friday concert may attend a free pre-concert event from 7 to 7:45 p.m. In "A Tribute to Benjamin Britten (1913-1976)" Ernest Fleischmann "Remembers the Composer;" cellist Ronald Leonard will play Britten's "Suite for Cello" Op. 72, and the California Boys Choir will sing.

Concert tickets are on sale at the Music Center box office and agencies.

LBMA continues series

The Angeles Trio will play Long Beach Museum of Art's fourth chamber music program of the season next Sunday at 3 p.m. in Burnett Branch Library, 560 E. Hill St. Admission is free.

Earlier arrangements for the concerts to be held at the new downtown Long Beach Public Library, beginning in January, have been delayed until further notice.

Members of the trio are Kathryn Ando, pianist; Cynthia Daley, violinist; and Mary Lane, cellist. They will play "Trio in D Major, Op. 70, No. 1" by Beethoven; "Trio" by Donald Granthain (soon to be recorded by the Angeles Trio); and "Trio" by Ravel.

ANDO IS a faculty member at Long Beach State University; she received her D.M.A. at USC. Daley, former concertmaster of the Debut and USC orchestras, earned her M.M. at USC. Lane is a former member of the Buffalo Philharmonic Orchestra and of the Piatigorsky master class at USC. She received her B.M.A. at the New England Conservatory of Music.

The chamber music series is sponsored by the City of Long Beach and the Los Angeles County Board of Supervisors through the Los Angeles County Music and Performing Arts Commission. Directed by Sidney Stafford, the series is in its 24th season.

New sex barriers crumble

NBC "Today" show for the last two years and a writer and personality with the network for 12 years, accepted an offer of $1 million a year over the next five years to co-anchor "The Evening News" at ABC with Harry Reasoner.

Meanwhile, Lynn Sherr, 34, became the first woman to anchor a primetime network television news series when she was named host of public television's "U.S.A.: People and Politics."

Marlene Sanders, 45, was named vice president and director of documentaries for ABC News, the first woman vice president in the news division at that network. And network television news got its first woman bureau chief when Rebecca Bell became head of NBC's Paris Bureau.

Capt. Fran McKee, 49, in the service for 26 years, became the first woman line officer of the Navy to be promoted to rear admiral. The two previously named women admirals have been chiefs of the Nurse Corps.

Sue Peterson, 31, became the first female education instructor in West Point's 174-year history.

Not only was Deborah B. Doane of Essex, Conn., the Maine Maritime Academy's first female student, but she was its top ranking graduate this year and the first woman in the country to graduate from a four-year maritime school. The 26-year-old woman graduated with 104 classmates as an ensign with full qualification as a third mate.

Explaining that she had had training in judo and is a weightlifter, 6-foot, 275-pound Kathy Crumbley declared after her election as sheriff of Belmont County in Ohio:

"I can deck any man the present sheriff can and maybe a few more."

The Harvard Law Review elected its first woman president: 23-year-old Susan Estrich of Cambridge, Mass., a second-year student at the Harvard Law School.

Dr. Rosalyn Yalow became the first woman to receive an Albert Lasker Basic Medical Research Award in the 31-year history of the prizes.

OTHER "FIRSTS"

Dr. Sarah Kerr Myers, who has served as editor of the American Geographical Society's quarterly Geographical Review since 1973, became the first woman director of the society in its 124-year history.

Sarah Caldwell, who has her own opera company in Boston, where she stages and conducts, became the first woman ever to conduct at the New York Metropolitan Opera since it opened in 1883.

Sylvia E. Mathis, 26, a 1975 graduate of the University of North Carolina's Law School, became the first black woman to be recruited as an agent for the Federal Bureau of Investigation.

Roberta Kankus, 23-year-old graduate of Rensselaer Polytechnic Institute, became the first woman in the United States, and perhaps in the world, to be licensed as a commercial nuclear power plant operator.

Gwendolyn Brooks, the poet, became the first black woman to be elected to the 250-member National Institute of Arts and Letters.

Shirley Schlanger Abrahamson was named as the first woman Justice of the Wisconsin Supreme Court.

In other lands, women were racking up firsts also.

Just a month after Britain's new laws against sex discrimination went into effect, Libby Howie, 24, became the first woman auctioneer in the 232-year history of Sotheby's, London fine arts dealers. Jo Marshall, 48, had broken the British barrier just a week previously by conducting an auction for the 194-year-old firm of Phillips Sons and Neale.

Meanwhile, the Boy Scouts' executive board decided to give women greater leadership roles in the organization — within limits. Formerly allowed to serve only as "den mothers" of Cub Scouts, they may now serve as cubmaster and assistant cubmaster but are still barred from scoutmaster or assistant scoutmaster.

A resolution passed by the House of bishops and House of Deputies of the 2.9-million-member Episcopal Church approved the ordination of women as priests and bishops.

Women were competing against men in nearly every field, but they were still competing against their own sex in the traditional beauty contests.

Barbara Elaine Peterson, 22, was chosen Miss U.S.A. and her sister, Polly, 17, won the Miss Teen-Age Minnesota title. Rina Messinger, 20, former Israeli soldier and more recently a gliding instructor, was named Miss Universe. Miss Jamaica, 22-year-old Cindy Breakspeare, was chosen Miss World 1976.

Dorothy Kathleen Benham, 20, of Edina, Minn., was crowned Miss America 1977 at the annual pageant in Atlantic City. The 5 foot 7½, 120-pound blonde is a junior at Macalester College in St. Paul, majoring in vocal performance.

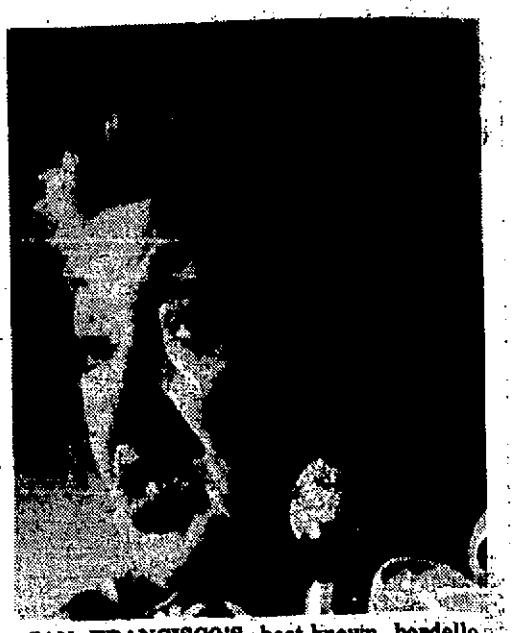

Twanna D. Kilgore, 21, of Washington, D.C., was chosen Miss Black America. An English major at Federal City College, she hopes to pursue a career in the arts.

Actress Angie Dickinson was named Woman of the Year by the Hollywood Radio and Television Society, for the success of her TV series, "Police Woman," the fourth woman ever to be given the society's top honor.

Tatum O'Neal, 12, was named "Female Star of the Year" by the National Association of Theater Owners. Dolly Parton, 30, was named top female vocalist for the second straight year by the Country Music Association.

Anthropologist and author Margaret Mead, 74, was inducted into the Women's Hall of Fame, located at Seneca Falls, N.Y.

For the second consecutive year, Trina Jarish, 34, of Costa Mesa, Calif. won the Powder Puff Derby cross-country air race. The race was sponsored by the Ninety-Nines, an organization of women pilots, who announced it was their last race.

SAN FRANCISCO'S best-known bordello operator, Sally Stanford, became mayor of nearby Sausalito in an election last year.

ANTHROPOLOGIST Margaret Mead was inducted into the Women's Hall of Fame in Seneca Falls, N.Y.

AND A FEW LOSERS

It wasn't all good news for women during 1976. In the area of crime, they made their share of headlines. Sara Jane Moore, 45, was sentenced to life in prison, the maximum sentence prescribed by law, for attempting to kill President Ford on Sept. 22, 1975.

The stomach ulcer — once the almost exclusive preserve of man — is fast becoming one more symbol of women's emerging equality, medical researchers reported at a conference in Miami.

Thirty years ago, male ulcer patients outnumbered female patients 20 to 1, said Dr. Morton I. Grossman; director of the UCLA Center for Ulcer Research and Education. The ratio has dropped to 2 to 1.

Patricia Hearst, 22, was back with her family for the first time in almost three years, out on bail while appealing her bank robbery conviction for which she was sentenced to seven years in prison.

Actress Louise Lasser, 33, star of the TV soap opera, "Mary Hartman, Mary Hartman," completed a six-month diversionary program on a charge of possession of cocaine. The program is designed for first time drug offenders.

Caril Ann Fugate, 32, was paroled after spending

THE NEW York Metropolitan Opera Company got its first female conductor, Sarah Caldwell, in its 93-year history.

CAPT. Fran McKee became the first woman line officer of the Navy to be promoted to rear admiral.

THE HOLLYWOOD Radio and Television Society named Angie Dickinson, left, Woman of the Year for the success of her television series, "Police Woman." Barbara Walters negotiated $1 million a year for the next five years when she joined Harry Reasoner as co-anchorperson of the ABC "Evening News."

ACTRESS Elizabeth Taylor, left, got her second divorce from Richard Burton, then married former Navy Secretary John Warner; actress Zsa Zsa Gabor was wed for the seventh time in 1976.

SARA JANE MOORE, left, was sentenced to life in prison for attempting to assassinate President Ford. She was incarcerated at the Federal prison on Terminal Island, while Caril Ann Fugate, now 32, was paroled after spending more than half her life behind bars for a murder spree in the late 50s.

No reprieve for taxes on back alimony

DEAR MR. SMITH: Years ago I agreed to pay my divorced wife a regular monthly alimony, which I deducted on my income tax returns. Due to financial problems, I was granted a court order suspending, but not cancelling, the alimony payments. I finally owed a total of $39,550 in back alimony. This was a lien on my residence, which I had inherited in 1962. I sold the residence and paid $19,000 to settle the back alimony, all as mutually agreed. How do I deduct this? Can I spread it over a few years? — W. W. M.

Alimony which woud have been deductible if paid on time, is also deductible if it is paid at a later date. This also applies when the amount due is compromised. You have an itemized deduction of $19,000 for 1976, for federal income tax purposes. It cannot be deducted in any other year, but if you had a taxable gain in 1976 on the sale of your residence, your alimony deduction should be beneficial.

DEAR MR. SMITH: In 1968 I sold real estate and took 20 per cent down and monthly payments on the balance with $500 or more per month. In 1976 this trust deed was paid off. I received over $3,000. When I sold the real estate, I paid income tax only on the amount I received. Each year thereafter, I paid tax on the amount I received during that year. Now do I have to pay income tax on the amount received at this time, or can I report each year according to the original schedule of payments? — T. O.

You are required to report in 1976, all the gain not previously reported. Income averaging may help reduce the tax.

DEAR MR. SMITH: I received an auto injury settlement from the insurance people. The accident date was July 2, 1973. I received $13,500 on Oct. 25, 1976, out of $25,000 agreed as the total amount due me. Lawyers fees, courts, subpeonas, doctors etc., added up to the difference of $11,500. What is my income tax obligation, if any? There was no distribution clause charging so much to loss of income, injury, pain and suffering. — J. S.

The net check you received was 54 per cent of the $25,000 gross settlement. Your attorney can help you determine how much, if any, of the $25,000 was for loss of income or medical expenses. You would report income for 1976 equal to 54 per cent of those two items, but the medical income is limited to the tax benefit you received by deducting those same medical expenses in prior years. The balance of the settlement is tax-free.

DEAR MR. SMITH: I had been living and working in California when the doctor advised my wife to move to Arizona since the drier climate would help her arthritic problem. I decided to continue working three days per week in California while spending the other four days of the week in Arizona. This is a costly commuting arrangement. I work for a salary in California. May I deduct these commuting expenses either as a business expense or a health expense? — R. R.

The IRS does not consider this type of commuting to be either a business or medical expense. Upon audit, such deductions would be disallowed. On the other hand, if you can find employment in Arizona and move there, you may have a substantial deduction for moving expenses.

Japanese classic

An illustration from "The Tale of Genji," by Murasaki Shikibu, translated by Edward G. Seidensticker (Knopf, $25, two volumes boxed). Seidensticker's brilliant achievement is the first complete translation of the greatest work in classical Japanese literature, the work of a 10th century woman writer.

Rattan raged in late 1800s

Q. "We just salvaged our old Peacock chair from the barn and plan to restore it." — Mr. and Mrs. R. W., Mound Valley, N.Y.

A. The rattan Peacock chair with its high fan-like back and base resembling an hour glass came into popularity in the late 1800s. Originally they were imported from the Orient, but when the demand for them reached a fever pitch in the period following the Philadelphia Centennial Exposition of 1876, American manufacturers rushed these rattan beauties into production. The term "Saratoga Chair" is often used in connection with these super sitters as they were found gracing the porches of the most posh hotels at this elegant New York spa around the turn of the century. Value guide: good condition, circa 1900, $325.

Q. "Do our trifles from the 1939 New York World's Fair have sufficient age to warrant collectors' attention?" — Dorothy and Al, Ossian, Ind.

A. When souvenir hunters converged on the fairgrounds, they returned home with tons of treasures. All of them are guaranteed to find favor with the flea market followers. Value guide: bottle, hemisphere, milk glass, 9¼ tall, $18; cake server, silverplated, $12; match holder, $11; paper umbrella, $12; souvenir spoon, silverplated, $5; teapot, ceramic, $10; token, brass, Communications building, $4.

Q. "Please enlighten me about a lovely dresser tray marked 'Elite Limoges'." — Barbara, Oceanside, Calif.

A. This mark was utilized by the firm of Bawo & Dotter in the late 1800s on their ceramic creations originating in the Limoges district of France. They were American import agents who established their own decorating shop at Limoges in the early 1870s. As the business prospered, they began producing their own whiteware in the 1890s. Exquisite Elite porcelains are held in high esteem. Value guide: dresser tray, pale pink roses, circa 1895, $35.

Q. "I must have everything I can find pertaining to Aunt Jemima." — Evelyn, Toledo, Ohio.

A. Collectors positively flip over Aunt Jemima dolls, vases, cookie jars, planters, salt and pepper shakers, banks, door stops and other articles based on this well known lady from pancake land. Aunt Jemina, Uncle Mose, Wade and Diana rag dolls have long been nursery floor favorites. The Grinnel Lithograph Company was responsible for the version distributed during the mid-1920s. The Aunt Jemima pottery cookie jar attributed to the McCoy Pottery Company also deserves mention as a tempting acquisition. Value guide: bank, metal, $20; door stop, original paint, $32.

How we 'saved' Hawaii

Those Kings and Queens of Old Hawaii. By Paul Bailey. Westernlore Books, Box 41073, Eagle Rock Station, Los Angeles 90041, $11.95.

More gracious than Victoria, and certainly more gifted, Queen Liliuokalani was the last monarch of Hawaii. The United States, at the height of its expansionism, and grabbing everything that wasn't nailed down, deposed her in 1893. It was the triumph of the crass over class, and it paved the way for the lords of the pineapple.

When Captain James Cook "discovered" the kingdom of Hawaii (and named it the Sandwich Islands after the Earl of Sandwich) in 1778, the native population was 300,000. A century later, the white man's blessings of disease, exploitation and greed had left the islands with a mere 20,000 natives. (Cook, incidentally, was later killed by Hawaiian natives in a misunderstanding).

When Liliuokalani was deposed, the Americans set up a "republic" under the presidency of Sanford Ballard Dole (you've seen the name Dole on pineapple cans). After a "decent" interval, the U.S. annexed the islands, in 1898. The American people, of course, were led to believe that we were bringing civilization (and religion) to yet another barbarous people. The facts are otherwise, as Paul Bailey proves in his vivid, enchanting story of the Hawaiian monarchy and the Hawaiian people.

They were a folk of a high order, descendants of the intrepid Polynesian voyagers who were the first known settlers of the lush islands. Their oral history went back a thousand years. Their poetry and music (Liliuokalani was musically gifted) was among the loveliest the world has ever known. Their songs and legends tell of their ancestors' travels in great canoes from southeastern Asia.

There were giants (often literally) among the monarchs Paul Bailey tells us about: King Kalaniopuu, who received Cook royally at Kealakekua Bay on Cook's second voyage to Hawaii. Then there was Kamehameha, a Hawaiian Napoleon, who had been a minor chief and was beginning his rise to power. In a series of brilliantly executed campaigns this military genius conquered all the islands except Kauai. By 1810 he had established his sovereignty over the entire group. This was the beginning of the Kingdom of Hawaii.

In 1840 King Kamehameha III provided for the first participation of the common people in the government through popular election of a lower house of the legislature, and decreed public education. Six years before, the first Hawaiian-language newspaper had begun publication.

These are just a few of the highlights covered in Bailey's enthralling book, much of which is told through the eyes and ears of the Hawaiian kings and queens. It is a poignant story of their fight to save their nation and people from extinction, a fight that finally failed, but was nonetheless among the most gallant in history. — Nat Honig

Ink, Ark, and All That: How American Places Got Their Name. By Vernon Pizer, Putnam, $6.95.

Here's a book to give you endless entertainment, and as they used to like to say, edification. Bicknell, Utah, Vernon Pizer tells us, basked happily under the name of Thurber until 1917, when an eccentric but wealthy New Yorker named Thomas W. Bicknell offered to build a library for any Utah town that would rename itself Bicknell. Thurber jumped at the chance, says author Pizer, but so did Grayson, Utah. So they compromised — Thurber became Bicknell, and Grayson changed its name to Blanding after Bicknell's wife's maiden name, and both got libraries.

Pawhuska, Oklahoma: During an army skirmish with the Osage, a young brave, noting a slightly wounded officer's long white hair, was intent on scalping him. "The brave grasped the hair but before he could swing his knife the officer dashed away and leaped on a riderless horse." The brave was left holding the hair-which-was a wig. The Indian wore his cherished spoil constantly, and won the name Paw-Hu-Scah, "white hair." He eventually became a chief, and when a tribal town was established it was named for him.

Show Low, Arizona: The two original settlers were C. E. Cooley and Marion Clark, and they eventually got on each other's nerves. They played a game of Seven-Up, the loser of which was to pack up and leave. After a few hands, Cooley needed only one more point to win. Clark tossed his hand down in disgust and said, "Show low and you win." "Cooley triumphantly turned up his hand, saying, 'Show low and you win.'" In time a community was built there, and Show Low it was, and still is.

This is a book for youngsters, and their elders will love it too. — Joseph C. Chance

I Hear America Talking: An Illustrated Treasury of American Words and Phrases. By Stuart Berg Flexner. Van Nostrand Reinhold, $18.95.

Once upon a time, a john was a jake. Jake meant a privy in England, coming into use about 1530. By the 1650s, jake had become john. In America of the 1840s and 1850s, it was called a joe. In the 1750s, the jake, john or joe had moved indoors in the finer homes of England and was rechristened water closet.

Stuart Berg Flexner's sparkling look at the American language and how it became its own distinct and flavorful brand of English is, let's face it, wordy — but not in the pejorative sense. It's wordy because words are what it's all about, specifically the words which were and are the warp and the woof of our history. Browsing through "I Hear America Talking," you become privy (not the kind of privy mentioned above) to facets of American history that you never knew about before.

You are reminded that our American language, as well as our people, are a melting pot. A few examples:

From the German we get (to name a few words): Phooey! (German-and also Yiddish — pfui!). Ouch! (German "autsch"). Pinochle (Swiss-German bi nokl). Scram! (German schrammen). Klutz (German klotz, literally a block of wood, figuratively a clod).

From the Yiddish: Mazuma (Yiddish mezumen, from the Hebrew mezumaa ready, hence ready cash). Fin, a $5 bill (Yiddish finf, meaning five). Kibitz (Yiddish kibitsen, from German kibitzen, to look on).

France too, we learn from Flexner, has given us some good words: Sashay (from French chasser, to chase). In cahoots with (French cahute, a cabin).

In days long gone by, the French and the English were almost always at war with each other. So the British called syphilis (which every American newspaper used to call "a social disease") the French pox, or the French disease. And the French called it the English disease. — Nat Honig

erma bombeck

"Wasn't it wonderful having our son home for the holidays?" I asked my husband.

"It certainly was," he smiled wistfully.

"I didn't realize we'd miss him so much. He's grown taller, hasn't he?"

"And looks a little too thin? I suppose a mother would notice those things before a father, wouldn't she?"

"How's he doing in school?" I asked. "He'd talk those things over with a father, wouldn't he?"

"Not really. He has matured quite a bit though, hasn't he?"

"A father would observe that right off the bat."

"If you want to know the truth," said my husband, "I never set eyes on the kid the entire three weeks he was home."

"You're kidding," I gasped.

"No. I thought I saw the back of his head once as he was backing the car out of the driveway, but I couldn't be sure. How's he doing?"

"I never saw him either."

"He WAS here, wasn't he?" asked my husband.

"OH YES, I'M SURE of that. I could see him mounded in the center of the bed. He'd get up around the crack of noon and take a shower and once I handed him the phone through the door."

"You actually saw him?"

"It was steamy, but I'm pretty sure it was him."

"Wait a minute," said my husband. "Does he have a gray sweater with three stripes on the sleeve? I think I saw him one night holding both refrigerator doors wide open like he was welcoming a convention."

"That wasn't our son, that was Mark."

"I wish I had known that. I apologized to him for not spending more time with him."

"It's a natural mistake. He was here the entire Christmas vacation. Wait a minute. There's the phone."

"Any news of our son?"

"He's fine and says he doesn't know if he can get home for spring vacation or not."

"How will we know for sure?" shrugged my husband.

"Just feel the hood of the car."

No reprieve for taxes on back alimony

DEAR MR. SMITH: Years ago I agreed to pay my divorced wife a regular monthly alimony, which I deducted on my income tax returns. Due to financial problems, I was granted a court order suspending, but not cancelling, the alimony payments. I finally owed a total of $39,550 in back alimony. This was a lien on my residence, which I had inherited in 1962. I sold the residence and paid $19,000 to settle the back alimony, all as mutually agreed. How do I deduct this? Can I spread it over a few years? — W. W. M.

Alimony which woud have been deductible if paid on time, is also deductible if it is paid at a later date. This also applies when the amount due is compromised. You have an itemized deduction of $19,000 for 1976, for federal income tax purposes. It cannot be deducted in any other year, but if you had a taxable gain in 1976 on the sale of your residence, your alimony deduction should be beneficial.

DEAR MR. SMITH: In 1968 I sold real estate and took 20 per cent down and monthly payments on the balance with $500 or more per month. In 1976 this trust deed was paid off. I received over $3,000. When I sold the real estate, I paid income tax only on the amount I received. Each year thereafter, I paid tax on the amount I received during that year. Now do I have to pay income tax on the amount received at this time, or can I report each year according to the original schedule of payments? — T. O.

You are required to report in 1976, all the gain not previously reported. Income averaging may help reduce the tax.

DEAR MR. SMITH: I received an auto injury settlement from the insurance people. The accident date was July 2, 1973. I received $13,500 on Oct. 25, 1976, out of $25,000 agreed as the total amount due me. Lawyers fees, courts, subpeonas, doctors etc., added up to the difference of $11,500. What is my income tax obligation, if any? There was no distribution clause charging so much to loss of income, injury, pain and suffering. — J. S.

The net check you received was 54 per cent of the $25,000 gross settlement. Your attorney can help you determine how much, if any, of the $25,000 was for loss of income or medical expenses. You would report income for 1976 equal to 54 per cent of those two items, but the medical income is limited to the tax benefit you received by deducting those same medical expenses in prior years. The balance of the settlement is tax-free.

DEAR MR. SMITH: I had been living and working in California when the doctor advised my wife to move to Arizona since the drier climate would help her arthritic problem. I decided to continue working three days per week in California while spending the other four days of the week in Arizona. This is a costly commuting arrangement. I work for a salary in California. May I deduct these commuting expenses either as a business expense or a health expense? — R. R.

The IRS does not consider this type of commuting to be either a business or medical expense. Upon audit, such deductions would be disallowed. On the other hand, if you can find employment in Arizona and move there, you may have a substantial deduction for moving expenses.

How we 'saved' Hawaii

Those Kings and Queens of Old Hawaii. By Paul Bailey. Westernlore Books, Box 41073, Eagle Rock Station, Los Angeles 90041, $11.95.

More gracious than Victoria, and certainly more gifted, Queen Liliuokalani was the last monarch of Hawaii. The United States, at the height of its expansionism, and grabbing everything that wasn't nailed down, deposed her in 1893. It was the triumph of the crass over class, and it paved the way for the lords of the pineapple.

When Captain James Cook "discovered" the kingdom of Hawaii (and named it the Sandwich Islands after the Earl of Sandwich) in 1778, the native population was 300,000. A century later, the white man's blessings of disease, exploitation and greed had left the islands with a mere 20,000 natives. (Cook, incidentally, was later killed by Hawaiian natives in a misunderstanding).

When Liliuokalani was deposed, the Americans set up a "republic" under the presidency of Sanford Ballard Dole (you've seen the name Dole on pineapple cans). After a "decent" interval, the U.S. annexed the islands, in 1898. The American people, of course, were led to believe that we were bringing civilization (and religion) to yet another barbarous people. The facts are otherwise, as Paul Bailey proves in his vivid, enchanting story of the Hawaiian monarchy and the Hawaiian people.

They were a folk of a high order, descendants of the intrepid Polynesian voyagers who were the first known settlers of the lush islands. Their oral history went back a thousand years. Their poetry and music (Liliuokalani was musically gifted) was among the loveliest the world has ever known. Their songs and legends tell of their ancestors' travels in great canoes from southeastern Asia.

There were giants (often literally) among the monarchs Paul Bailey tells us about: King Kalaniopuu, who received Cook royally at Kealakekua Bay on Cook's second voyage to Hawaii. Then there was Kamehameha, a Hawaiian Napoleon, who had been a minor chief and was beginning his rise to power. In a series of brilliantly executed campaigns this military genius conquered all the islands except Kauai. By 1810 he had established his sovereignty over the entire group. This was the beginning of the Kingdom of Hawaii.

In 1840 King Kamehameha III provided for the first participation of the common people in the government through popular election of a lower house of the legislature, and decreed public education. Six years before, the first Hawaiian-language newspaper had begun publication.

These are just a few of the highlights covered in Bailey's enthralling book, much of which is told through the eyes and ears of the Hawaiian kings and queens. It is a poignant story of their fight to save their nation and people from extinction, a fight that finally failed, but was nonetheless among the most gallant in history. — Nat Honig

Q. "We just salvaged our old Peacock chair from the barn and plan to restore it." — Mr. and Mrs. R. W., Mound Valley, N.Y.

A. The rattan Peacock chair with its high fan-like back and base resembling an hour glass came into popularity in the late 1800s. Originally they were imported from the Orient, but when the demand for them reached a fever pitch in the period following the Philadelphia Centennial Exposition of 1876, American manufacturers rushed these rattan beauties into production. The term "Saratoga Chair" is often used in connection with these super sitters as they were found gracing the porches of the most posh hotels at this elegant New York spa around the turn of the century. Value guide: good condition, circa 1900, $325.

Q. "Do our trifles from the 1939 New York World's Fair have sufficient age to warrant collectors' attention?" — Dorothy and Al, Ossian, Ind.

A. When souvenir hunters converged on the fairgrounds, they returned home with tons of treasures. All of them are guaranteed to find favor with the flea market followers. Value guide: bottle, hemisphere, milk glass, 9¼ tall, $18; cake server, silverplated, $12; match holder, $11; paper umbrella, $12; souvenir spoon, silverplated, $5; teapot, ceramic, $10; token, brass, Communications building, $4.

Q. "Please enlighten me about a lovely dresser tray marked 'Elite Limoges'." — Barbara, Oceanside, Calif.

A. This mark was utilized by the firm of Bawo & Dotter in the late 1800s on their ceramic creations originating in the Limoges district of France. They were American import agents who established their own decorating shop at Limoges in the early 1870s. As the business prospered, they began producing their own whiteware in the 1890s. Exquisite Elite porcelains are held in high esteem. Value guide: dresser tray, pale pink roses, circa 1895, $35.

Q. "I must have everything I can find pertaining to Aunt Jemima." — Evelyn, Toledo, Ohio.

A. Collectors positively flip over Aunt Jemima dolls, vases, cookie jars, planters, salt and pepper shakers, banks, door stops and other articles based on this well known lady from pancake land. Aunt Jemina, Uncle Mose, Wade and Diana rag dolls have long been nursery floor favorites. The Grinnel Lithograph Company was responsible for the version distributed during the mid-1920s. The Aunt Jemima pottery cookie jar attributed to the McCoy Pottery Company also deserves mention as a tempting acquisition. Value guide: bank, metal, $20; door stop, original paint, $32.

BILL THOMPSON
Taste bud action starts Tuesday

ARE THEY FORTUNATE or unfortunate? I'm referring to those who have been on a dizzying whirl of holiday parties. This week their taste buds and food interests may be near exhaustion from too many hors d'oeuvres and exotic cocktails.

I know a wonderful way to rejuvenate and restore tired taste buds. My solution won't work today or Monday, however, because Kelly's restaurant is closed for the holidays. But it will reopen as usual Tuesday, serving from 4 p.m. on, offering creations that will excite and inspire one's palate far beyond the norm.

Kelly's (spelled with a backward K just to be different) is at 5716 E. Second St. in the Naples canal suburb of Long Beach. It's owned by Bill Thompson and Millie Vessels. Kelly's is Irish in theme, but Bill and his friendly staff don't take that Irish idea too seriously. Otherwise, why would the tables be covered with those immaculate orange-colored linen cloths?

Bill's crew includes many accomplished waiters and a pair of kitchen artists who turn out incredibly delicious soups, salad dressings, crab Louies, panfried abalone, trout stuffed with crab and shrimp, filet of sole delmonico, fried chicken, Delta-style, chicken livers sauteed with mushrooms and many others, including the best steaks and lobster. Those culinary artists are Milena Hladikova, who's been at Kelly's over 18 years, and Frank Rossi, who's been there over nine years.

Frank and Milena are a team who work together as smoothly as Fred Astaire and Ginger Rogers or Spencer Tracy and Katharine Hepburn. Frank's name is on the menu for one of his creations, piatto romano Rossi ($6.50), a combination of the choicest roast sirloin of beef with thin slices of gourmet ham, eggplant, prepared with melted cheese and a burgundy sauce. There's no dish on the menu mentioning Milena's name. Since she is Long Beach's premier lady chef, she deserves such recognition for one of her masterpieces. She's not a Womlibber. She's the quiet type who doesn't make waves; she may even be miffed because I brought up the subject.

Also on the menu is a delectable hot afterdinner drink created from columnist George Robeson's recipe. It's called Coffee Robeson. When I enjoyed it recently, it was served in a cup marked Irish Coffee. If I were George, I would picket out front at Kelly's until the restaurant does the decent thing and serves Coffee Robeson in a special Robeson cup.

Kelly's dinners, from $4.75 to over $9, include an outstanding selection of relishes, epicurean soup and salad, potatoes, hot dark and light breads. It's a true feast, so go with a good appetite. Other entrees include lamb chops, sauteed calves' sweetbreads and madaglione di Napoli, made with filet mignon and wine.

FOR NEARLY TWO DECADES, the Golden Lantern Family Restaurant didn't serve daily breakfasts. So you can imagine how surprised its regular patrons were one day last summer when the G.L. suddenly started opening early in the morning and serving some dandy, inexpensive breakfasts.

Those breakfasts are now served Mondays through Saturdays from 7 to 11 a.m. and are much appreciated by the customers. Rated as a "best buy" is the 90-cent special, including two fresh hotcakes, two scrambled eggs, bacon or sausage.

The new breakfast schedule is the brain child of Dwight Jacobs, who took over at the Golden Lantern last July as co-owner and general manager. His partner is Hubert Hust, owner of Hubert's Cafeterias in downtown Long Beach. The customers at the Golden Lantern, Palo Verde Avenue just south of Spring Street, were delighted to see Dwight return. He'd been a familiar sight at the cafeteria for many years when he was manager. Then he was absent for many mon hs while working for Hubert's Cafeterias.

His old friends at the Golden Lantern greeted him with phrases such as: "Glad to see you getting up in the world, Dwight. Good luck!" Or: "Wonderful to have you back, Dwight. We missed you!"

The Golden Lantern, which opened back in the late 1950s, is one of Southern California's most beautiful cafeterias, with many dining rooms, a friendly serving counter staff and decorations that include hundreds of valuable antiques. The top personnel on Dwight's staff includes manager Russ Bellamy and No. 1 chef Ken Mudgett.

On Sundays, the Golden Lantern serves dinner from 11:30 a.m. to 8 p.m. The guests can order as much or as little as they wish. The complete dinners, served every evening, are unusually generous and fresh, including two salads per person, entree, potato, vegetable, bread, roll or muffin from the G.L.'s ovens, beverage and such dessert choices as bread pudding or perhaps pie or cheesecake. Among the most popular Sunday entrees are tender juicy roast lamb, $3.48, and succulent roast turkey, $3.20.

The luncheons at the Golden Lantern are almost as generous as dinners, which is why many people enjoy their midday meal there. Among the entrees, $1.79, are hearty beef stew or meat loaf or other daily entrees, served with salad, bread, butter, potato, vegetable, beverage and a small dessert. The luncheons are Mondays through Saturdays, 11:30 a.m. to 4 p.m.

During breakfast, the Golden Lantern also serves hot pecan rolls, blueberry muffins and other rolls, fresh from the oven.

CHEF OF THE WEEK

His mission is helping others

mildred flanary

"Twas the day after Christmas" — but in this home, things WERE stirring. It was on a wintry Dec. 26, 1939, in Aurora, Ill., that the proud parents of today's chef of the week, Wayne A. Teuerle, were told, "You have a son."

Whether it was the influence of the Christmas season or not, Teuerle has devoted his life to doing for others. He and his wife, Janet, are very much involved in the Long Beach Rescue Mission which they founded on Aug. 7, 1972.

The Rescue Mission at 540 W. Broadway includes its mens' facility, and the Lydia Lodge Emergency Shelter for Women. A new Youth Center, at 1400 Pacific Ave., was opened with a gala Christmas party on Dec. 19.

Teuerle ways, "Since the Mission opened its doors in 1972, it has never closed. It is open 24 hours each day, and feeds an average of 80,000 meals each year. Emergency housing has been given 13,000 individuals and thousands also have been helped with clothing, counseling, rehabilitation, and Gospel Services."

TEUERLE'S GRANDPARENTS, on his father's side, migrated to the United States from Austria, locating in Illinois. Following his education in Metora, Ill., Teuerle enlisted in the U. S. Navy and was sent to London, England, where he served three years as a radioman, repairing teletype equipment.

It was in England that he met Janet on a blind date. Eventually they were married in London, her home town; and when his tour with the Navy was completed, they returned to the U.S., where he worked with the General Finance Corp. in Chicago for four years as a branch manager.

"Then," Teuerle says, "at age 26, I received Jesus Christ as my personal Savior." It was on Feb. 16, 1965, at a revival meeting in Peoria, Ill. He entered the Rescue Mission Ministry in February of '66, and served in Albuquerque, N.M.; St. Paul, Minn., and in Los Angeles, before coming to Long Beach. Janet is equally involved in the mission's work.

They have three sons, Mark 15, a student at Wilson High; Darren, 12, Jefferson Junior High; and

WAYNE A. TEUERLE

Paul, 9, who goes to Horace Mann Elementary School. Janet says, "Mark was born in London, just as the bells were tolling across the River Thames."

A member of the Long Beach Optimist Club, Teuerle serves as secretary of the International Union of Gospel Missions, South Pacific District.

Janet says, "Wayne enjoys doing both woodwork and carpentry, and does an excellent job at both. He's also an excellent cook — in fact, a real gourmet." He says, "We both are very busy here at the mission and we love what we are doing so much, we really don't look for outside activities or hobbies."

He always seems to find time for cooking, however, and today his recipe is for Trout Almondine.

TROUT ALMONDINE

Four 8 to 10 ounce whole trout. Roll in flour and fry in open electric skillet at 350 degrees for 5 minutes on each side.

SAUCE

In another skillet, add ½ cup of butter, 1½ ounces of slivered almonds. Brown lightly and add 1 ounce lemon juice — 2 ounces orange juice, and 1 tablespoon of parsley flakes. Stir and pour hot over trout.

Garnish with orange and lemon slices.

Serve with brown rice and a side of frozen French style green beans.

DEAR ABBY

Love affair with Ma Bell

DEAR ABBY: I have a "sickness" that you've probably never heard of, and it's costing me a small fortune. It's telephonitis!

I am constantly calling friends all over the U.S. and Canada, and once I get started, I hate to hang up. I can talk an hour!

I don't want my husband to know how much my phone bills are, so I sometimes reverse the charges,

abigail van buren

and then send them a check to cover it. I've even charged some calls to my husband's business, but he hasn't caught on to that yet.

Right now I am fighting the urge to call the newspaper to find out how I can reach you by telephone instead of writing this letter. (I lost, I phoned the newspaper, but they said you had an unlisted number!)

This may sound dumb to you, but I assure you it is a serious problem. Please, please tell me what I can do about it. — AFFLICTED IN KANSAS

DEAR AFFLICTED: When you get the urge to make a long-distance call, write a letter, take a walk, take a bath, bake a cake or read something. And if you can't stay away from the phone, call a local shut-in and talk until the urge passes.

DEAR ABBY: It was like an answer to my prayers when I saw a letter in your column from a man who was worried because ever since his wife became pregnant, she'd been craving Argo laundry starch! Wherever did she buy it? If I could find some, I'd be the happiest woman in the world because that's what works best for my nylon net curtains.

For years I've been searching for Argo starch, but no store in my area has it. All they have is liquid starch, which doesn't compare to the old-fashioned kind that used to come in a blue and white box and looked like chalk.

Can you help me find some? — CARLA IN SANTA MONICA

DEAR CARLA: I'll try. Does anyone out there know IF Argo laundry starch is still available? And if so, where?

DEAR ABBY: Sometimes the Lord Answers our prayers in strange and unexpected ways.

For years when I'd see my mother bathing, I would pray that I would never have sagging breasts like hers.

I recently had a double mastectomy and am free of cancer, thank God, and I also know that I will never have sagging breasts!

Isn't it strangely ironic how the good Lord answered my prayers? — FLAT CHESTED AND GRATEFUL

DEAR FLAT: Yes. Now thank God for your good health!

CONTEMPORARY LIVING

In a stew over Dutch treat?

What are the rules about picking up the bill in a restaurant? How does one save confusion and embarrassment upon the sudden realization that the invitation was meant to be Dutch treat? What do you say when friends suggest restaurants that are too rich for your current pocketbook?

First, never take it for granted that you are invited guests when you're going to dinner in a restaurant unless the other couple (or the person who suggested it) specifically states this. There will be no later embarrassments if it's clearly established at the time of the invitation who will pay the bill.

tish baldrige

Often a meal in a restaurant is a Dutch treat proposition. When a friend calls up and says, "Let's have dinner at The Pink Plum," take it for granted that it's Dutch treat and then come right out with the fact that you're financially pinched right now and would prefer a more modest restaurant.

If you friend counters with, "Oh, no. You're our guests. We're taking you to dinner," then it is understood and you can accept or not as you choose. If your friends flounders for something to say, suggest that you'll join them another time.

If friends take you to dinner in a fancy restaurant, don't be hesitant to reciprocate with a dinner in your own home. Make it as delicious and gourmet a dinner as you can manage, and it will be full repayment in kind. People should stop making pretenses about having more money than they actually do. Honesty is the best policy.

IF YOU ARE INVITED to lunch in the business world, and the other person says, "I'll make the reservations," that is his way of tipping you that he is taking you to lunch. If he says, "Where shall we lunch?" and follows it with, "Well, shall I make the reservation or do you want to?" he is expecting each person to pay his own share. But if there is the slightest confusion in your mind, come right out with it. If you're hurting financially, say something like this, "Look, I'd love to have lunch with you, but we'll have to make it someplace simple. It's just not in my budget this week." If your friends know your financial picture is not good at present, they won't lead you down the garden path into expensive activities. They will be considerate of your problems. And that's what real friendship is all about.

BILL THOMPSON
Taste bud action starts Tuesday

ARE THEY FORTUNATE or unfortunate? I'm referring to those who have been on a dizzying whirl of holiday parties. This week their taste buds and food interests may be near exhaustion from too many hors d'oeuvres and exotic cocktails.

I know a wonderful way to rejuvenate and restore tired taste buds. My solution won't work today or Monday, however, because Kelly's restaurant is closed for the holidays. But it will reopen as usual Tuesday, serving from 4 p.m. on, offering creations that will excite and inspire one's palate far beyond the norm.

Kelly's (spelled with a backward K just to be different) is at 5716 E. Second St. in the Naples canal suburb of Long Beach. It's owned by Bill Thompson and Millie Vessels. Kelly's is Irish in theme, but Bill and his friendly staff don't take that Irish idea too seriously. Otherwise, why would the tables be covered with those immaculate orange-colored linen cloths?

Bill's crew includes many accomplished waiters and a pair of kitchen artists who turn out incredibly delicious soups, salad dressings, crab Louies, pan-fried abalone, trout stuffed with crab and shrimp, filet of sole delmonico, fried chicken, Delta-style, chicken livers sauteed with mushrooms and many others, including the best steaks and lobster. Those culinary artists are Milena Hladikova, who's been at Kelly's over 18 years, and Frank Rossi, who's been there over nine years.

Frank and Milena are a team who work together as smoothly as Fred Astaire and Ginger Rogers or Spencer Tracy and Katharine Hepburn. Frank's name is on the menu for one of his creations, piatto romano Rossi ($6.50), a combination of the choicest roast sirloin of beef with thin slices of gourmet ham, eggplant, prepared with melted cheese and a burgundy sauce. There's no dish on the menu mentioning Milena's name. Since she is Long Beach's premier lady chef, she deserves such recognition for one of her masterpieces. She's not a Womlibber. She's the quiet type who doesn't make waves; she may even be miffed because I brought up the subject.

Also on the menu is a delectable hot afterdinner drink created from columnist George Robeson's recipe. It's called Coffee Robeson. When I enjoyed it recently, it was served in a cup marked Irish Coffee. If I were George, I would picket out front at Kelly's until the restaurant does the decent thing and serves Coffee Robeson in a special Robeson cup.

Kelly's dinners, from $4.75 to over $9, include an outstanding selection of relishes, epicurean soup and salad, potatoes, hot dark and light breads. It's a true feast, so go with a good appetite. Other entrees include lamb chops, sauteed calves' sweetbreads and madaglione di Napoli, made with filet mignon and wine.

FOR NEARLY TWO DECADES, the Golden Lantern Family Restaurant didn't serve daily breakfasts. So you can imagine how surprised its regular patrons were one day last summer when the G.L. suddenly started opening early in the morning and serving some dandy, inexpensive breakfasts.

Those breakfasts are now served Mondays through Saturdays from 7 to 11 a.m. and are much appreciated by the customers. Rated as a "best buy" is the 90-cent special, including two fresh hotcakes, two scrambled eggs, bacon or sausage.

The new breakfast schedule is the brain child of Dwight Jacobs, who took over at the Golden Lantern last July as co-owner and general manager. His partner is Hubert Hust, owner of Hubert's Cafeterias in downtown Long Beach. The customers at the Golden Lantern, Palo Verde Avenue just south of Spring Street, were delighted to see Dwight return. He'd been a familiar sight at the cafeteria for many years when he was manager. Then he was absent for many mon hs while working for Hubert's Cafeterias.

His old friends at the Golden Lantern greeted him with phrases such as: "Glad to see you getting up in the world, Dwight. Good luck!" Or: "Wonderful to have you back, Dwight. We missed you!"

The Golden Lantern, which opened back in the late 1950s, is one of Southern California's most beautiful cafeterias, with many dining rooms, a friendly serving counter staff and decorations that include hundreds of valuable antiques. The top personnel on Dwight's staff includes manager Russ Bellamy and No. 1 chef Ken Mudgett.

On Sundays, the Golden Lantern serves dinner from 11:30 a.m. to 8 p.m. The guests can order as much or as little as they wish. The complete dinners, served every evening, are unusually generous and fresh, including two salads per person, entree, potato, vegetable, bread, roll or muffin from the G.L.'s ovens, beverage and such dessert choices as bread pudding or perhaps pie or cheesecake. Among the most popular Sunday entrees are tender juicy roast lamb, $3.48, and succulent roast turkey, $3.20.

The luncheons at the Golden Lantern are almost as generous as dinners, which is why many people enjoy their midday meal there. Among the entrees, $1.79, are hearty beef stew or meat loaf or other daily entrees, served with salad, bread, butter, potato, vegetable, beverage and a small dessert. The luncheons are Mondays through Saturdays, 11:30 a.m. to 4 p.m.

During breakfast, the Golden Lantern also serves hot pecan rolls, blueberry muffins and other rolls, fresh from the oven.

CHEF OF THE WEEK

His mission is helping others

mildred flanary

"Twas the day after Christmas" — but in this home, things WERE stirring. It was on a wintry Dec. 26, 1939, in Aurora, Ill., that the proud parents of today's chef of the week, Wayne A. Teuerle, were told, "You have a son."

Whether it was the influence of the Christmas season or not, Teuerle has devoted his life to doing for others. He and his wife, Janet, are very much involved in the Long Beach Rescue Mission which they founded on Aug. 7, 1972.

The Rescue Mission at 540 W. Broadway includes its mens' facility, and the Lydia Lodge Emergency Shelter for Women. A new Youth Center, at 1400 Pacific Ave., was opened with a gala Christmas party on Dec. 19.

Teuerle ways, "Since the Mission opened its doors in 1972, it has never closed. It is open 24 hours each day, and feeds an average of 80,000 meals each year. Emergency housing has been given 13,000 individuals and thousands also have been helped with clothing, counseling, rehabilitation, and Gospel Services."

TEUERLE'S GRANDPARENTS, on his father's side, migrated to the United States from Austria, locating in Illinois. Following his education in Metora, Ill., Teuerle enlisted in the U. S. Navy and was sent to London, England, where he served three years as a radioman, repairing teletype equipment.

It was in England that he met Janet on a blind date. Eventually they were married in London, her home town; and when his tour with the Navy was completed, they returned to the U.S., where he worked with the General Finance Corp. in Chicago for four years as a branch manager.

"Then," Teuerle says, "at age 26, I received Jesus Christ as my personal Savior." It was on Feb. 16, 1965, at a revival meeting in Peoria, Ill. He entered the Rescue Mission Ministry in February of '66, and served in Albuquerque, N.M.; St. Paul, Minn., and in Los Angeles, before coming to Long Beach. Janet is equally involved in the mission's work.

They have three sons, Mark 15, a student at Wilson High; Darren, 12, Jefferson Junior High; and

WAYNE A. TEUERLE

Paul, 9, who goes to Horace Mann Elementary School. Janet says, "Mark was born in London, just as the bells were tolling across the River Thames."

A member of the Long Beach Optimist Club, Teuerle serves as secretary of the International Union of Gospel Missions, South Pacific District.

Janet says, "Wayne enjoys doing both woodwork and carpentry, and does an excellent job at both. He's also an excellent cook — in fact, a real gourmet." He says, "We both are very busy here at the mission and we love what we are doing so much, we really don't look for outside activities or hobbies."

He always seems to find time for cooking, however, and today his recipe is for Trout Almondine.

TROUT ALMONDINE

Four 8 to 10 ounce whole trout. Roll in flour and fry in open electric skillet at 350 degrees for 5 minutes on each side.

SAUCE

In another skillet, add ½ cup of butter, 1½ ounces of slivered almonds. Brown lightly and add 1 ounce lemon juice — 2 ounces orange juice, and 1 tablespoon of parsley flakes. Stir and pour hot over trout.

Garnish with orange and lemon slices.

Serve with brown rice and a side of frozen French style green beans.

DEAR ABBY

Love affair with Ma Bell

abigail van buren

DEAR ABBY: I have a "sickness" that you've probably never heard of, and it's costing me a small fortune. It's telephonitis!

I am constantly calling friends all over the U.S. and Canada, and once I get started, I hate to hang up. I can talk an hour!

I don't want my husband to know how much my phone bills are, so I sometimes reverse the charges, and then send them a check to cover it. I've even charged some calls to my husband's business, but he hasn't caught on to that yet.

Right now I am fighting the urge to call the newspaper to find out how I can reach you by telephone instead of writing this letter. (I lost, I phoned the newspaper, but they said you had an unlisted number!)

This may sound dumb to you, but I assure you it is a serious problem. Please, please tell me what I can do about it. — AFFLICTED IN KANSAS

DEAR AFFLICTED: When you get the urge to make a long-distance call, write a letter, take a walk, take a bath, bake a cake or read something. And if you can't stay away from the phone, call a local shut-in and talk until the urge passes.

DEAR ABBY: It was like an answer to my prayers when I saw a letter in your column from a man who was worried because ever since his wife became pregnant, she'd been craving Argo laundry starch! Wherever did she buy it? If I could find some, I'd be the happiest woman in the world because that's what works best for my nylon net curtains.

For years I've been searching for Argo starch, but no store in my area has it. All they have is liquid starch, which doesn't compare to the old-fashioned kind that used to come in a blue and white box and looked like chalk.

Can you help me find some? — CARLA IN SANTA MONICA

DEAR CARLA: I'll try. Does anyone out there know IF Argo laundry starch is still available? And if so, where?

DEAR ABBY: Sometimes the Lord Answers our prayers in strange and unexpected ways.

For years when I'd see my mother bathing, I would pray that I would never have sagging breasts like hers.

I recently had a double mastectomy and am free of cancer, thank God, and I also know that I will never have sagging breasts!

Isn't it strangely ironic how the good Lord answered my prayers? — FLAT CHESTED AND GRATEFUL

DEAR FLAT: Yes. Now thank God for your good health!

CONTEMPORARY LIVING

In a stew over Dutch treat?

tish baldrige

What are the rules about picking up the bill in a restaurant? How does one save confusion and embarrassment upon the sudden realization that the invitation was meant to be Dutch treat? What do you say when friends suggest restaurants that are too rich for your current pocketbook?

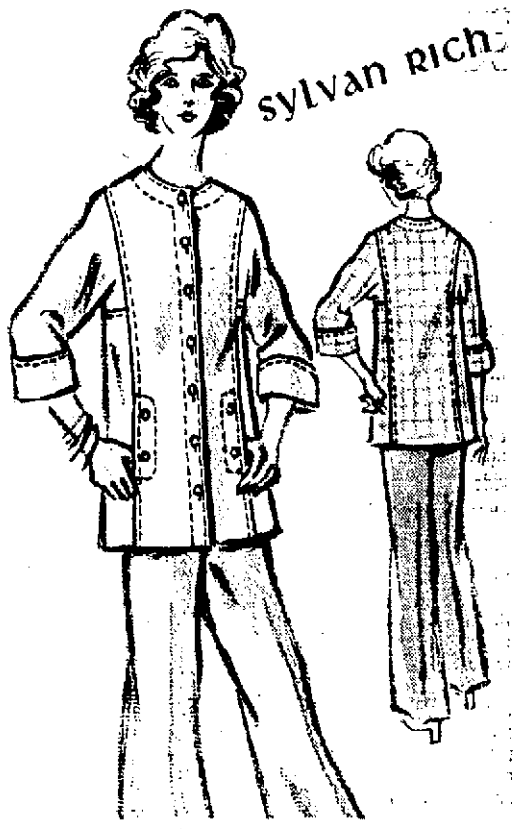

First, never take it for granted that you are invited guests when you're going to dinner in a restaurant unless the other couple (or the person who suggested it) specifically states this. There will be no later embarrassments if it's clearly established at the time of the invitation who will pay the bill.

Often a meal in a restaurant is a Dutch treat proposition. When a friend calls up and says, "Let's have dinner at The Pink Plum," take it for granted that it's Dutch treat and then come right out with the fact that you're financially pinched right now and would prefer a more modest restaurant.

If you friend counters with, "Oh, no. You're our guests. We're taking you to dinner," then it is understood and you can accept or not as you choose. If your friends flounders for something to say, suggest that you'll join them another time.

If friends take you to dinner in a fancy restaurant, don't be hesitant to reciprocate with a dinner in your own home. Make it as delicious and gourmet a dinner as you can manage, and it will be full repayment in kind. People should stop making pretenses about having more money than they actually do. Honesty is the best policy.

IF YOU ARE INVITED to lunch in the business world, and the other person says, "I'll make the reservations," that is his way of tipping you that he is taking you to lunch. If he says, "Where shall we lunch?" and follows it with, "Well, shall I make the reservation or do you want to?" he is expecting each person to pay his own share. But if there is the slightest confusion in your mind, come right out with it. If you're hurting financially, say something like this, "Look, I'd love to have lunch with you, but we'll have to make it someplace simple. It's just not in my budget this week." If your friends know your financial picture is not good at present, they won't lead you down the garden path into expensive activities. They will be considerate of your problems. And that's what real friendship is all about.

LONDON shoppers take doubledeck buses everywhere at any season.

London

Once you've tried it, the big, red doubledeck bus is the BEST way to shop London. No. 14 is the one you want. Stay with it. Wherever you get off, get No. 14 again.

No. 14 takes you to Knightsbridge. To the Scotch House — plaids are big this year. To Harrods, the world's famous department store.

Harrods will set your hair — the salon is so big you never need an appointment. You can buy a head of lettuce. When I had a house in Knightsbridge, I shopped for my groceries at Harrods.

Harrods sells clothing for men, women and children. They outfit African safaris. Expeditions to the Arctic. Some store!

On No. 14 again. Go on to Fulham Road. Get off at 171 at Brother Sun. A little corner shop filled with

stan delaplane

bolts of fabrics from Provence. Huge aprons with deep pockets. Shoulder bags. Shirts. Smocks.

ACROSS the street is Night Owls. Very expensive and elegant night gowns. (Princess Anne bought her honeymoon nighties here.)

On No. 14 to Piccadilly. Catch the grocery department on the main floor at Fortnum and Mason. Staffed by clerks in gray morning trousers and tailcoats. Gourmet canned food to take home.

Go out the back door into narrow Jermyn street. Turnbull & Asser make shirts to measure for Michael Caine, Sir Laurence Olivier and Prince Charles. (An evening shirt goes for $100.)

From Jermyn street into Piccadilly through Simpson's. (Daks slacks.) Lillywhite's on the corner of Piccadilly Circus has five floors of sports equipment.

On No. 14 again to Charing Cross and Foyle's, the world's biggest bookstore. Has four million volumes. Ask for a hard-to-find book and Foyle's is delighted. They love a challenge.

They'll find it. And mail it to you.

LONDONERS line up at bus stops. No shoving. Take your place at the end of the line.

Once on, tell the conductor where you're going — the name of the store will do. He rolls off the proper length of ticket from a machine around his neck.

You pay by distance. These stops will run a dime to 15 cents U.S. You pay in English pence. By this time you'll have a confusing pocketful.

It's rainy in London and the weather's a chill 36 degrees. After you get off at Piccadilly Circus, walk a block to Burberry's. Ask somebody to point you in the right direction.

I bought a black silk raincoat for $125. Some dude!

If you haven't bought an umbrella for London, wait. Gladstone bought his umbrellas from James Smith & Sons at 53, New Oxford Street.

The green brocade Ceremonial Unbrella with silver fringe, carried by the Nigerian chief, was made here. The African leader ordered two of them — $300 apiece.

A WIDE selection of handles: Rhino horn. Ivory. Tortoise shell. Seventy different kinds of wood.

You can buy a cane or walking stick. They measure you and cut the cane to your length while you wait. Sword canes with 27-inch steel blades cost $75.

The firm invented the shooting stick. The thing that unfolds into a little seat. (Where you relax while the native beaters drive the tiger up to your murderous gun. Yes, Sahib.)

You may never need a cane or umbrella again, but they're great conversation pieces back home. "Yes, from James Smith & Sons. ALL the Prime Ministers buy their umbrellas there."

They sell a cane with a handle that unscrews. The inner cylinder holds a half pint of whisky.

Skiers seeking snow

By HERB SHANNON
I.P-T Travel Editor

Scarce snow means tough sledding at western resorts so far this season. Ski centers are posting golf green reports instead of snow conditions, apres-ski activities are preceding the main event by weeks or months and hot doggers are going bananas.

At Park City in Utah, where the traditional Christmas Eve torchlight slalom was conducted in hiking boots, current offerings include mine train rides, gondola views of the barren new Jupiter Bowl runs, helicopter flights, soccer, golf, tennis, ice skating and a ski film festival.

Meanwhile, an avalanche of tantalizing snow statistics is being shoveled out by more fortunate faraway places with strange-sounding names. Obergurgl in Austria reported 22 inches in town and 33 on the ski runs Dec. 15. Igls, in the Tyrol, had almost as much and Wagrain-Flachau, near Salzburg, had twice as much.

In the French Alps, snow accumulations averaged four to five feet at Chamonix, Tignes, La Plagne and Flaine, and ranged up to nine feet of powder on the high runs at Avoriaz. Of 228 runs at the five resorts, all popular with American skiers, 221 were operating on Dec. 20.

Air France's Ski a la Carte program offers a week in the resorts in an inclusive group tour program starting Jan. 15 and running through April 24. The $670 cost includes round trip air fare from Los Angeles, hotel accommodations and an unlimited ski pass for six days.

SWITZERLAND is luring skiers to the resorts of Davos and Hoch-Ybrig with an accommodaation package including three days in Zurich and six in either of the resorts, sightseeing tours and some meals for as low as $198. The offer is open through April 30 and booking can be made on arrival in Zurich at the tourist office outside the main railway station. Zurich is served directly from Los Angeles by Trans World Airlines.

In Norway, where skiing was invented, snow depths averaging 3½ feet were reported last week. Among the many packages offered locally is a 16-day de luxe Norwegian ski holiday to be hosted by Andrea Mead Lawrence, the American skier who won two gold medals at the 1952 Winter Olympics in Oslo.

The inclusive tour is co-sponsored by the Far West Ski Association, Interport, Ltd. of Sunset Beach, and Scandinavian Airlines. The group will board a scheduled SAS polar flight from Los Angeles on March 17, stay in top Scandinavian hotels and visit two of Norway's best ski areas. Information is available from Interport, Ltd., 16771 Pacific Coast Hwy., Sunset Beach, Calif. 90742.

HOWEVER, it isn't necessary to fly quite so far afield to find snow. The Canadian Rockies area, served by Western Airlines and CP Air directly from Los Angeles, and Air Canada via connecting flights to San Francisco, has year-round glacier skiing in addition to seasonal snow at lower elevations. All three airlines offer ski-week package vacations.

Air Canada's special Skifari air fare affords a 30 per cent savings from regular economy rates. Resorts in both Alberta and British Columbia, including Banff, Jasper, Lake Louise and Sunshine, offer six-night hotel accommodations, lift tickets, and all ground transportation in package prices as low as $117.

Year sees more female 'firsts'

more than half her life in confinement. She was 14 when she accompanied Charles Starkweather on an 11-murder rampage.

GOOD SPORTS

In sports, too, women were seeking to prove their equality with men. Janet Guthrie, 38-year-old physicist who tried but failed to qualify for the Indianapolis 500, became the first female driver to participate in a major stock race. She finished 15th in the $249,155 World 600 at Charlotte, N.C.

Sheila Young, 25, of Detroit, became the first American athlete — male or female — to win three medals in one year in the winter Olympics. At Innsbruck, Austria, she captured the gold 500 meter, silver 1,500 meter and bronze 1,000 meter medals in speed skating.

Dorothy Hamill, 19, of Riverside, Conn., won the gold medal in figure skating in the Olympics, the women's world championship and the U.S. national competition. Later, she gave up her amateur standing to skate in the Ice Capades, signing a two-year contract.

In the Summer Olympics in Montreal, Nadia Comaneci of Romania became the darling of the press, the spectators and the television audiences. The 14-year-old, 88-pound gymnast amassed seven perfect 10.0 scores and came away with three of the five individual gold medals, including the all-around championship as the world's best woman gymnast.

Joan Lind of Long Beach won a silver medal in single sculling at Montreal, as did Kate Schmidt in the javelin throw. Martha Watson, also of Long Beach, competed in her fourth straight Olympics.

JoAnne Carner, 37, won the U.S. Women's Open golf championship, and Judy Rankin, 31, was honored by the Ladies Professional Golf Association as the first woman golfer to earn $100,000 in a single year.

Tina Bischoff, 17, of Columbus, Ohio, broke the world record for a one-way swim of the English Channel, crossing from Dover to the French coast in 9 hours, 3 minutes. Australian Linda McGill, 29, became the first person to swim around Hong Kong Island, a distance of more than 28 miles.

Chris Evert won her second Wimbledon women's singles title and retained her U.S. Open tennis title — both with wins over Evonne Goolagong.

The world's top-ranked woman player, Miss Evert, 21, racked up numerous other wins during the year, including the $50,000 first prize in the L'Eggs World Series of Women's Tennis. She received a trophy and a check for $10,000 as winner of the first Woman Athlete of the World award and was voted Women-Sports Athlete of the Year by readers of that magazine.

The Women's Tennis Association, led by Miss Evert, announced that unless women got the same prize money as the men, the world's top women tennis stars would boycott Wimbledon in 1977. In a compromise agreement, the women's purse was made 80 per cent of the men's.

Anna Leider, 16-year-old Alexandria, Va., high school junior won first prize in the National Football League's Bicentennial scholarship essay contest, discussing the NFL's role in American history.

LONG BEACH girl made good as Joan Lind won a silver medal in rowing competition at the summer Olympics in Montreal.

SKATER Sheila Young, 25, became the first American athlete — male or female — to win three medals in one year in the winner Olympics.

BEAUTY titles went to Dorothy Kathleen Benham, left above, Miss America 1977, and Barbara Elaine Peterson, Miss U.S.A., both from Minnesota.

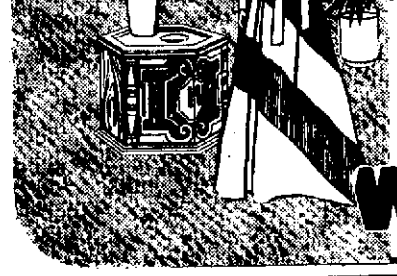

CINDY Breakspeare of Jamaica was chosen Miss World 1976.

Piccadilly is a Circus of big red buses travel

LONDON shoppers take doubledeck buses everywhere at any season.

London

Once you've tried it, the big, red doubledeck bus is the BEST way to shop London. No. 14 is the one you want. Stay with it. Wherever you get off, get No. 14 again.

No. 14 takes you to Knightsbridge. To the Scotch House — plaids are big this year. To Harrods, the world's famous department store.

Harrods will set your hair — the salon is so big you never need an appointment. You can buy a head of lettuce. When I had a house in Knightsbridge, I shopped for my groceries at Harrods.

Harrods sells clothing for men, women and children. They outfit African safaris. Expeditions to the Arctic. Some store!

On No. 14 again. Go on to Fulham Road. Get off at 171 at Brother Sun. A little corner shop filled with

stan delaplane

bolts of fabrics from Provence. Huge aprons with deep pockets. Shoulder bags. Shirts. Smocks.

ACROSS the street is Night Owls. Very expensive and elegant night gowns. (Princess Anne bought her honeymoon nighties here.)

On No. 14 to Piccadilly. Catch the grocery department on the main floor at Fortnum and Mason. Staffed by clerks in gray morning trousers and tailcoats. Gourmet canned food to take home.

Go out the back door into narrow Jermyn street. Turnbull & Asser make shirts to measure for Michael Caine, Sir Laurence Olivier and Prince Charles. (An evening shirt goes for $100.)

From Jermyn street into Piccadilly through Simpson's. (Daks slacks.) Lillywhite's on the corner of Piccadilly Circus has five floors of sports equipment.

On No. 14 again to Charing Cross and Foyle's, the world's biggest bookstore. Has four million volumes. Ask for a hard-to-find book and Foyle's is delighted. They love a challenge.

They'll find it. And mail it to you.

LONDONERS line up at bus stops. No shoving. Take your place at the end of the line.

Once on, tell the conductor where you're going — the name of the store will do. He rolls off the proper length of ticket from a machine around his neck.

You pay by distance. These stops will run a dime to 15 cents U.S. You pay in English pence. By this time you'll have a confusing pocketful.

Year sees more female 'firsts'

more than half her life in confinement. She was 14 when she accompanied Charles Starkweather on an 11-murder rampage.

GOOD SPORTS

In sports, too, women were seeking to prove their equality with men. Janet Guthrie, 38-year-old physicist who tried but failed to qualify for the Indianapolis 500, became the first female driver to participate in a major stock race. She finished 15th in the $249,155 World 600 at Charlotte, N.C.

Sheila Young, 25, of Detroit, became the first American athlete — male or female — to win three medals in one year in the winter Olympics. At Innsbruck, Austria, she captured the gold 500 meter, silver 1,500 meter and bronze 1,000 meter medals in speed skating.

Dorothy Hamill, 19, of Riverside, Conn., won the gold medal in figure skating in the Olympics, the women's world championship and the U.S. national competition. Later, she gave up her amateur standing to skate in the Ice Capades, signing a two-year contract.

In the Summer Olympics in Montreal, Nadia Comaneci of Romania became the darling of the press, the spectators and the television audiences. The 14-year-old, 88-pound gymnast amassed seven perfect 10.0 scores and came away with three of the five individual gold medals, including the all-around championship as the world's best woman gymnast.

Joan Lind of Long Beach won a silver medal in single sculling at Montreal, as did Kate Schmidt in the javelin throw. Martha Watson, also of Long Beach, competed in her fourth straight Olympics.

JoAnne Carner, 37, won the U.S. Women's Open golf championship, and Judy Rankin, 31, was honored by the Ladies Professional Golf Association as the first woman golfer to earn $100,000 in a single year.

Tina Bischoff, 17, of Columbus, Ohio, broke the world record for a one-way swim of the English Channel, crossing from Dover to the French coast in 9 hours, 3 minutes. Australian Linda McGill, 29, became the first person to swim around Hong Kong Island, a distance of more than 28 miles.

Chris Evert won her second Wimbledon women's singles title and retained her U.S. Open tennis title — both with wins over Evonne Goolagong.

The world's top-ranked woman player, Miss Evert, 21, racked up numerous other wins during the year, including the $50,000 first prize in the L'Eggs World Series of Women's Tennis. She received a trophy and a check for $10,000 as winner of the first Woman Athlete of the World award and was voted Women-Sports Athlete of the Year by readers of that magazine.

The Women's Tennis Association, led by Miss Evert, announced that unless women got the same prize money as the men, the world's top women tennis stars would boycott Wimbledon in 1977. In a compromise agreement, the women's purse was made 80 per cent of the men's.

Anna Leider, 16-year-old Alexandria, Va., high school junior won first prize in the National Football League's Bicentennial scholarship essay contest, discussing the NFL's role in American history.

LONG BEACH girl made good as Joan Lind won a silver medal in rowing competition at the summer Olympics in Montreal.

SKATER Sheila Young, 25, became the first American athlete — male or female — to win three medals in one year in the winner Olympics.

BEAUTY titles went to Dorothy Kathleen Benham, left above, Miss America 1977, and Barbara Elaine Peterson, Miss U.S.A., both from Minnesota.

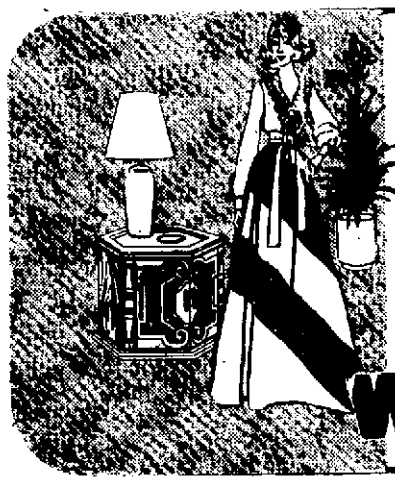

CINDY Breakspeare of Jamaica was chosen Miss World 1976.

Vic Tayback — more than face in a commercial

By BOB MARTIN, TV-Radio Editor

Vic Tayback is never likely to be mistaken for Robert Redford, Warren Beatty or Burt Reynolds, but his face, nevertheless, is his fortune.

And he's not living in the poorhouse. Far from it.

Vic possesses a good, ordinary, man-in-the-street or man-next-door face.

It's a very commercial face, when coupled with the acting skills Vic has picked up over the past couple of decades.

It's the kind of face that sponsors and producers love to use on television commercials — and Vic figures he has been in 60 or 70 of 'em. You've seen him as a midnight snacker for Parkay margarine, in an Aqua Velva after-shave blurb with baseball star Pete Rose and as a Mafia figure plugging lasagna, as well as in commercials for Johnson Wax, General Electric and many others.

Vic's mug is also the kind of face that casting directors go for when they're trying to fill a character part — either villainous, good-natured or even comic. He has appeared in more than 20 theater movies and scores of television shows — more than half the time, he estimates, as either a heavy or a cop.

CURRENTLY, he is appearing as one of the stars of the CBS Saturday night situation comedy series "Alice." He plays Mel, the gruff owner of Mel's roadside cafe in Phoenix, a guy who loves to growl at his waitresses, Alice, Flo and Vera (Linda Lavin, Polly Holliday and Beth Howland).

LINDA LAVIN (center) as Alice, Beth Howland (left) as Vera and Polly Holliday as Flo are waitresses at Mel's Diner.

Mel, an ex-Navy man who still wears his sailor cap, is also the short-order cook at his greasy-spoon establishment.

Tayback looks the part — of course. He was in the Navy himself, during the Korean War, and, if never a short-order cook himself, at least his father was a fry cook in New York City.

Vic, incidentally, created the role of Mel in the highly acclaimed movie "Alice Doesn't Live Here Any More," upon which the comedy series is based. He is the only member of the movie cast who is also in the series.

The series, which made its bow last September, is in a good time slot at 9:30 p.m. Saturdays, falling, as it does, just after "All in the Family" and just before "The Carol Burnett Show" in the CBS lineup. It started the season on Wednesday night, just after "All in the Family," and later was shifted with that popular show to Saturday.

"WE JUST got word yesterday that the series has been picked up for next fall," Tayback told me the other day as we walked from Stage 3 at Burbank Studios to the studio commissary's executive dining room during a rehearsal break.

I had suggested we eat lunch at Mel's diner, since it looks like a real cafe, but the actor responded, with his on-stage growl: "Are you kidding? I wouldn't even drink a cup of coffee in this crummy joint."

While we were eating lunch, I asked Vic if he's satisfied with his part in "Alice," which usually revolves around the title performer.

"I have mixed emotions," he replied. "I wasn't too happy at first, then I got happier, then not so happy and then happier again. I'm like a chameleon, changing from week to week. Sometimes it's nice to be involved in just one scene. Then you can sit back and relax. And you get paid the same."

An episode titled "Mel Falls in Love," scheduled to air Jan. 15, gives Tayback the most he's had to do in any one episode.

VIC TAYBACK . . . lets off steam in "Alice"

"I fall in love with three people, one after the other," Vic explained. "The first is a 20-year-old hippy (Susan Lanier), whom I hire as a waitress. We go out five nights a week, and she changes my lifestyle and clothes and everything. I even get a yachting cap — and a pompadoured toupee. But she takes off one day with someone else.

"I also fall for a beautician (Maureen Arthur) and Alice. I'm rejected by all three."

TAYBACK'S only series as a regular, prior to "Alice," was ABC's "Griff," starring Lorne Greene, which aired for half a season in the fall of 1973. Said Vic: "I wasn't under contract, and I was paid on a daily basis, rather than a weekly salary, but I was in 12 of the 13 episodes." He played a police officer.

Asked to cite his favorite movie role or roles — he has appeared in such films as "Bullitt," "Papillon," "The Gambler," "Emperor of the North Pole" and "Report to the Commissioner" — he mentioned his part as gangster Lucky Luciano in the 1975 movie "Lepke," starring Tony Curtis.

"I've played so many Italian roles everyone thinks I'm Italian," he commented, "when I'm really Arabic. I even speak Arabic. When I started to school, I spoke a mixture of Arabic and English." He's of Syrian-Lebanese descent; both parents were immigrants to America.

Vic was born in Brooklyn and came to California with his parents when he was 16. He graduated from Burbank High School in 1948 and went to Glendale City College for a year and a half. He played football at both places.

"I was a single wing tailback — I had speed in those days," he said. "I could run, pass and kick. I weighed about 185 then, whereas I'm 210 now."

The 6-footer said he'd never thought about acting until after he spent four years in the Navy, and, in fact, had never even seen a play until he was 27. After getting out of the Navy, he decided he'd like to be a sports announcer and enrolled in a radio broadcasting school in Hollywood. He was required to be in a school play, loved the experience and soon decided he'd rather be an actor than a sports broadcaster.

HE ENROLLED in an acting workshop at night, and worked as a teller at the Bank of America during the day. "After nine months I had worked my way up to chief teller, and then they dropped

MONTY HALL

Monty makes his last deal?

By JOHN M. WILLIS

LAS VEGAS (AP) — Television's "big dealer," Monty Hall, bid adieu to "Let's Make a Deal," as the final program starring the Canadian-born emcee and actor was videotaped.

Many of the episodes of the night-time version of the show have been taped at the Hilton Hotel here.

After nearly 14 years and some 3,800 shows in which he has given away an estimated $35 million to $36 million in cash and prizes, Hall decided he had had enough of the grind.

AFTER the final show the other night, the cast and crew had a quiet party backstage. There were few tears.

Monty's last big deal was worth about $12,000. Mrs. Connie Busse, who moved here recently from Milwaukee, with her husband, won two new cars.

When viewers nationwide see the show, they will not be able to tell it was the last one because nothing was mentioned while the tape was rolling.

Hall, 50, explained that in some markets the shows are not run consecutively, while in other markets they are still playing last year's syndication.

Depending on which market a viewer is in, Monty and his sidekick, Jay Stewart, could be wheeling and dealing contestants for another two years.

IF ANOTHER "big dealer" can be found, the show may resume, but Hall says he is done.

Hall explained that taping "Let's Make a Deal" is a grueling task because of the theatrics and spontaneous format.

He said he has been a "captive" of the show's schedule, and he now wants to do other things.

"I would like the luxury of lying on a beach with

TV news' other Barbara returning on 'Who's Who'

By MARY DANIELS
Chicago Tribune

"Between Marabel Morgan and Phyllis Schlafly (the ultrarightists of sexual politics) on one hand and the bitter feminists — Erica Jong, Germaine Greer — on the other, I've had it!" declares Washington's contemporary Scarlett O'Hara, Barbara Howar.

Her voice rises as she continues, "And if you're kind to a man, that's the end of you!"

One is somewhat surprised. "She is so tiny, but her ego is so big," one observer said. She is tall but in a fragile way. Her face is heart-shaped and feminine.

Although she started public life as a close friend of President Johnson's administration, Ms. Howar has evolved as a gutsy, no-sacred-cows reporter. Her coverage of the presidential campaign for New York magazine was very readable.

She told the campaigning Jimmy Carter that if pressed to be more specific about the many women he has secretly lusted after, "I would certainly appreciate being mentioned."

SHE ALSO cohosted ABC's "A.M. America" for six weeks, and before that was a cohost in Washington of "Panorama," a daily two-hour television broadcast about Washington politics.

Now she has joined a weekly CBS prime-time series, "Who's Who," which premieres Tuesday night at 8 on Channel 2. It will feature interviews with newsmakers.

The Washington-based Ms. Howar will be the third regular member of the "Who's Who" team, joining Dan Rather and Charles Kuralt, who reports from "on the road."

But Ms. Howar's multimedia accomplishments, she feels, have put her not only in a no-man's land, but also in a no-woman's land.

ELABORATING on the flak from female critics over her latest book, "Making Ends Meet" (Random House, $8.95), she says, "They can't have at me too much because I have done something with my life.

"Did you see what Erica Jong wrote?" she asks steamily, referring to Ms. Jong's statement, "A woman needs a man like a fish needs a bicycle."

BARBARA HOWAR, Dan Rather and Charles Kuralt are the reporters on the new CBS News weekly series "Who's Who," which premieres at 8 p.m. Tuesday on Ch. 2.

"Needs is not the right word," says Ms. Howar. "I don't need, but I want. I'm 40 years old and half my life has been spent trying for the traditional dream, and the other half has been spent trying for the woman's dream. All I did (in the novel) was write about the emotional needs and confusion of a 40-year-old woman with a foot in both camps. We're such a pivotal generation."

SHE ADMITS there were some "fair reviews of the book," but says there were "also setups" — reviews "by people who hated me before they even read it. Jong reviewing my books is like Golda Meir reviewing 'Mein Kampf'. You never ask a first novelist to review a first novelist!"

The book is Ms. Howar's first novel, but it also retells parts of her own life, which received straightforward, nonfiction accounting in her best-selling first book, "Laughing All the Way."

The novel is a universally female story of a lifelong search for Mr. Right, who always turns out to be Mr. Wrong. It finally dawns on the heroine that only she can make herself a complete person.

MS. HOWAR doesn't deny that it is autobiographical.

"I've spent as much time traipsing after ridiculous men as she (Lilly Shawcross, her heroine) did. I've served my time."

She doesn't deny that she and Ms. Shawcross "are closely related," but that's all, she says.

"My message is simple," Ms. Howar continues. "Lilly goes through all this nonsense to get where she is. She wants someone who will hold off the world for awhile and then she'll hold off the world for awhile for him, and whoever has a free hand will take out the garbage. It's called sharing. She will survive if she doesn't find him, but she'll go on looking forever."

"FRANKLY," she says with a shrug, "I thought it had all been said a thousand times before. Who'd believe such a simple message would cause so much furor?"

The women's movement was supposed to mean "you had a choice, but they're not giving you the choice now," she says. "Every time my book has been reviewed by one of these women, it has been dismissed. A lot of us want autonomy, but want someone to share it with. Basically the book deals with the space between loneliness and freedom."

Radical feminists "think freedom is sleeping around with people whose name you never know. I never liked men who did that. Why would I want to do it?

"THERE HAVE been a lot of men in my life who gave me a break, but because they liked me," not because of sex, she says.

"Look, nobody is good enough in bed to be able to sustain a career on favors. The whole thing is so silly once you look at it with a little humor."

If alienation between the sexes continues, she says, "we all lose out. We need each other. We like each other. When I pick up a cigarette, the nicest men are afraid to light it. They don't know if it will offend me if they do. I keep holding my hand out with this forlorn expression because I can't understand how this is such a hard thing for anyone to relate to."

MS. HOWAR'S novel ends with Lilly Shaweross at a pivotal moment, turning her back on a man familiar to all women — one who can't make a commitment — and deciding it isn't going to be that way any more.

Barbara made the same decision.

"I'm by myself because that's what I choose to do. I'm not hostile because I'm single. If I want to get married again I will, but on my own terms, not knuckle-under terms.

"I don't want to turn myself over to somebody else," she adds. "There are middle-of-the-road people with their own lives, but we still want someone we can share with. There are a lot of people who want the same. I am sick and tired of a lot of bitter people dictating what kind of feminist I'm going to be."

WHAT'S NEXT for Ms. Howar?

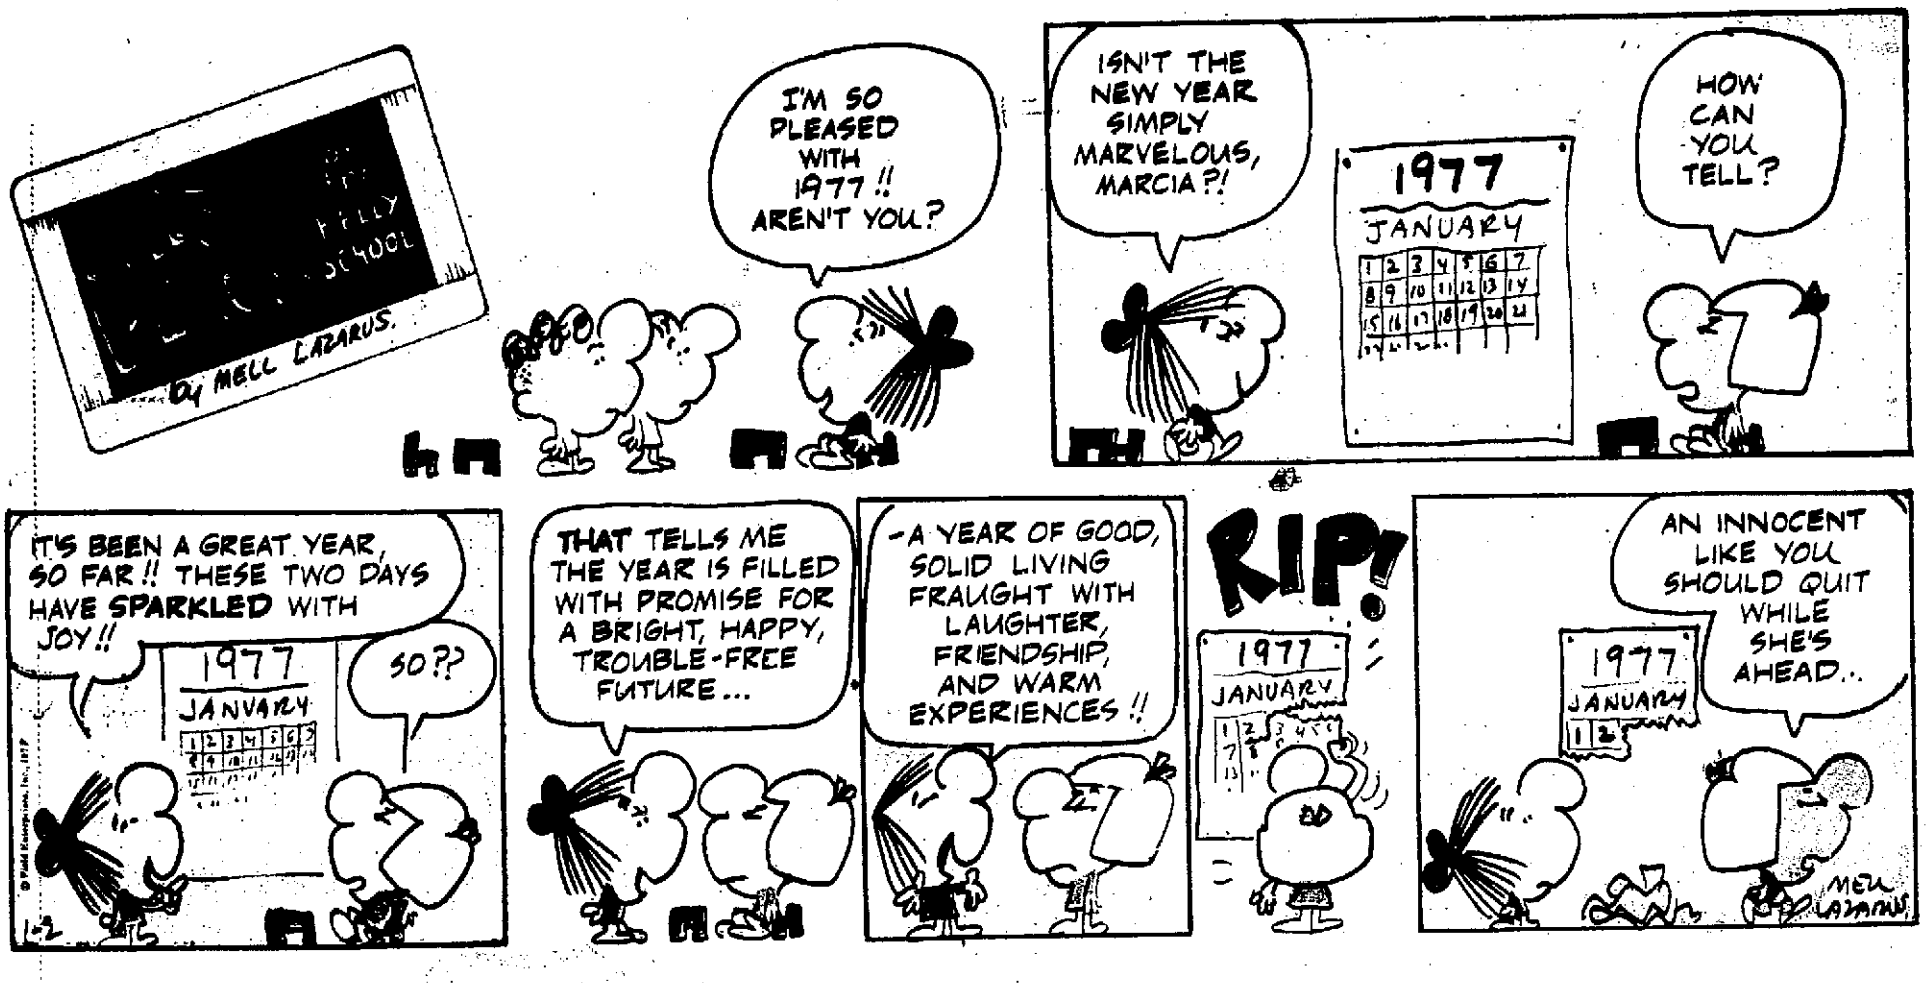

"I'd like to try another book." (She should. The last brought $800,000 for paperback rights alone.) "I'm very determined to prove to the corporate structure of TV that women can relate to each other on something other than a game-show level."

Vic Tayback — more than face in a commercial

By BOB MARTIN, TV-Radio Editor

Vic Tayback is never likely to be mistaken for Robert Redford, Warren Beatty or Burt Reynolds, but his face, nevertheless, is his fortune.

And he's not living in the poorhouse. Far from it.

Vic possesses a good, ordinary, man-in-the-street or man-next-door face.

It's a very commercial face, when coupled with the acting skills Vic has picked up over the past couple of decades.

It's the kind of face that sponsors and producers love to use on television commercials — and Vic figures he has been in 60 or 70 of 'em. You've seen him as a midnight snacker for Parkay margarine, in an Aqua Velva after-shave blurb with baseball star Pete Rose and as a Mafia figure plugging lasagna, as well as in commercials for Johnson Wax, General Electric and many others.

Vic's mug is also the kind of face that casting directors go for when they're trying to fill a character part — either villainous, good-natured or even comic. He has appeared in more than 20 theater movies and scores of television shows — more than half the time, he estimates, as either a heavy or a cop.

CURRENTLY, he is appearing as one of the stars of the CBS Saturday night situation comedy series "Alice." He plays Mel, the gruff owner of Mel's roadside cafe in Phoenix, a guy who loves to growl at his waitresses, Alice, Flo and Vera (Linda Lavin, Polly Holliday and Beth Howland).

LINDA LAVIN (center) as Alice, Beth Howland (left) as Vera and Polly Holliday as Flo are waitresses at Mel's Diner.

Mel, an ex-Navy man who still wears his sailor cap, is also the short-order cook at his greasy-spoon establishment.

Tayback looks the part — of course. He was in the Navy himself, during the Korean War, and, if never a short-order cook himself, at least his father was a fry cook in New York City.

Vic, incidentally, created the role of Mel in the highly acclaimed movie "Alice Doesn't Live Here Any More," upon which the comedy series is based. He is the only member of the movie cast who is also in the series.

The series, which made its bow last September, is in a good time slot at 9:30 p.m. Saturdays, falling, as it does, just after "All in the Family" and just before "The Carol Burnett Show" in the CBS lineup. It started the season on Wednesday night, just after "All in the Family," and later was shifted with that popular show to Saturday.

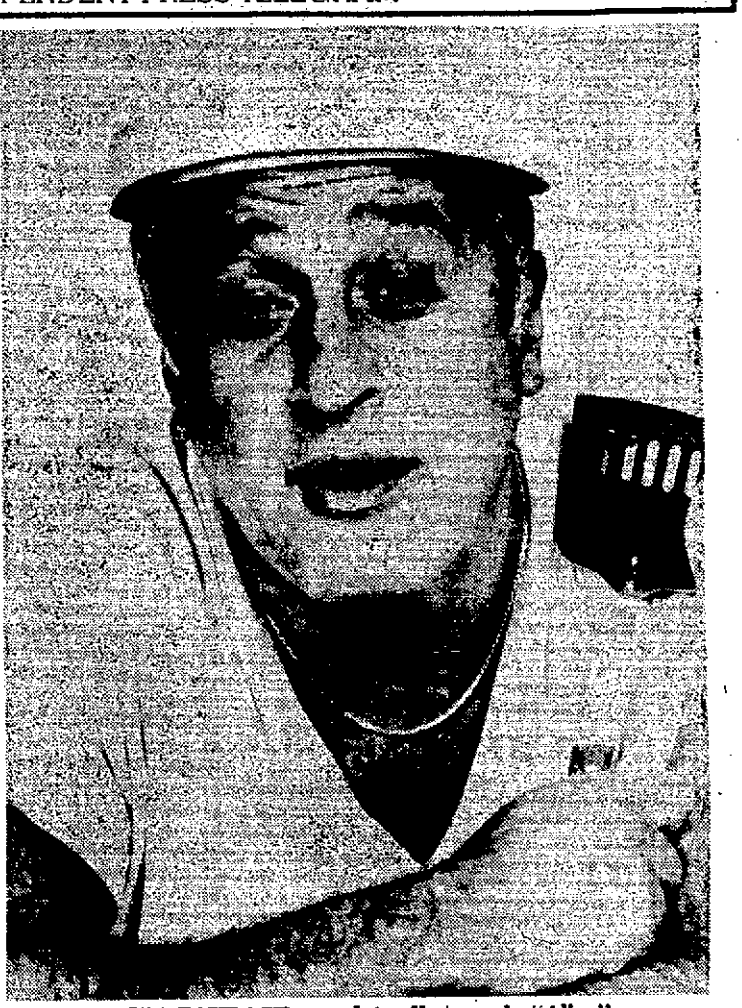

"WE JUST got word yesterday that the series has been picked up for next fall," Tayback told me the other day as we walked from Stage 3 at Burbank Studios to the studio commissary's executive dining room during a rehearsal break.

I had suggested we eat lunch at Mel's diner, since it looks like a real cafe, but the actor responded, with his on-stage growl: "Are you kidding? I wouldn't even drink a cup of coffee in this crummy joint."

While we were eating lunch, I asked Vic if he's satisfied with his part in "Alice," which usually revolves around the title performer.

"I have mixed emotions," he replied. "I wasn't too happy at first, then I got happier, then not so happy and then happier again. I'm like a chameleon, changing from week to week. Sometimes it's nice to be involved in just one scene. Then you can sit back and relax. And you get paid the same."

An episode titled "Mel Falls in Love," scheduled to air Jan. 15, gives Tayback the most he's had to do in any one episode.

VIC TAYBACK . . . lets off steam in "Alice"

"I fall in love with three people, one after the other," Vic explained. "The first is a 20-year-old hippy (Susan Lanier), whom I hire as a waitress. We go out five nights a week, and she changes my lifestyle and clothes and everything. I even get a yachting cap — and a pompadoured toupee. But she takes off one day with someone else.

"I also fall for a beautician (Maureen Arthur) and Alice. I'm rejected by all three."

TAYBACK'S only series as a regular, prior to "Alice," was ABC's "Griff," starring Lorne Greene, which aired for half a season in the fall of 1973. Said Vic: "I wasn't under contract, and I was paid on a daily basis, rather than a weekly salary, but I was in 12 of the 13 episodes." He played a police officer.

Asked to cite his favorite movie role or roles — he has appeared in such films as "Bullitt," "Papillon," "The Gambler," "Emperor of the North Pole" and "Report to the Commissioner" — he mentioned his part as gangster Lucky Luciano in the 1975 movie "Lepke," starring Tony Curtis.

"I've played so many Italian roles everyone thinks I'm Italian," he commented, "when I'm really Arabic. I even speak Arabic. When I started to school, I spoke a mixture of Arabic and English." He's of Syrian-Lebanese descent; both parents were immigrants to America.

Vic was born in Brooklyn and came to California with his parents when he was 16. He graduated from Burbank High School in 1948 and went to Glendale City College for a year and a half. He played football at both places.

"I was a single wing tailback — I had speed in those days," he said. "I could run, pass and kick. I weighed about 185 then, whereas I'm 210 now."

The 6-footer said he'd never thought about acting until after he spent four years in the Navy, and, in fact, had never even seen a play until he was 27. After getting out of the Navy, he decided he'd like to be a sports announcer and enrolled in a radio broadcasting school in Hollywood. He was required to be in a school play, loved the experience and soon decided he'd rather be an actor than a sports broadcaster.

HE ENROLLED in an acting workshop at night, and worked as a teller at the Bank of America during the day. "After nine months I had worked my way up to chief teller, and then they dropped

MONTY HALL

Monty makes his last deal?

By JOHN M. WILLIS

LAS VEGAS (AP) — Television's "big dealer," Monty Hall, bid adieu to "Let's Make a Deal," as the final program starring the Canadian-born emcee and actor was videotaped.

Many of the episodes of the night-time version of the show have been taped at the Hilton Hotel here.

After nearly 14 years and some 3,800 shows in which he has given away an estimated $35 million to $36 million in cash and prizes, Hall decided he had had enough of the grind.

AFTER the final show the other night, the cast and crew had a quiet party backstage. There were few tears.

Monty's last big deal was worth about $12,000. Mrs. Connie Busse, who moved here recently from Milwaukee, with her husband, won two new cars.

When viewers nationwide see the show, they will not be able to tell it was the last one because nothing was mentioned while the tape was rolling.

Hall, 50, explained that in some markets the shows are not run consecutively, while in other markets they are still playing last year's syndication.

Depending on which market a viewer is in, Monty and his sidekick, Jay Stewart, could be wheeling and dealing contestants for another two years.

IF ANOTHER "big dealer" can be found, the show may resume, but Hall says he is done.

Hall explained that taping "Let's Make a Deal" is a grueling task because of the theatrics and spontaneous format.

He said he has been a "captive" of the show's schedule, and he now wants to do other things.

"I would like the luxury of lying on a beach with

TV news' other Barbara returning on 'Who's Who'

By MARY DANIELS
Chicago Tribune

"Between Marabel Morgan and Phyllis Schlafly (the ultrarightists of sexual politics) on one hand and the bitter feminists — Erica Jong, Germaine Greer — on the other, I've had it!" declares Washington's contemporary Scarlett O'Hara, Barbara Howar.

Her voice rises as she continues, "And if you're kind to a man, that's the end of you!"

One is somewhat surprised. "She is so tiny, but her ego is so big," one observer said. She is tall but in a fragile way. Her face is heart-shaped and feminine.

Although she started public life as a close friend of President Johnson's administration, Ms. Howar has evolved as a gutsy, no-sacred-cows reporter. Her coverage of the presidential campaign for New York magazine was very readable.

She told the campaigning Jimmy Carter that if pressed to be more specific about the many women he has secretly lusted after, "I would certainly appreciate being mentioned."

SHE ALSO cohosted ABC's "A.M. America" for six weeks, and before that was a cohost in Washington of "Panorama," a daily two-hour television broadcast about Washington politics.

Now she has joined a weekly CBS prime-time series, "Who's Who," which premieres Tuesday night at 8 on Channel 2. It will feature interviews with newsmakers.

The Washington-based Ms. Howar will be the third regular member of the "Who's Who" team, joining Dan Rather and Charles Kuralt, who reports from "on the road."

But Ms. Howar's multimedia accomplishments, she feels, have put her not only in a no-man's land, but also in a no-woman's land.

ELABORATING on the flak from female critics over her latest book, "Making Ends Meet" (Random House, $8.95), she says, "They can't have at me too much because I have done something with my life.

"Did you see what Erica Jong wrote?" she asks steamily, referring to Ms. Jong's statement, "A woman needs a man like a fish needs a bicycle."

BARBARA HOWAR, Dan Rather and Charles Kuralt are the reporters on the new CBS News weekly series "Who's Who," which premieres at 8 p.m. Tuesday on Ch. 2.

"Needs is not the right word," says Ms. Howar. "I don't need, but I want. I'm 40 years old and half my life has been spent trying for the traditional dream, and the other half has been spent trying for the woman's dream. All I did (in the novel) was write about the emotional needs and confusion of a 40-year-old woman with a foot in both camps. We're such a pivotal generation."

SHE ADMITS there were some "fair reviews of the book," but says there were "also setups" — reviews "by people who hated me before they even read it. Jong reviewing my books is like Golda Meir reviewing 'Mein Kampf'. You never ask a first novelist to review a first novelist!"

The book is Ms. Howar's first novel, but it also retells parts of her own life, which received straightforward, nonfiction accounting in her best-selling first book, "Laughing All the Way."

The novel is a universally female story of a lifelong search for Mr. Right, who always turns out to be Mr. Wrong. It finally dawns on the heroine that only she can make herself a complete person.

MS. HOWAR doesn't deny that it is autobiographical.

"I've spent as much time traipsing after ridiculous men as she (Lilly Shawcross, her heroine) did. I've served my time."

She doesn't deny that she and Ms. Shawcross "are closely related," but that's all, she says.

"My message is simple," Ms. Howar continues. "Lilly goes through all this nonsense to get where she is. She wants someone who will hold off the world for awhile and then she'll hold off the world for awhile for him, and whoever has a free hand will take out the garbage. It's called sharing. She will survive if she doesn't find him, but she'll go on looking forever."

"FRANKLY," she says with a shrug, "I thought it had all been said a thousand times before. Who'd believe such a simple message would cause so much furor?"

The women's movement was supposed to mean "you had a choice, but they're not giving you the choice now," she says. "Every time my book has been reviewed by one of these women, it has been dismissed. A lot of us want autonomy, but want someone to share it with. Basically the book deals with the space between loneliness and freedom."

Radical feminists "think freedom is sleeping around with people whose name you never know. I never liked men who did that. Why would I want to do it?

"THERE HAVE been a lot of men in my life who gave me a break, but because they liked me," not because of sex, she says.

"Look, nobody is good enough in bed to be able to sustain a career on favors. The whole thing is so silly once you look at it with a little humor."

If alienation between the sexes continues, she says, "we all lose out. We need each other. We like each other. When I pick up a cigarette, the nicest men are afraid to light it. They don't know if it will offend me if they do. I keep holding my hand out with this forlorn expression because I can't understand how this is such a hard thing for anyone to relate to."

MS. HOWAR'S novel ends with Lilly Shawcross at a pivotal moment, turning her back on a man familiar to all women — one who can't make a commitment — and deciding it isn't going to be that way any more.

Barbara made the same decision.

"I'm by myself because that's what I choose to do. I'm not hostile because I'm single. If I want to get married again I will, but on my own terms, not knuckle-under terms.

"I don't want to turn myself over to somebody else," she adds. "There are middle-of-the-road people with their own lives, but we still want someone we can share with. There are a lot of people who want the same. I am sick and tired of a lot of bitter people dictating what kind of feminist I'm going to be."

WHAT'S NEXT for Ms. Howar?

"I'd like to try another book." (She should. The last brought $800,000 for paperback rights alone.) "I'm very determined to prove to the corporate structure of TV that women can relate to each other on something other than a game-show level."

THE BIBLE Says

J. T. SMITH

Question:* If water baptism was required for salvation, why was not the apostle Paul commissioned to do it? Mrs. E.R. Seal Beach, CA

The question that was asked by this reader is in reference to 1 Cor.1:14-17 and especially regarding verse 17 which reads, "For Christ sent me not to baptize, but to preach the gospel." To answer the question simply, there was only one person who was "commissioned" to baptize. John the Baptist (or as some translations give it John the Immerser) was the only person who was ever "commissioned" by God to baptize. This was his God-given occupation.

The context of 1 Cor.1:14-17 shows the reason for Paul making the statement that he did. If people were going to be contentious and say "I am of Paul," that is I am Paul's man, I belong to Paul; then I am glad, Paul said, that I have only baptized a few. He further points out that at least two things would be necessary before they could say "I am of Paul." He condemns this by asking two questions, the answers to both questions being obvious. "Was Paul crucified for you?" The obvious answer is no! The correct answer was that Christ was crucified for them. Secondly, "Were you baptized in the name of Paul?" Again, the answer is obviously no!

There were two things then that were necessary for them to be "Paul's man." However, since neither of the above mentioned things were true, the obvious conclusion is this. You (the Corinthians) belong (not to Paul or Cephas) to Christ because He was crucified for you, and because you were baptized in His name. If that made the people belong to Christ then, why would it not do the same today.

No, Paul was not arguing against people being baptized, but was thankful he had not baptized more people, personally, if they were going to claim to be followers of him instead of Christ.

No one today is "sent" to baptize. All Christians are sent to preach the gospel which includes preaching the death, burial, and resurrection of Christ. And Paul said that baptism is in the likeness of the death, burial, and resurrection of Christ (Rom.6:3-4); and we are raised from the waters of baptism to "walk in newness of life." Peter said it is "for the remission of sins" (Acts 2:38).

Monty makes last deal?

my wife and saying, 'Let's spend another week,' " Hall remarked.

He said he believes "Let's Make a Deal" is the longest-running TV game show, outlasting other old favorites like "Concentration," and "Jeopardy."

Hall estimated that he's made around "30,000 deals" on the program.

"In 3,800 shows, never have we had to edit a show because of a reaction from a contestant — physically or orally. They've never hurled an expletive when they've lost a car, and got a pig, or anything like that.

"THAT'S THE love of it," Hall declared. "The beautiful part about the show is that the people have always been so darned decent and so warm. And underneath those crazy costumes, there is a real slice of America.

"They've been very decent with me, and have shown me an awful lot of love. And I've given it back to them in return because that's my thing — my thing is I love the people."

The biggest deal Hall ever gave away totaled $30,000, and he did that nine times during the night-time version of the show last year.

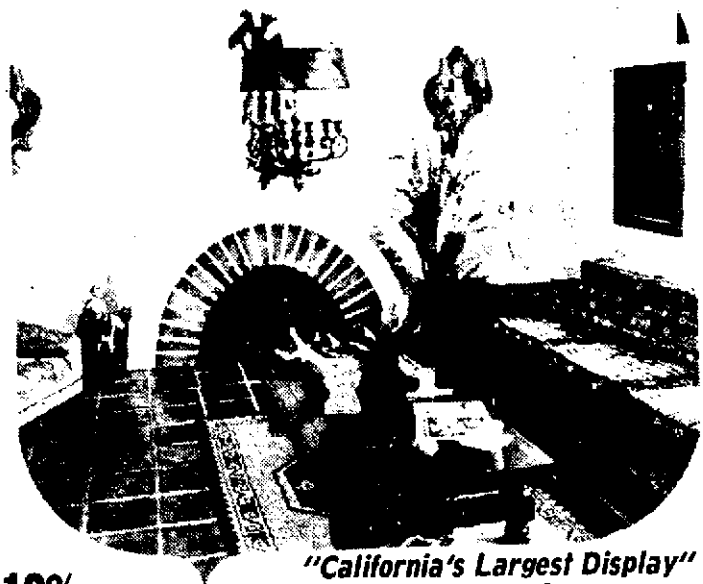

But Hall said he decided to go back to the regular "Let's Make a Deal" prizes.

"We realized that this raising of prizes was starting to get into a contest with the $128,000 Question and all those."

New stereo transmitter for KUSC-FM

Radio listeners in Long Beach will be able to hear classical music, exclusive and original programming and programs produced by National Public Radio in stereo from 6 a.m. to midnight without commercial interruption on KUSC-FM (91.5).

Why? Because the station has put a powerful new transmitter into operation.

The increased power, combined with a move to new, larger studios, will make KUSC — an arts, music and information station — available to an estimated 10 million Southern Californians in 239 communities, covering an area bordered by Newport Beach, Thousand Oaks and Pomona.

The new stereo transmitter, located on Lookout Mountain in the Hollywood Hills, provides 10,700 watts of power and includes a back-up system to assure continuous broadcasting without interruption.

ALICE'S BOSS

me because they learned I was studying acting — they wanted me to go to banking school," he pointed out.

So what did he do then?

Why, he became a "Kelly girl."

The Kelly Girl service, which fills temporary office jobs, hired Vic for his banking skills — "and I worked in banks all over Southern California for a year and a half. Sometimes it really jolted the bank people when I showed up and said 'I'm here with Kelly Girls.' They hadn't been told it would be a man, and when I wear a suit I really look like Mafia."

Tayback said he has earned his living solely as an actor the last nine years, "but for 10 years it was hit or miss — I had to take other jobs, too." Sometimes he drove a cab.

He helped form the Company of Angels little theater group in Hollywood, along with Richard Chamberlain, Sally Kellerman and 10 others, and performed in stage productions there for eight years. And that's where he met his wife, Sheila, an actress who later dropped her career.

Their son, Christopher, 13, is getting a much earlier start in the acting business than Vic did. He got started at 7 when a boy was needed to do a father-son commercial with Vic for Crest toothpaste. Seems they couldn't find any other kid with a face to match Vic's. Chris has done a number of other commercials, and some acting chores, since then.

THE BIBLE Says

J. T. SMITH

Question: If water baptism was required for salvation, why was not the apostle Paul commissioned to do it? Mrs. R.R. Seal Beach, CA

The question that was asked by this reader is in reference to 1 Cor.1:14-17 and especially regarding verse 17 which reads, "For Christ sent me not to baptize, but to preach the gospel." To answer the question simply, there was only one person who was "commissioned" to baptize. John the Baptist (or as some translations give it John the Immerser) was the only person who was ever "commissioned" by God to baptize. This was his God-given occupation.

The context of 1 Cor.1:14-17 shows the reason for Paul making the statement that he did. If people were going to be contentious and say "I am of Paul," that is I am Paul's man, I belong to Paul; then I am glad, Paul said, that I have only baptized a few. He further points out that at least two things would be necessary before they could say "I am of Paul." He condemns this by asking two questions, the answers to both questions being obvious. "Was Paul crucified for you?" The obvious answer is no! The correct answer was that Christ was crucified for them. Secondly, "Were you baptized in the name of Paul?" Again, the answer is obviously no!

There were two things then that were necessary for them to be "Paul's man." However, since neither of the above mentioned things were true, the obvious conclusion is this. You (the Corinthians) belong (not to Paul or Cephas) to Christ because He was crucified for you, and because you were baptized in His name. If that made the people belong to Christ then, why would it not do the same today.

No, Paul was not arguing against people being baptized, but was thankful he had not baptized more people, personally, if they were going to claim to be followers of him instead of Christ.

No one today is "sent" to baptize. All Christians are sent to preach the gospel which includes preaching the death, burial, and resurrection of Christ. And Paul said that baptism is in the likeness of the death, burial, and resurrection of Christ (Rom.6:3-4); and we are raised from the waters of baptism to "walk in newness of life." Peter said it is "for the remission of sins" (Acts 2:38).

Monty makes last deal?

my wife and saying, 'Let's spend another week,' " Hall remarked.

He said he believes "Let's Make a Deal" is the longest-running TV game show, outlasting other old favorites like "Concentration," and "Jeopardy."

Hall estimated that he's made around "30,000 deals" on the program.

"In 3,800 shows, never have we had to edit a show because of a reaction from a contestant — physically or orally. They've never hurled an expletive when they've lost a car, and got a pig, or anything like that.

"THAT'S THE love of it," Hall declared. "The beautiful part about the show is that the people have always been so darned decent and so warm. And underneath those crazy costumes, there is a real slice of America.

"They've been very decent with me, and have shown me an awful lot of love. And I've given it back to them in return because that's my thing — my thing is I love the people."

The biggest deal Hall ever gave away totaled $30,000, and he did that nine times during the night-time version of the show last year.

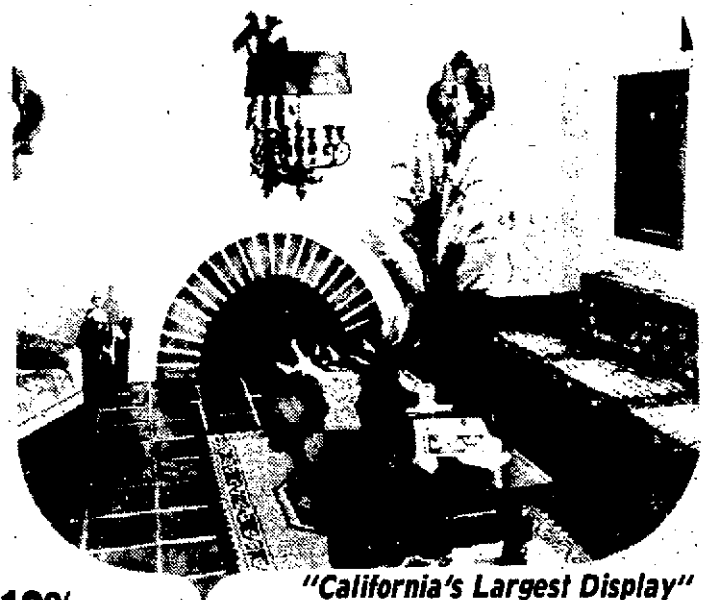

But Hall said he decided to go back to the regular "Let's Make a Deal" prizes.

"We realized that this raising of prizes was starting to get into a contest with the $128,000 Question and all those."

New stereo transmitter for KUSC-FM

Radio listeners in Long Beach will be able to hear classical music, exclusive and original programming and programs produced by National Public Radio in stereo from 6 a.m. to midnight without commercial interruption on KUSC-FM (91.5).

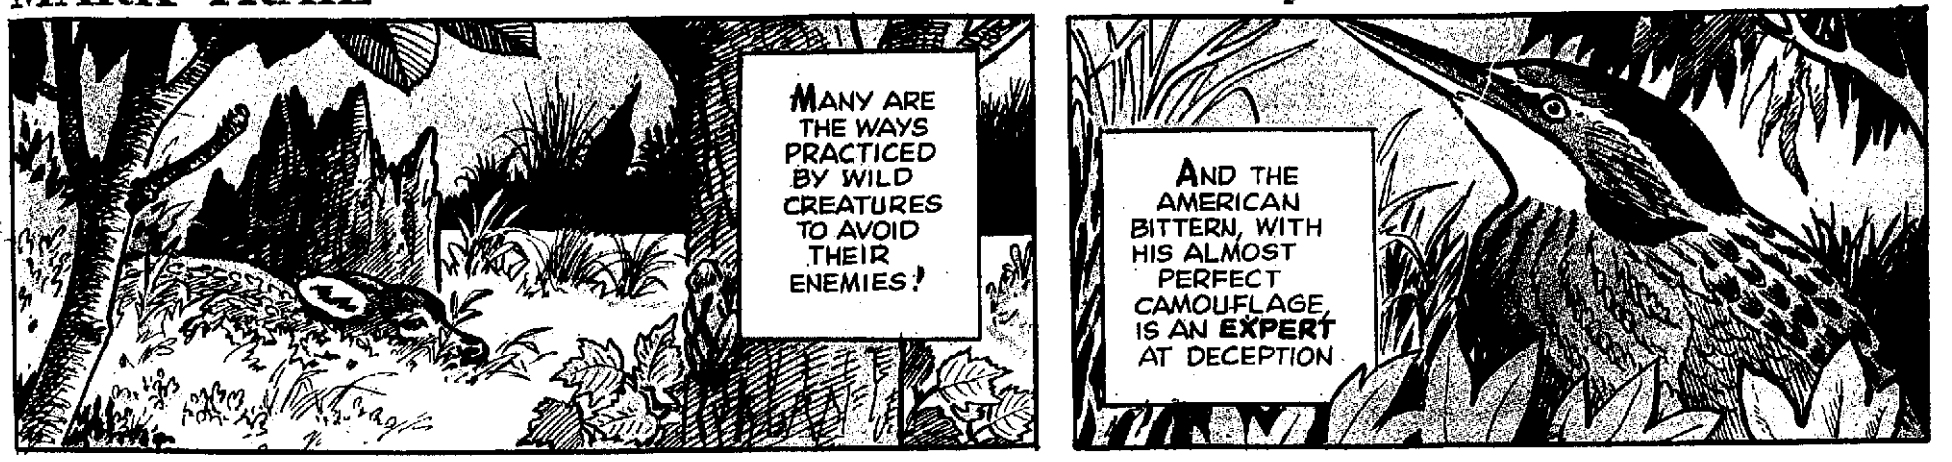

Why? Because the station has put a powerful new transmitter into operation.

The increased power, combined with a move to new, larger studios, will make KUSC — an arts, music and information station — available to an estimated 10 million Southern Californians in 239 communities, covering an area bordered by Newport Beach, Thousand Oaks and Pomona.

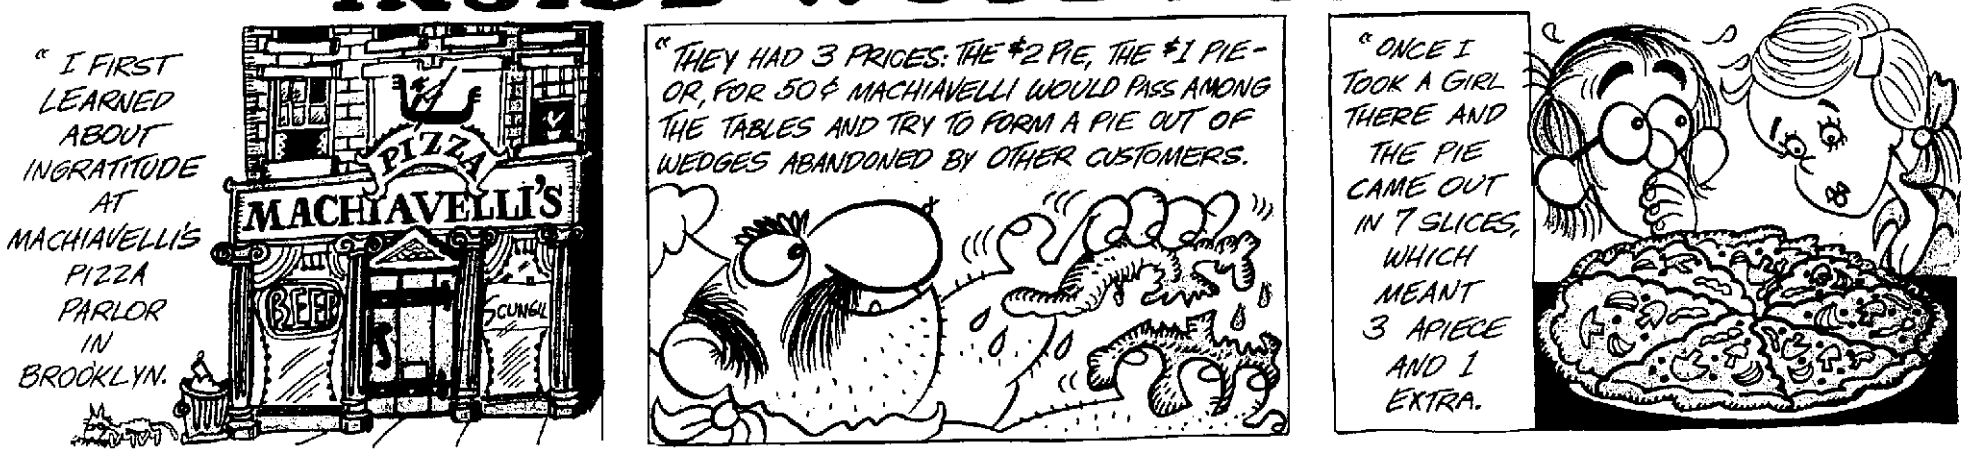

The new stereo transmitter, located on Lookout Mountain in the Hollywood Hills, provides 10,700 watts of power and includes a back-up system to assure continuous broadcasting without interruption.

ALICE'S BOSS

me because they learned I was studying acting — they wanted me to go to banking school," he pointed out.

So what did he do then?

Why, he became a "Kelly girl."

The Kelly Girl service, which fills temporary office jobs, hired Vic for his banking skills — "and I worked in banks all over Southern California for a year and a half. Sometimes it really jolted the bank people when I showed up and said 'I'm here with Kelly Girls.' They hadn't been told it would be a man, and when I wear a suit I really look like Mafia."

Tayback said he has earned his living solely as an actor the last nine years, "but for 10 years it was hit or miss — I had to take other jobs, too." Sometimes he drove a cab.

He helped form the Company of Angels little theater group in Hollywood, along with Richard Chamberlain, Sally Kellerman and 10 others, and performed in stage productions there for eight years. And that's where he met his wife, Sheila, an actress who later dropped her career.

Their son, Christopher, 13, is getting a much earlier start in the acting business than Vic did. He got started at 7 when a boy was needed to do a father-son commercial with Vic for Crest toothpaste. Seems they couldn't find any other kid with a face to match Vic's. Chris has done a number of other commercials, and some acting chores, since then.

JOHN THOMAS DOWNEY

RICHARD FECTEAU

Q. I would like to know if our Central Intelligence Agency ever dropped spies and saboteurs into Red China. If so, how and when?—G.O., Cambridge, Mass.

A. The CIA used to train selected special agents on Saipan in the Mariana Islands and later at a secret training camp in Chigasaki, Japan. These agents were under the command of the chief of our espionage center in Atsuki, Japan. When their training was finished, the agents were air-dropped into Kirin and Liaoning provinces in Northeast China. The agents were, of course, Chinese, and in 1952 they were formed into two teams—"Team Wen" and "Team Shen"—under the command of John Thomas Downey, a CIA man who had been recruited at Yale University. On Nov. 29, 1952, Downey and another CIA agent, Richard G. Fecteau, flew into China in a C-47, dropped supplies to their operatives and were about to pick up Li Chung, one of their men, when their plane was shot down. Downey was sentenced to life imprisonment and Fecteau to 20 years' imprisonment in China. Fecteau, originally from Lynn, Mass., was released in 1971. Downey was released in 1973 after then President Nixon admitted to the late Chou En-lai that Downey had indeed been a CIA agent. Downey, who recently passed the bar exam and practices law in Wallingford, Conn., received approximately $400,000 in back pay from the CIA. Whether the CIA still drops agents into Red China, the Soviet Union and North Korea is, of course, a secret. Frank Wisner, the gentleman formerly in charge of CIA covert operations, took his own life some years ago. Since then the development of sophisticated satellite detection has diminished the need for air-dropping or submarine-landing CIA operatives.

Q. Is it true that Jimmy Carter refuses to eat peanuts because he fears they will give him stomach cancer?—Everett Cline, Ft. Worth, Tex.

A. Jimmy Carter eats peanuts.

Q. Why are Jerry and Betty Ford giving up their house in Alexandria, Va., a house which for so long has meant home to their children?—G.T., Alexandria, Va.

A. President Ford does not want to be in the position of looking over President Carter's shoulder. Ford will have an office in Washington, D.C., the office of former U.S. Presidents, and any time "Potomac Fever" strikes him, he will be able to return to the scene of his time.

Q. How tall is Her Majesty, Queen Elizabeth II of Great Britain?—Myron Underwood, Hempstead, N.Y.

A. Elizabeth is 5 feet 4, towers above Arthur Useldinger, Communist mayor of Esch in Luxembourg. Useldinger is 4 feet 10.

QUEEN ELIZABETH WITH MAYOR USELDINGER OF ESCH

Q. Young Joe Kennedy, Ethel and Bobby's son—isn't he going to run for Congress from Boston's 11th District in 1978?—Peter Kaplan, Cambridge, Mass.

A. Good possibility. In 1978 Joe will be 26, old enough to seek a Congressional seat.

Q. Two great Frenchmen—André Malraux, 75, and Jean Gabin, 72—recently died. One of them was the great love of Marlene Dietrich's life. Which one?—Katherine Norman, Oak Park, Ill.

A. Actor Jean Gabin, who for years loved Marlene Dietrich deeply. Both Dietrich and Gabin were married, however, and each declined to obtain a divorce.

JEAN GABIN

MARLENE DIETRICH

Q. Hollywood friends tell me that Efrem Zimbalist Jr. will run for Governor of California. He used to star in "The FBI" TV show. Is it true?—T.I., Encino, Cal.

A. Zimbalist campaigned diligently for Ronald Reagan in the 1976 Presidential primary campaign. He served as a Reagan surrogate in a number of states, may well like to try his hand in politics come 1978.

Q. I have heard a rumor that in Nevada, where prostitution is legal, the brothels distribute Blue Chip Stamps to their customers. Can you check this and let me know?—I.K.K., Atlantic City, N.J.

A. In Lincoln County, Nev., one brothel offers its patrons premium coupons that allow them a discount on return trips.

Q. Relatively few women reporters cover business or economics. Who in contemporary journalism is the most knowledgeable woman in this field?—S.B., Denver, Colo.

A. A likely candidate is Eileen Shanahan, 52, of the Washington bureau of The New York Times, who has been covering the field for 25 years. In recent years many women journalists have entered the field and are performing as well as men, if not better.

MONTGOMERY WARD

Letters to paradise: Toni Klein reads the weekly mail inundating his South Pacific island after publication of an article describing his idyllic life.

The Invasion of One Man's Happy Island

by Richard Harrington

TUBUAI, SOUTH PACIFIC.

Four years ago, on a remote South Pacific island, I discovered an American expatriate named Harry J. Klein who had been living there happily for 36 years, cut off, through his own choice, from the modern world. In a PARADE article (Jan. 7, 1973) I described his idyllic life—no problems, no tensions, no decisions, no mail.

A few weeks ago I decided to go back to the island of Tubuai, between Tahiti and New Zealand, to see how Klein—who for some reason is called "Toni" by everybody on the island—was doing. I found that Toni Klein, now 75 years old, hadn't changed—but his life had become vastly more complicated and bewildering.

"Since that article appeared, things have never been the same," Toni told me when I arrived via the weekly plane from Tahiti, 400 miles away.

He's still agile, thin, talkative, barefoot and riding an old bicycle. He described his new life as he led me to his tiny cabin and offered a hard, narrow cot on which I could sleep.

"The first change was the letters and parcels," he said. "They began pouring in and have never stopped."

Most came from well-meaning readers who sent him shirts, sweaters, other articles of clothing, and toys for his son Henri, now 15. Some wanted to express their envy of the carefree existence he'd been leading since he left his home in Palo Alto, Cal., in the Depression year of 1936. A few sent money, including a long-lost school friend, now a California lawyer, who mailed him $100 with a note reading: "I wish I could be like you." He also received subscriptions to magazines and bundles of paperback books.

Visitors drop in

A few people actually visited him, mostly from American yachts calling at Tubuai. Some had the PARADE clipping in hand and asked the natives, "Where is this man?" One elderly couple came to the island, moved into a nearby cabin for a week, then departed disillusioned. The exotic diet and mosquitoes were too much for them.

Most unexpected of all was the deluge of mail that arrived after some unknown party—either a prankster or a would-be benefactor—gave Toni a fictitious business title and added his name to corporate mailing lists.

All of a sudden he was inundated with glossy annual reports and fancy circulars addressed to "Harry J. Klein, Chairman, Klein Enterprises." Reports came from Allied Chemical, IBM, Westinghouse and manufacturers of such products as insecticides, tear gas and tanks. Siemens, the German industrial firm, sent him brochures on their latest 32-wheel locomotive. Japan sent tourist display kits costing $15 in postage alone. He was invited to sell electronic stock exchange calculators. The Soviet Union's Intourist office invited him to become their agent. The latest devices in electronic automation and satellite communication were called to his attention. He also received samples of pencils, stationery and rat poison.

"It sure gave me some idea of what's been going on in the world," says Toni, who earns his living by picking coffee berries off the bushes near his cabin and selling them for 25 cents a pound to a Chinese grocer in the village five miles away.

News from IRS

However, what's really weighing down the chairman of Klein Enterprises these days isn't the fancy literature—which he cuts up and takes to the open outhouse behind his cabin—but his correspondence with the U.S. Internal Revenue Service.

It seems that one of the books Toni received in the mail from a well-wisher was The World Almanac. Reading through it one tropical evening, he learned that all U.S. citizens are entitled to Social Security benefits, including old-age pensions. Toni—who never renounced his U.S. citizenship in all his years on this French-owned island—began wondering whether he, too, was entitled to a little something. He also had hopes of obtaining a dependent's pension for Henri, who works as a handyman at the Chinese grocery for $6 a day.

Tax forms arrive

Toni turned for advice and help to one of his new pen pals, an ex-U.S. Marine who had originally sent him a supply of razor blades. Now a Baltimore businessman, he corresponded on Toni's behalf with the authorities in Washington. As a result the IRS began to write to Toni. They wanted to know the annual income on his investments, the depreciation of his machinery and various other financial details. Toni, who earns about $400 a year and has a pig and four chickens, was amazed.

Since then he's received several statements from the IRS, one claiming that he owes them $12.90, another reducing the sum to $10.61, and a third imposing a fine of 93 cents. Toni hopes, through his Baltimore connection, to get his accounts straightened out one of these years and—even more important—to hear from the Social Security people.

Meanwhile, he remains healthy and lively, cooks his own meals and carries his water 200 yards from a neighbor's well in a little pail. And, of course, he reads his mail.

In fact, despite everything that's happened to him, Toni has only one question on his mind. He asked it as he pedaled his bike out to the airport to see me off, flinging a necklace of shells around my neck as a farewell gift.

"Do you think," he said, "that it will take an Act of Congress to get me my Social Security?"

Toni and son Henri, 15, inspect bicycle that is only means of transport. Klein, who left U.S. for Polynesia 40 years ago, intends to remain there.

Through much of World War II, Eisenhower and his driver, Kay Summersby, 18 years his junior, were inseparable. Kay, dying of cancer in 1973, decided to write of her romance with Ike. She got a $50,000 publisher's advance, hired two ghostwriters, Sigrid Hedin and Barbara Wyden, to help. She died in 1975.

Kay Summersby and Dwight Eisenhower—The True Story of Their Friendship

by Lloyd Shearer

SANTA BARBARA, CAL.

In World War II Gen. Dwight Eisenhower had a chauffeur-secretary-Girl Friday named Kay Summersby. She was a tall, thin, flawlessly complexioned Irish beauty with dark red hair, blue-green eyes and a winning way.

She died at 66 of liver cancer in January, 1975, in Southampton Hospital, Long Island, N.Y. The publishing house of Simon & Schuster has recently brought out a book of her memoirs, Past Forgetting: My Love Affair With Dwight D. Eisenhower. Simon & Schuster describes the book as "... the true story of the passionate, moving, secret love affair between General Dwight D. Eisenhower, Supreme Commander of the Allied Forces in Europe, and Kay Summersby, the beautiful English fashion model who became his driver in wartime London, his staff aide, by his side through every crisis and high-level meeting of the war—and the woman he loved."

Excerpts of the book have appeared in Ladies' Home Journal, and Bantam Books has paid $800,000 for the paperback rights.

Past Forgetting is the sad-sweet story of General Eisenhower's sexual impotency at age 52, of his inability to consummate frantically grasped opportunities for sexual enjoyment with his attractive confidante, and of wartime experiences they shared.

Publisher's claim

The publisher claims on the book jacket that Past Forgetting was "written by Kay Summersby Morgan herself." In publishing circles the story is that two ghostwriters, Sigrid Hedin and Barbara Wyden, had a crack at it, with Barbara Wyden writing most of the book from Kay Summersby's tapes.

One friend of Kay's told me, "Kay saw 75 percent of the manuscript before she died." Reportedly Simon & Schuster advanced Kay $50,000, of which $8500 went to Sigrid Hedin and $25,000 to Barbara Wyden, a free-lancer formerly with The New York Times.

When I spoke to Kay Summersby in 1973—the first of six lengthy telephone interviews with her—she said, "In my first book [Eisenhower Was My Boss, which she wrote with Michael Kearns in 1948] I was very discreet. If I ever write a second one, I'm going to insist that it not be published until after Mamie dies. What's the point in embarrassing her?

"To tell you the truth," she went on, "there wasn't all that much between Ike and me. The big love of my life was Dick Arnold, and Ike always knew it. [Richard Roberts Arnold of White Plains, N.Y., West Point, Class of 1932, commanding officer, 20th Combat Engineer Regiment, killed at Sedjenae, Tunisia, June 6, 1943, awarded the Purple Heart.] Dick stepped on a mine and was killed. We were scheduled to be married. I'd gotten a divorce from Summersby for that very purpose. Ike was more than kind. He was like a father or a big brother to me after Dick died."

In subsequent conversations, Kay Summersby, who worked as a wardrobe consultant for film and TV companies, told me that she was "broke," that her medical and hospital bills were "horrendous," that "I don't have very much longer to live, Mamie's going to outlive us all," and that "if I write anything about Ike and me, it's only because I need the money."

Past Forgetting is strategically sprinkled with some torrid passages. For example: "Yes, I loved this middle-aged man [Eisenhower] with his thinning hair, his eyeglasses, his drawn, tired face. I wanted to hold him in my arms, to cuddle him, delight him. I wanted to lie on some grassy lawn and see those broad shoulders above me, feel the intensity of those eyes on mine, feel that hard body against mine. I loved this man."

'Like an explosion'

And later on: "It was like an explosion. We were suddenly in each other's arms. His kisses absolutely unraveled me. Hungry, strong, demanding. And I responded every bit as passionately. He stopped, took my face between his hands. 'Goddamit,' he said, 'I love you.'"

No doubt these Eisenhower-Summersby clinches took place. Kay Summersby was too honest a lady to contrive them of whole cloth. Perhaps time and a ghostwriter's skill have embellished them. But—according to persons who knew Kay well, who served with her in World War II, who were attached to General Eisenhower's staff—the truth seems to be that the general had a great big yen for Kay Summersby but that the yen was not reciprocated. In short, his ardor and desire for her were far greater than hers for him.

A Connecticut matron who served with Kay as an ambulance driver in London is currently the executrix of her estate. She does not wish to be identified. She was frank enough, however, to describe Past Forgetting as "nonsense" and to say, "I doubt if Kay was ever in love with Eisenhower. Admiration, respect, fondness. I'm sure she showed him all of those. But love. I doubt it. She was deeply and passionately in love with Dick Arnold. After he died, the passion went out of her."

In World War II, the officer who was closest to Eisenhower was Capt. Harry C. Butcher, his Naval aide. Butcher, a vice president of the Columbia Broadcasting System in Washington, D.C., was one of Ike's oldest and dearest friends. When Ike was assigned to London, he asked the then Chief of Naval Operations, Adm. Ernest King, to let him have "Butch," a reserve officer in the Navy, as his aide.

Butcher's book

King agreed, and for the next three years Butcher served as Ike's shadow. His book, My Three Years With Eisenhower, based on his personal diary, is regarded as one of the most accurate and revealing accounts of General Eisenhower's life from the summer of 1942 until Germany's surrender in 1945.

Toward the end of World War II, the rumor was widely circulated in Washington that Ike had fallen in love with his driver, Kay Summersby, and that Butcher had fallen in love with Mollie Ford, who ran the information desk at the Red Cross Club in Algiers. The rumor held that both men planned to divorce their wives and marry their newfound loves.

Butcher did exactly that, but Ike, in the face of pressure, chickened out. He wrote a letter to Gen. George Marshall, according to what President Truman told writer Merle Miller, "saying that he wanted to come back to the United States and divorce Mrs. Eisenhower so that he could marry this Englishwoman.

"Marshall wrote him back a letter," Truman recalled, "the like of which I never did see. He said that if he... if Eisenhower even came close to doing such a thing, he'd not only bust him out of the Army, he'd see to it that never for the rest of his life would he be able to draw a peaceful breath... and that if he ever again mentioned a thing like that, he'd see to it that the rest of his life was a living hell."

Truman then told Miller: "One of the last things I did as President, I got those letters from his file in the Pentagon and I destroyed them."

Several weeks ago I asked Margaret Truman Daniel, President Truman's daughter, if that story about her father and Ike and General Marshall was true.

"I think it was," she said. "My father wasn't the kind of man who ordered

The great love of Kay's life was Lt. Col. Richard Roberts Arnold, who was killed in Tunisia in 1943. Above, Arnold as a West Point graduate in 1932.

General Marshall around. He had great respect for him. But I think he suggested that it might be better if General Eisenhower's letter about divorcing his wife be taken out of General Eisenhower's file. I think that's true. I have always thought that was true."

Thus, there is much credibility to the belief that Ike at one time planned to divorce his Mamie and marry Kay.

Captain Butcher, who retired and lives the life of the landed gentry with his lovely wife Mollie in Santa Barbara, Cal., describes Ike's romance with Kay Summersby as "a diversion, a long diversion, which lasted three years."

Butcher knew Kay Summersby well. Both were members of Eisenhower's wartime overseas family. "If Ike had really been in love with her," he says, "if Ike had really wanted to marry her, then he would've gotten a divorce and married her. That's what I did. I was really in love with Mollie. Still am."

Mollie Butcher accuses her husband of "always protecting Ike. He always has and he always will," she contends. But Butcher insists that the Eisenhower-Summersby relationship was no "great love affair."

"The guy she was truly in love with," he maintains, "was this colonel [Arnold]. Everybody including Ike knew it. Ike even gave them his villa outside of Algiers so they could be together and make wedding plans.

"The colonel was a very handsome fellow, a West Pointer, and after spending time with Kay he joined his regiment. I think he'd been up at the front less than a week when he went inspecting in a marked mine area with a captain friend of his. The captain stumbled and set off a trip-wire. He was wounded and Kay's fiancé killed.

Ike breaks the news

"I got the news a few days later, and I told Ike, but it was Ike who broke it with great tenderness to Kay. She took it hysterically. She threw an Irish tantrum. She had the feeling it was all Ike's fault, that he had set the colonel up. But Ike had nothing to do with Dick Arnold's death. Dick had already been assigned to the regiment. And the regiment was up there and all.

"But Kay had a terrible time. She had divorced her husband, this fellow named Summersby who was out in India somewhere. She had lost the man she wanted to have as a husband. She was really fit to be tied. Ike nursed her through a rough period. He sent her out to his villa, something we called 'Sailor's Delight.' He had her ride his stallions out there. He was thoughtful, gentle, kind. He told her she was very necessary, that he had a lot of work for her to do. He told her that King George VI was coming to North Africa, and he needed her to drive him and the King. Ike really restored her morale."

'A yearning'—but

Butcher concedes that Ike had "a yearning" for Kay Summersby, "but there were never any circumstances," he asserts, "in the time that I was with General Eisenhower—and I was with him almost everywhere—that he could have maintained a sexual relationship with her. He was always working, always protected, always being watched. He had no time for fooling around. And as I say, if he really loved her enough for marriage, then he would have done what I did."

Mollie Butcher, who met Kay Summersby in Algiers in 1943, recalls clearly that Ike was deeply in love with Kay.

"Ike had a tremendous crush on Kay," she asserts, "and Butch knows he did, too. But Butch always tries to cover up for him. Ike was very much in love with Kay, and Kay was really sort of indifferent to it. I never thought she loved him; certainly she didn't love him the way she loved Dick Arnold. But there's no denying Ike was infatuated with her. He was really crazy about her.

"And jealous, too. I remember when we all went back to England to prepare for the invasion. Red Mueller, I believe he was a broadcaster for NBC, started giving the big rush to Kay. Not that he was really interested in her as a person. He wanted to get close to a news source. Ike was really burned up about that. He gave her such a bad time about Mueller that at one point Kay said to Ike, 'Why are you so jealous when you have nothing to be jealous about?'

'One-sided affair'

"Kay was a decent, honest, forthright woman. She was not flirtatious. My own personal belief is that after her beau died, she became incapable of feeling too strongly about anyone else, and that included Ike. I always thought that was how she felt, that her relationship with Ike was pretty much a one-sided affair.

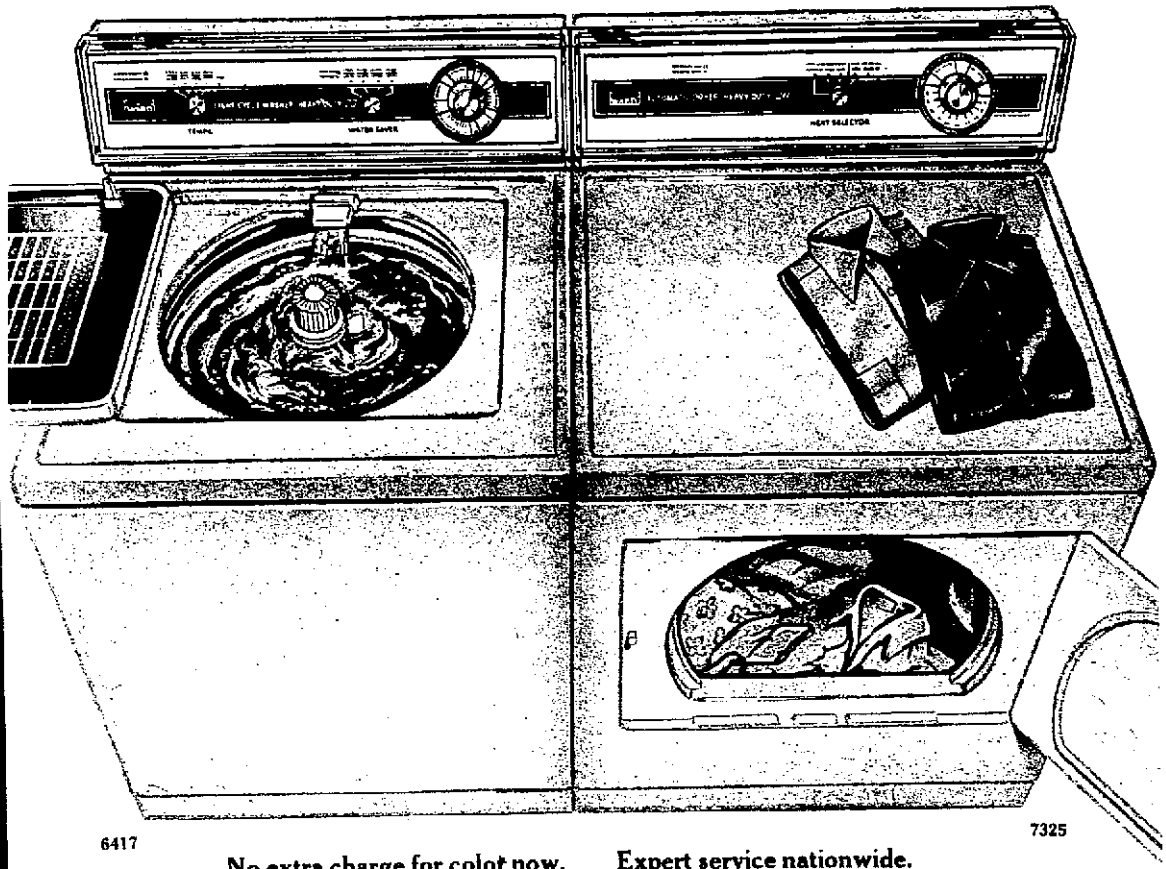

"After all, he made her his driver, his secretary, his confidante. He arranged to have her commissioned a second lieutenant in the WAC's in the American Army while she remained a British subject. She was with him when he met most of the world leaders, Winston Churchill, President Roosevelt, King George, all the Allied generals. He sent her on trips to the States, to Russia, to Germany. No matter what Butch says, she was much more than a diversion."

Kathleen McCarthy-Morrogh was born in 1908 on the island of Inish Beg, not far from County Cork, Ireland. Her father was a retired army officer. She had three sisters and one brother. In the early 1930's she moved to London, worked as a bit player in British films

Eisenhower's closest male friend in the war was his aide, Capt. Harry Butcher, shown here in Santa Barbara, Cal., with his wife Mollie. Butcher did what Eisenhower feared to do. He got divorced from his wife and in 1946 married the girl he fell in love with overseas, Mollie Ford, a U.S. Red Cross worker.

Introducing Fact Menthol. The low gas, low 'tar'.

You might not know it, but cigarette smoke is mostly gas—many different kinds. Not just 'tar' and nicotine.

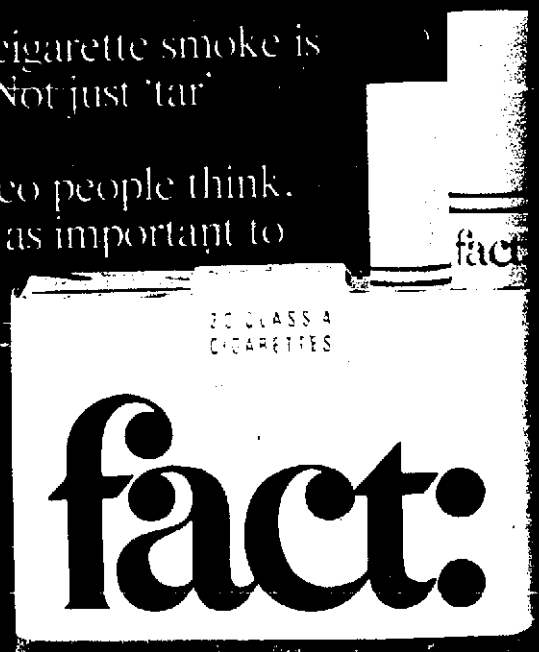

And, despite what we tobacco people think, some critics of smoking say it's just as important to cut down on some of the gases as it is to lower 'tar' and nicotine.

No ordinary menthol cigarette does both. But Fact does.

Fact is the first menthol cigarette with the revolutionary Purite filter. And Fact reduces gas concentrations while it reduces 'tar' and nicotine.

Read the pack. It tells how you get the first low gas, low 'tar' smoke with good, menthol taste.

And that's not fiction. That's a Fact.

Fact is the first menthol cigarette with Purite granules.

The selective filtering agent.

Selective.

That means it reduces specific gases in smoke that taste bad.

In 1952, long convinced that Eisenhower would never divorce Mamie, Kay married Reginald Morgan, a stockbroker. That marriage ended in 1958. Until her death Kay Summersby cherished the collection of autographed photos given to her by Ike, Generals Bradley and Marshall, Churchill, Roosevelt and others.

and as a model at Worth's of Paris near Grosvenor Square. In the late 1930's she married Gordon Summersby, an Englishman who was shipped out to India with the British Army.

When war came to Britain in 1939, she quit her modeling job and joined the Motor Transport Corps. She and her sister Evie drove an ambulance through the perilous 1940-41 period of the Luftwaffe blitz.

When the blitz ended in May, 1941, the U.S. Embassy in London asked the Motor Corps for a few drivers who knew London well enough to chauffeur some visiting American Army officers around the city; by then all its street signs had been removed.

The Motor Transport Corps assigned Kay Summersby the job. One of the first U.S. Army officers she drove was Capt. Richard Arnold, an engineer, then 30 and married. They fell in love, and both agreed to seek divorces in order to marry each other.

Invitation to lunch

A few months later, in the spring of 1942, Gens. Dwight Eisenhower and Mark Clark, having flown into Scotland and taken the train to London, were assigned Kay Summersby as driver. Eisenhower took an instant liking to her. After two days he invited Kay to lunch with him and Clark at the Connaught Hotel. She was 34, Eisenhower 52. When Kay drove both generals to Northolt Airport for their return to the U.S., Ike gave her a box of chocolates.

On his return to London as Supreme Commander of the Allied Forces, he gave her a basket of fruit, then stole her away from Gen. Carl "Tooey" Spaatz, who was in charge of the 8th Air Force. Ike assigned her as his personal driver. Later she became more than that.

The Eisenhower-Summersby liaison began at Telegraph Cottage in Kingston, outside London. It was a retreat of sorts where Ike could play bridge, relax occasionally, and enjoy a modicum of privacy. "After the first few evenings at Telegraph Cottage," Kay Summersby wrote,."Eisenhower decided that it was too much for me to drive back to London on the nights he decided to sleep over... so he requisitioned a billet for me at Bushey Park, which was very close, so that I could get more sleep."

Ike was apparently shy, reticent, and circumspect in his courting until Kay's fiancé was killed. After that Ike became more ardent, only to have his impotency defeat and frustrate him.

A letter to Mamie

At the time he projected the public image of a hard-working, war-weary commander who faithfully wrote to his wife back in the States almost every week. (His son, John Eisenhower, is in the process of editing a collection of those letters.) In truth, according to Summersby, she once typed out a letter to Mamie Eisenhower based on some notes Ike had given her. A quick reply from Mamie suggested that she was not particularly receptive to typewritten letters. From that point on the General wrote home by hand.

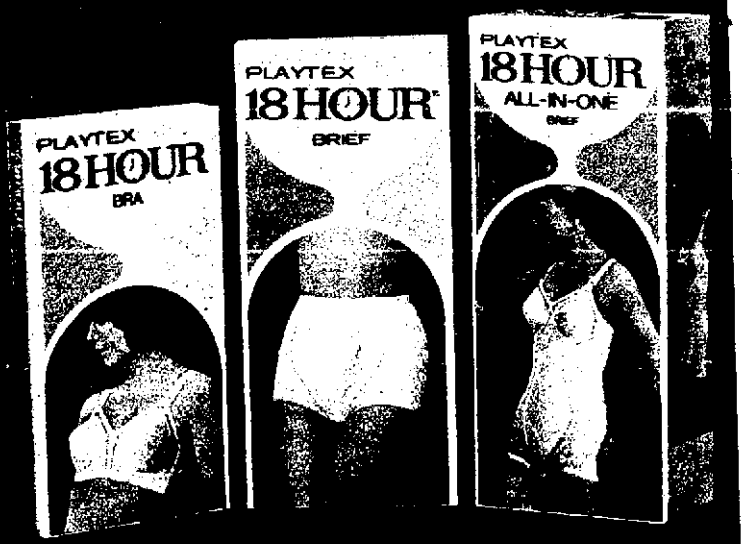

When World War II ended, Ike was called to Washington to take over from Gen. George Marshall, who had been ordered by President Truman to China on a special mission.

Kay Summersby expected to go along with Ike as a member of his personal staff. Inexplicably to her, she was dropped from his list at the last moment. Ike told her not to worry. "I'll be back, and we'll both leave for Washington around the first of the year."

"Ike never came back," Kay Summersby sadly remembered..."Nothing was ever the same again."

Her book tells how it was—to her.

Your Nose Knows More Than You Know

by Charity Hopkins

Odors evoke past responses. The aroma of breast milk, associated with infant peace, may help adults relax to sleep.

A mother knows the smell of her own baby so well that even blindfolded she can pick it out of a nursery full of infants. The baby, in turn, knows the smell of its mother and, probably, its father.

Wives, however, cannot distinguish the smell of their husband's hair from that of an old dachshund, Dr. Orville Chapman discovered during an informal experiment in his home.

A professor of chemistry at the University of California, Los Angeles, Chapman became interested in odor perception while working with a student entomologist. Together they discovered that insects and other species communicate with each other via chemicals called pheromones.

For insects, pheromones not only constitute an odor language, but it is their best way of obtaining information about the outside world. Other animals rely less heavily on their sense of smell, with dogs about one million times less sensitive than insects, and man, at the lowest end of the scale, a million times less sensitive than dogs.

Even with that reduction, odor perception is operating all the time at a subconscious level, evoking an emotional reaction rather than an idea as sight does. The olfactory nerve is connected with the most primitive part of the brain; the message it sends—unlike a visual signal—is not filtered through the intellect. Communication from a skunk, for instance, is direct and persuasive. It's not something to mull over.

Think of new-mown hay, and sight-, smell- and touch-memory are all experienced at once.

Memories evoked

Déjà vu, the sudden feeling of familiarity in an unfamiliar place, Chapman believes, is the result of an unperceived odor evoking an old memory. If this is so, psychiatrists could capitalize on it by using odors to unlock a patient's blocked memories. In addition, an odor which suggested peace and security might be used to relieve anxiety. The odor of breast milk, the first smell associated with falling asleep, might develop into a replacement for sleeping pills.

Among most animals a certain pheromone in a particular strength must be present before mating can take place. The implications of this in human terms are sensational. Chanel No. 5, with a drop of human aphrodisiac pheromone, would assure the continuation of the human species.

It's certain that humans are attracted to each other, even now, for unexplained reasons, some just sensed. Personal odor, perceived subconsciously, may generate a special emotional whammo. It is known that perspiration from physical exertion is inoffensive and probably has an aphrodisiacal effect. Perspiration produced by tension, however, is always immediately offensive.

Link with immune system

"There's something here no one understands," Dr. Chapman says cautiously, "and I have some reservations about understanding it."

Within the body, Chapman believes, the immune system communicates by chemicals shaped like the pheromones of odor language. Small fat molecules—lipids—control the function of certain organs and systems. The ratio of these lipids may be each person's chemical fingerprints—his identity—or the balance that his immune system seeks to maintain. When a foreign substance upsets this characteristic balance, the immune system gathers to fight it, often, scientists believe, destroying early tumors before they are medically recognizable.

What attracts the immune system to the tumor and what turns the tide, causing the body to accept and allow a tumor to grow to lethal proportions, is something Chapman wants to investigate. He believes it's the lipids shaped like and structurally related to the pheromones of odor language.

From memories of fresh hay to the body's immunity, it's as plain as the nose on your face that odors play a subtle and important part in our lives. Just how important, scientists like Dr. Chapman are only beginning to recognize. Those volatile lipids, those pheromones, may manipulate us in any number of ways—from curing cancer to explaining that funny thing called love.

Visit ANCIENT CHINA for 10 days free

as a guest of TIME LIFE BOOKS GREAT AGES OF MAN

A PEOPLE of inventors and discoverers, philosophers and soldiers, poets, artists and craftsmen, the ancient Chinese gave the world many of its most useful things: the compass, silk, mechanical clocks, fireworks, explosives, the harness, medicinal herbs, the first suspension bridge, paper, poetry, porcelain, printing and even the wheelbarrow.

The story of how all these achievements came about begins with the first of China's six ancient dynasties, around 2000 B.C. Although it is a tale as vast, complex and full of variety as the country itself, in Ancient China you will experience it in its most intimate, human terms—in the daily lives of peasants as well as emperors, in the ideas of benign philosophers as well as the ruthless pursuits of conquering generals.

You'll marvel at fabled cities, sumptuous palaces rising to the heavens, gardens simulating paradise. And you'll visit the most dazzling medieval metropolis in the world—the capital of the T'ang Empire—Ch'ang-an, whose beauty was compared to Babylon, Alexandria, and Rome in their greatest days. Its "Great Luminous Palace" was a city in itself where the emperor lived in fantastic splendors of landscaped lakes, libraries, an air-conditioned hall and a royal polo field.

And this colossal capital is only one of the many places you will visit in TIME-LIFE BOOKS' extraordinary re-creation of Ancient China. Written by the eminent authority on Chinese civilization, Professor Edward H. Schafer, Ancient China is your introductory volume to the Great Ages of Man—a series that shows you how the magnificent cultures of the past shaped our world. It is an exquisite example of all the other books in the series—a fascinating text, superb photographs, paintings and drawings, chronologies and bibliographies invaluable to students and teachers.

CHOU EN-LAI'S WIDOW, TENG YING-CHAO, WITH THE NIXONS ON THEIR PEKING VISIT IN 1976

THE CHINESE WIDOWS One of the most popular and beloved women in the People's Republic of China is Teng Ying-chao, the 73-year-old widow of Chou En-lai.

Ever since the arrest of Chiang Ching, Chairman Mao Tse-tung's widow, Teng Ying-chao has returned to public life. Mrs. Chou had disappeared from public view last January--two weeks after her husband died of cancer and Mrs. Mao began a radical campaign against his protégé, Teng Hsiao-ping, driving him from office.

At one time, Chinese officials now say, Mrs. Mao conspired with the "Shanghai Mafia" in an attempt to assassinate Chou En-lai. Foreign sources say the attempt occurred in March, 1971, when the group, with Defense Minister Lin Pao, tried to shoot down the plane bringing Chou back to Peking from a visit to Hanoi.

Chinese sources say Mrs. Mao also ordered a group of doctors not to operate on Chou when they determined that his cancer was operable. And it was she who tried to hide the diagnosis of Chou's illness from party authorities, who were not told about his cancer until 1974.

How much of this is true or just anti-Mrs. Mao propaganda only the Chinese authorities know, and they refuse to be quoted on the subject.

What is true, however, is that Chou En-lai's widow is coming into her own. Although a member of the Central Committee, she always played the quiet, supportive, retiring wife of a national leader. Now, however, she receives foreign visitors and journalists and clearly is en route to celebrity status.

VW FORESIGHT Ever since July, 1975, the Volkswagen people in Germany have been road-testing 45 VW's that run on methyl alcohol, a derivative of coal.

Methanol is consumed at twice the rate of gasoline but costs half as much per gallon. This means the VW running on methanol needs an extra-large fuel tank.

If the price of gasoline becomes prohibitive, Volkswagen is capable of producing its alcoholic car on short notice.

NATURAL PARENTS DISCLOSED Adopted persons in Great Britain who never knew the identity of their natural parents can now obtain such information.

Under the new Children Act, passed by Parliament last year after extended controversy, an adopted person over 18 may apply for access to the original records of his birth and be given the address of his natural parents.

Adoption agencies view the new law with alarm. They predict it will cause much trauma and distress to natural parents who assumed that their past would be kept secret.

Says one social worker: "There must be thousands of women in this country who married without telling their husbands that they had a child in the past. Suppose such children suddenly appear on the doorstep and begin asking to see Mama. The situation could ruin countless marriages."

Dr. Nancy Bywaters, chief medical officer of an organization which supervises several adoption agencies, says of the Children Act: "I believe it will cause considerable hurt and worry in the early stages. But from now on, natural parents will have to realize that it cannot be a secret process, that their child will learn the truth and there will have to be much more openness.

"Natural parents will have to face up to their past, and this may be a more sound approach than pretending it did not happen."

Many adopted children engage in fantasies about their natural parents, and many conduct long and expensive hunts for the mother and father who rejected them. Now such hunts, at least in Britain, are no longer necessary.

GUINEA PIGS The World Health Organization (WHO) recently charged in Geneva that new drugs are being marketed in developing countries before being fully tested.

WHO declared: "Early clinical trials are to some extent shifting to nations without strong regulatory agencies. In addition, there are serious inconsistencies, worldwide, in the labeling and promotion of drugs."

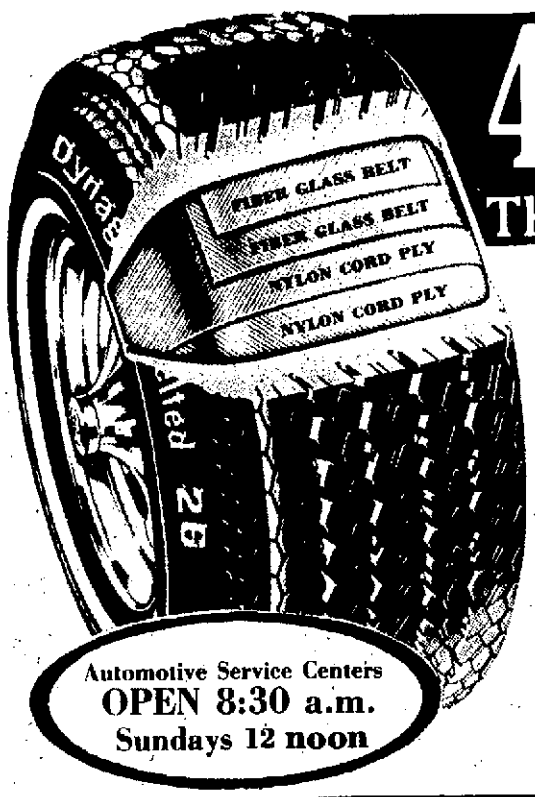

CASH DISCOUNT Exxon is offering discounts of up to 5% to motorists in Abilene, Tex., and Charleston, S.C., who pay cash instead of using credit cards.

If the practice proves successful, Exxon will probably extend it to other filling stations, and other oil companies will follow suit.

Cash customers who don't receive discounts are helping to finance the credit system for credit card holders. Several months ago, the Center for Law and Social Policy filed suit against the American Express Company. Now American Express permits businesses which accept the American Express credit card to offer discounts to cash customers.

SWISS BRIG. GEN. JEAN-LOUIS JEANMAIRE

SWISS SCANDAL Switzerland is a peaceful country that hasn't gone to war for centuries. Surely it poses no threat to the Soviet Union. Why then would the Soviets plant spies there to ferret out Swiss defense secrets?

A short while ago, Switzerland's former air defense chief, Brig. Gen. Jean-Louis Jeanmaire, a stocky, silver-haired 66, was arrested for allegedly telling the Russians all about Swiss air defenses.

Jeanmaire, it seems, has been in contact with Soviet agents since 1959. Moreover, his wife knew of his activities and even helped him at one point.

Kurt Furgler, the Swiss justice and police minister, has told Parliament that Jeanmaire, who retired last year after commanding air defense forces for six years, also supplied information about military and political leaders to Soviet agents.

Jeanmaire will be tried by military tribunal and, if convicted, faces a possible 20-year sentence. His wife, Yvonne, has not been arrested because she is too ill to flee.

All of the Soviet embassy staff in Berne involved in the corruption of Jeanmaire have quietly departed Switzerland.

ORBITING EARTH There are now 800 man-made satellites orbiting the earth. Some 455 are communications satellites working 24 hours a day. Others provide weather forecasts and espionage information.

READY TO BLOW South Africa is rich in gold, platinum, diamonds and many metals. It is also rich in black labor, which it has exploited for years.

In the past 40 years, 27,000 lives have been lost in deep-level mining and in violent fights at the large bachelor compounds where thousands of black miners live.

A report published by the Southern Africa labor and development research unit at Cape Town University claims two major causes of disturbances are the living conditions in the bachelor compounds to which rural Africans are brought for one or two years of contract labor and the lack of worker representation.

The black miner has no trade union to represent him and "is employed in a society which does not offer him status, recognition, housing, security, education for his children, ego rewards, diversion or opportunity.

"Within this insulated, abnormal environment," the report continues, "the competition for the available women, the substitution of homosexual for heterosexual practices and the sublimation of erotic urges are extremely explosive ingredients.

"The matter for surprise is not that a wave of violence has erupted in recent times, but rather that it has been so delayed."

In South Africa approximately 500,000 black miners are drawn from South Africa, Botswana, Rhodesia, Transkei and Mozambique.

The war in Angola and along the Rhodesian front has heightened their political awareness. They are no longer docile. They are volatile, and their potential violence is ready to surface.

Observations™

Happy New Year. May 1977 be a year of joy—and fun—for you and your family. We hope you'll let us contribute to your pleasure by bringing you selected television programs we believe are something special.

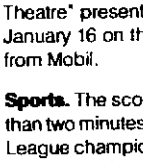

Adventure. Some of history's great explorers were driven by ideals, others by greed, still others by simple curiosity. But all endured fear and discomfort, and all faced death. This month Mobil begins a 10-week series on famous and little-known explorers called Ten Who Dared. Narrated by Anthony Quinn, these hour-long documentaries, filmed on location, will take you on odysseys beginning with Christopher Columbus and climaxing with Roald Amundsen, who crossed a frozen continent in 1911 to reach the South Pole. Check your TV listings for the times and dates of the 10 episodes.

"I HOPE THE LITTLE GUY DOESN'T TURN INTO A RERUN BY JUNE"

Banjos and tambourines. Ragtime and blues, some authentic and some brand new, provide the background for a two-hour "Mobil Showcase" special, Minstrel Man, on CBS next month. Through the lives of two brothers (fictional, but inspired by real people and true events) Minstrel Man examines the roots of the black performer in America—and traces his early triumphs and some of his bitter frustrations.

Drama. With the Great War behind them, how will the Bellamys fare? They will encounter romances, scandals, tragedies, quarrels, politics and strikes. They will confront the hysterical gaiety of the Roaring Twenties in their usual unflappable manner. You can join them as "Masterpiece Theatre" presents a new series of Upstairs, Downstairs episodes. They begin January 16 on the Public Broadcasting Service. All made possible by a grant from Mobil.

Sports. The score was Green Bay 34, Dallas 27, with less than two minutes left on the clock and the National Football League championship at stake. Dallas, two yards from the goal, struggled through four downs, and couldn't tie the score. Green Bay won the 1966 crown. That memorable game is recreated on one of the 13 new episodes of The Way It Was, scheduled for broadcast on PBS starting next month. Three shows will cover the New York Yankee dynasty. Another will highlight the Joe Louis-Jersey Joe Walcott fights. Tune in for a sports show to remember.

JOHN THOMAS DOWNEY

RICHARD FECTEAU

Q. I would like to know if our Central Intelligence Agency ever dropped spies and saboteurs into Red China. If so, how and when?—G.O., Cambridge, Mass.

A. The CIA used to train selected special agents on Saipan in the Mariana Islands and later at a secret training camp in Chigasaki, Japan. These agents were under the command of the chief of our espionage center in Atsuki, Japan. When their training was finished, the agents were air-dropped into Kirin and Liaoning provinces in Northeast China. The agents were, of course, Chinese, and in 1952 they were formed into two teams—"Team Wen" and "Team Shen"—under the command of John Thomas Downey, a CIA man who had been recruited at Yale University. On Nov. 29, 1952, Downey and another CIA agent, Richard G. Fecteau, flew into China in a C-47, dropped supplies to their operatives and were about to pick up Li Chung, one of their men, when their plane was shot down. Downey was sentenced to life imprisonment and Fecteau to 20 years' imprisonment in China. Fecteau, originally from Lynn, Mass., was released in 1971. Downey was released in 1973 after then President Nixon admitted to the late Chou En-lai that Downey had indeed been a CIA agent. Downey, who recently passed the bar exam and practices law in Wallingford, Conn., received approximately $400,000 in back pay from the CIA. Whether the CIA still drops agents into Red China, the Soviet Union and North Korea is, of course, a secret. Frank Wisner, the gentleman formerly in charge of CIA covert operations, took his own life some years ago. Since then the development of sophisticated satellite detection has diminished the need for air-dropping or submarine-landing CIA operatives.

Q. Is it true that Jimmy Carter refuses to eat peanuts because he fears they will give him stomach cancer? —Everett Cline, Ft. Worth, Tex.

A. Jimmy Carter eats peanuts.

Q. Why are Jerry and Betty Ford giving up their house in Alexandria, Va., a house which for so long has meant home to their children?—G.T., Alexandria, Va.

A. President Ford does not want to be in the position of looking over President Carter's shoulder. Ford will have an office in Washington, D.C., the office of former U.S. Presidents, and any time "Potomac Fever" strikes him, he will be able to return to the scene of his time.

Q. How tall is Her Majesty, Queen Elizabeth II of Great Britain?—Myron Underwood, Hempstead, N.Y.

A. Elizabeth is 5 feet 4, towers above Arthur Useldinger, Communist mayor of Esch in Luxembourg. Useldinger is 4 feet 10.

QUEEN ELIZABETH WITH MAYOR USELDINGER OF ESCH

Q. Young Joe Kennedy, Ethel and Bobby's son—isn't he going to run for Congress from Boston's 11th District in 1978?—Peter Kaplan, Cambridge, Mass.

A. Good possibility. In 1978 Joe will be 26, old enough to seek a Congressional seat.

Q. Two great Frenchmen—André Malraux, 75, and Jean Gabin, 72—recently died. One of them was the great love of Marlene Dietrich's life. Which one?—Katherine Norman, Oak Park, Ill.

A. Actor Jean Gabin, who for years loved Marlene Dietrich deeply. Both Dietrich and Gabin were married, however, and each declined to obtain a divorce.

JEAN GABIN

MARLENE DIETRICH

Q. Hollywood friends tell me that Efrem Zimbalist Jr. will run for Governor of California. He used to star in "The FBI" TV show. Is it true?—T.I., Encino, Cal.

A. Zimbalist campaigned diligently for Ronald Reagan in the 1976 Presidential primary campaign. He served as a Reagan surrogate in a number of states, may well like to try his hand in politics come 1978.

Q. I have heard a rumor that in Nevada, where prostitution is legal, the brothels distribute Blue Chip Stamps to their customers. Can you check this and let me know?—J.K.K., Atlantic City, N.J.

A. In Lincoln County, Nev., one brothel offers its patrons premium coupons that allow them a discount on return trips.

Q. Relatively few women reporters cover business or economics. Who in contemporary journalism is the most knowledgeable woman in this field?—S.B., Denver, Colo.

A. A likely candidate is Eileen Shanahan, 52, of the Washington bureau of The New York Times, who has been covering the field for 25 years. In recent years many women journalists have entered the field and are performing as well as men, if not better.

Keeping Up... With Youth

by Pamela Swift

Walking Out on a Million

Pop star Ian Mitchell, 17-year-old guitarist for the Bay City Rollers, has quit the rock group—and the prospect of $1 million or more in earnings.

But Ian, who joined the Rollers last April, has no regrets. "What does money matter," he says, "when your sanity is at stake? The pressures I've undergone these last six months—you can't believe it. At times I almost felt like committing suicide. I even took a dose of too many sleeping pills one time. But I just ended up with a sore stomach."

Tam Paton, manager of the Rollers, believes Ian made a too hasty decision: "If he'd stuck it out with the Rollers for another year, even if he wasn't too happy, he could have been talking in terms of being a millionaire."

But Ian apparently has another sense of values. "A Roller's life," he explains, "is enough to drive one mad. I found myself wandering the streets at 3 in the morning from our hotel because I couldn't wind myself down." So a few weeks ago Ian returned home to his parents in Downpatrick, near Belfast. He told Tam Paton that he missed his family and friends in Ireland and that the Bay City Roller life was not for him.

Paton has already found a replacement in Pat McGlynn, 18, an unknown from Edinburgh, Scotland.

From Ireland Ian says, "I'm happy to be away from it all. When you're a pop star, the pressures are immense. Some can put up with it. Frankly, I can't. When we weren't on stage, we were literally locked up together inside four walls. I got more and more depressed as each day went on, and I decided to come back and maybe rejoin my old group, the Young City Stars."

Ian, whose father is a caterer for the Royal Air Force, earned $50 a week as a guitarist with his old group before he signed with the Bay City Rollers. He was brought in as a replacement for Alan Longmuir, 27, who had left the group. Longmuir also complained of the pressures.

Campus Reporters

Watergate has been to journalism what Sputnik was to the science boom of the late 1950's.

A new breed of aggressive journalists is being educated on college campuses throughout the country. These young reporters are investigating everything from the size of macaroni noodles in the school cafeteria to the activities of the school president.

They are so tireless and persevering that one Ivy League dean recently complained about "those damn kids who call during dinner demanding quotes."

Letters to paradise: Toni Klein reads the weekly mail inundating his South Pacific island after publication of an article describing his idyllic life.

The Invasion of One Man's Happy Island

by Richard Harrington

TUBUAI, SOUTH PACIFIC.

Four years ago, on a remote South Pacific island, I discovered an American expatriate named Harry J. Klein who had been living there happily for 36 years, cut off, through his own choice, from the modern world. In a PARADE article (Jan. 7, 1973) I described his idyllic life—no problems, no tensions, no decisions, no mail.

A few weeks ago I decided to go back to the island of Tubuai, between Tahiti and New Zealand, to see how Klein—who for some reason is called "Toni" by everybody on the island—was doing. I found that Toni Klein, now 75 years old, hadn't changed—but his life had become vastly more complicated and bewildering.

"Since that article appeared, things have never been the same," Toni told me when I arrived via the weekly plane from Tahiti, 400 miles away.

He's still agile, thin, talkative, barefoot and riding an old bicycle. He described his new life as he led me to his tiny cabin and offered a hard, narrow cot on which I could sleep.

"The first change was the letters and parcels," he said. "They began pouring in and have never stopped."

Most came from well-meaning readers who sent him shirts, sweaters, other articles of clothing, and toys for his son Henri, now 15. Some wanted to express their envy of the carefree existence he'd been leading since he left his home in Palo Alto, Cal., in the Depression year of 1936. A few sent money, including a long-lost school friend, now a California lawyer, who mailed him $100 with a note reading: "I wish I could be like you." He also received subscriptions to magazines and bundles of paperback books.

Visitors drop in

A few people actually visited him, mostly from American yachts calling at Tubuai. Some had the PARADE clipping in hand and asked the natives, "Where is this man?" One elderly couple came to the island, moved into a nearby cabin for a week, then departed disillusioned. The exotic diet and mosquitoes were too much for them.

Most unexpected of all was the deluge of mail that arrived after some unknown party—either a prankster or a would-be benefactor—gave Toni a fictitious business title and added his name to corporate mailing lists.

All of a sudden he was inundated with glossy annual reports and fancy circulars addressed to "Harry J. Klein, Chairman, Klein Enterprises." Reports came from Allied Chemical, IBM, Westinghouse and manufacturers of such products as insecticides, tear gas and tanks. Siemens, the German industrial firm, sent him brochures on their latest 32-wheel locomotive. Japan sent tourist display kits costing $15 in postage alone. He was invited to sell electronic stock exchange calculators. The Soviet Union's Intourist office invited him to become their agent. The latest devices in electronic automation and satellite communication were called to his attention. He also received samples of pencils, stationery and rat poison.

"It sure gave me some idea of what's been going on in the world," says Toni, who earns his living by picking coffee berries off the bushes near his cabin and selling them for 25 cents a pound to a Chinese grocer in the village five miles away.

News from IRS

However, what's really weighing down the chairman of Klein Enterprises these days isn't the fancy literature—which he cuts up and takes to the open outhouse behind his cabin—but his correspondence with the U.S. Internal Revenue Service.

It seems that one of the books Toni received in the mail from a well-wisher was The World Almanac. Reading through it one tropical evening, he learned that all U.S. citizens are entitled to Social Security benefits, including old-age pensions. Toni—who never renounced his U.S. citizenship in all his years on this French-owned island—began wondering whether he, too, was entitled to a little something. He also had hopes of obtaining a dependent's pension for Henri, who works as a handyman at the Chinese grocery for $6 a day.

Tax forms arrive

Toni turned for advice and help to one of his new pen pals, an ex-U.S. Marine who had originally sent him a supply of razor blades. Now a Baltimore businessman, he corresponded on Toni's behalf with the authorities in Washington. As a result the IRS began to write to Toni. They wanted to know the annual income on his investments, the depreciation of his machinery and various other financial details. Toni, who earns about $400 a year and has a pig and four chickens, was amazed.

Since then he's received several statements from the IRS, one claiming that he owes them $12.90, another reducing the sum to $10.61, and a third imposing a fine of 93 cents. Toni hopes, through his Baltimore connection, to get his accounts straightened out one of these years and—even more important—to hear from the Social Security people.

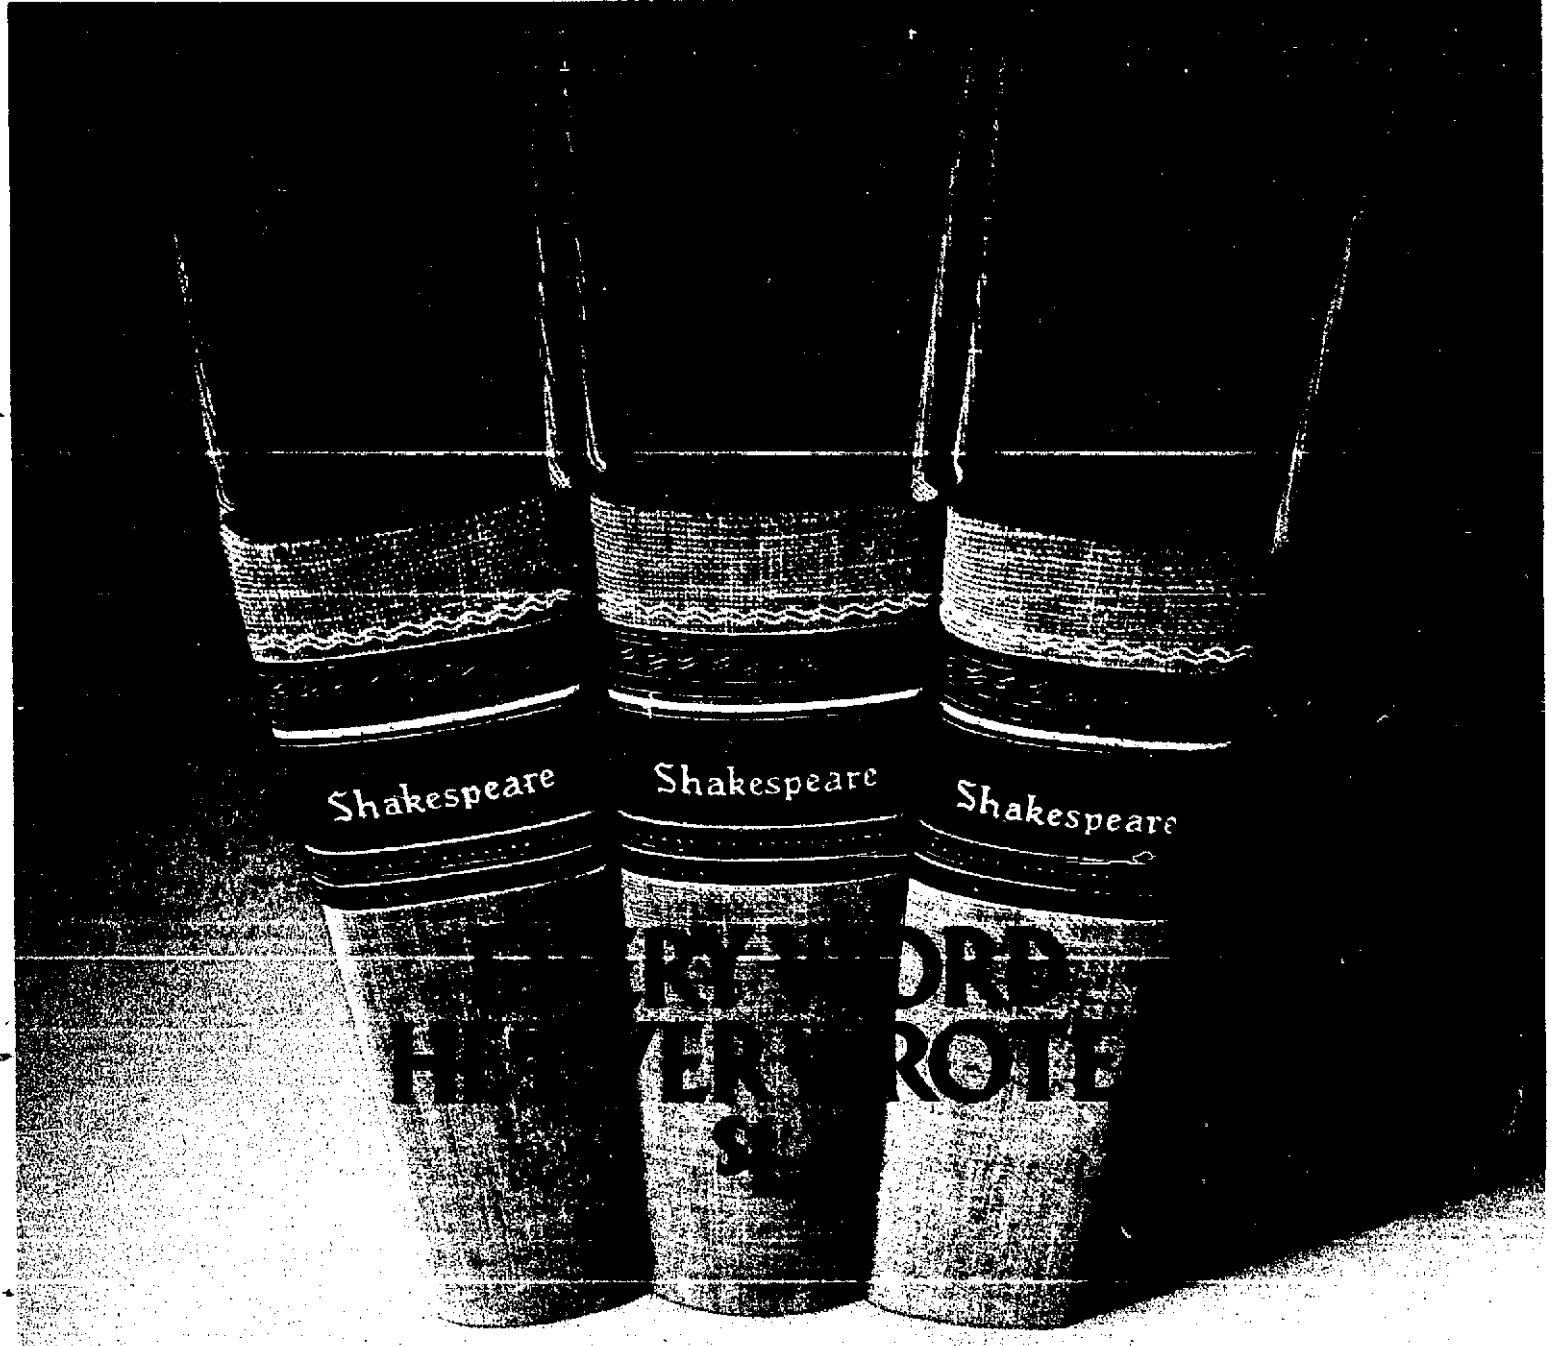

Meanwhile, he remains healthy and lively, cooks his own meals and carries his water 200 yards from a neighbor's well in a little pail. And, of course, he reads his mail.

In fact, despite everything that's happened to him, Toni has only one question on his mind. He asked it as he pedaled his bike out to the airport to see me off, flinging a necklace of shells around my neck as a farewell gift.

"Do you think," he said, "that it will take an Act of Congress to get me my Social Security?"

Toni and son Henri, 15, inspect bicycle that is only means of transport. Klein, who left U.S. for Polynesia 40 years ago, intends to remain there.

Through much of World War II, Eisenhower and his driver, Kay Summersby, 18 years his junior, were inseparable. Kay, dying of cancer in 1973, decided to write of her romance with Ike. She got a $50,000 publisher's advance, hired two ghostwriters, Sigrid Hedin and Barbara Wyden, to help. She died in 1975.

Kay Summersby and Dwight Eisenhower—The True Story of Their Friendship

by Lloyd Shearer

SANTA BARBARA, CAL.

In World War II Gen. Dwight Eisenhower had a chauffeur-secretary-Girl Friday named Kay Summersby. She was a tall, thin, flawlessly complexioned Irish beauty with dark red hair, blue-green eyes and a winning way.

She died at 66 of liver cancer in January, 1975, in Southampton Hospital, Long Island, N.Y. The publishing house of Simon & Schuster has recently brought out a book of her memoirs, Past Forgetting: My Love Affair With Dwight D. Eisenhower. Simon & Schuster describes the book as "... the true story of the passionate, moving, secret love affair between General Dwight D. Eisenhower, Supreme Commander of the Allied Forces in Europe, and Kay Summersby, the beautiful English fashion model who became his driver in wartime London, his staff aide, by his side through every crisis and high-level meeting of the war—and the woman he loved."

Excerpts of the book have appeared in Ladies' Home Journal, and Bantam Books has paid $800,000 for the paperback rights.

Past Forgetting is the sad-sweet story of General Eisenhower's sexual impotency at age 52, of his inability to consummate frantically grasped opportunities for sexual enjoyment with his attractive confidante, and of wartime experiences they shared.

Publisher's claim

The publisher claims on the book jacket that Past Forgetting was "written by Kay Summersby Morgan herself." In publishing circles the story is that two ghostwriters, Sigrid Hedin and Barbara Wyden, had a crack at it, with Barbara Wyden writing most of the book from Kay Summersby's tapes.

One friend of Kay's told me, "Kay saw 75 percent of the manuscript before she died." Reportedly Simon & Schuster advanced Kay $50,000, of which $8500 went to Sigrid Hedin and $25,000 to Barbara Wyden, a free-lancer formerly with The New York Times.

When I spoke to Kay Summersby in 1973—the first of six lengthy telephone interviews with her—she said, "In my first book [Eisenhower Was My Boss, which she wrote with Michael Kearns in 1948] I was very discreet. If I ever write a second one, I'm going to insist that it not be published until after Mamie dies. What's the point in embarrassing her?

"To tell you the truth," she went on, "there wasn't all that much between Ike and me. The big love of my life was Dick Arnold, and Ike always knew it. [Richard Roberts Arnold of White Plains, N.Y., West Point, Class of 1932, commanding officer, 20th Combat Engineer Regiment, killed at Sedjenae, Tunisia, June 6, 1943, awarded the Purple Heart.] Dick stepped on a mine and was killed. We were scheduled to be married. I'd gotten a divorce from Summersby for that very purpose. Ike was more than kind. He was like a father or a big brother to me after Dick died."

In subsequent conversations, Kay Summersby, who worked as a wardrobe consultant for film and TV companies, told me that she was "broke," that her medical and hospital bills were "horrendous," that "I don't have very much longer to live, Mamie's going to outlive us all," and that "if I write anything about Ike and me, it's only because I need the money."

Past Forgetting is strategically sprinkled with some torrid passages. For example: "Yes, I loved this middle-aged man [Eisenhower] with his thinning hair, his eyeglasses, his drawn, tired face. I wanted to hold him in my arms, to cuddle him, delight him. I wanted to lie on some grassy lawn and see those broad shoulders above me, feel the intensity of those eyes on mine, feel that hard body against mine. I loved this man."

'Like an explosion'

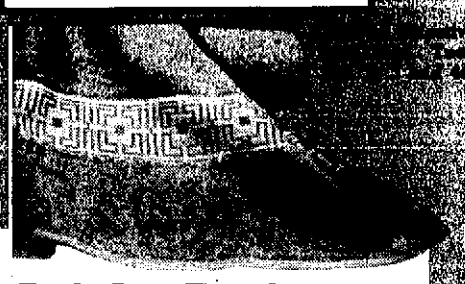

And later on: "It was like an explosion. We were suddenly in each other's arms. His kisses absolutely unraveled me. Hungry, strong, demanding. And I responded every bit as passionately. He stopped, took my face between his hands. 'Goddamit,' he said, 'I love you.'"

No doubt these Eisenhower-Summersby clinches took place. Kay Summersby was too honest a lady to contrive them of whole cloth. Perhaps time and a ghostwriter's skill have embellished them. But—according to persons who knew Kay well, who served with her in World War II, who were attached to General Eisenhower's staff—the truth seems to be that the general had a great big yen for Kay Summersby but that the yen was not reciprocated. In short, his ardor and desire for her were far greater than hers for him.

A Connecticut matron who served with Kay as an ambulance driver in London is currently the executrix of her estate. She does not wish to be identified. She was frank enough, however, to describe Past Forgetting as "nonsense" and to say, "I doubt if Kay was ever in love with Eisenhower. Admiration, respect, fondness. I'm sure she showed him all of those. But love. I doubt it. She was deeply and passionately in love with Dick Arnold. After he died, the passion went out of her."

In World War II, the officer who was closest to Eisenhower was Capt. Harry C. Butcher, his Naval aide. Butcher, a vice president of the Columbia Broadcasting System in Washington, D.C., was one of Ike's oldest and dearest friends. When Ike was assigned to London, he asked the then Chief of Naval Operations, Adm. Ernest King, to let him have "Butch," a reserve officer in the Navy, as his aide.

Butcher's book

King agreed, and for the next three years Butcher served as Ike's shadow. His book, My Three Years With Eisenhower, based on his personal diary, is regarded as one of the most accurate and revealing accounts of General Eisenhower's life from the summer of 1942 until Germany's surrender in 1945.

Toward the end of World War II, the rumor was widely circulated in Washington that Ike had fallen in love with his driver, Kay Summersby, and that Butcher had fallen in love with Mollie Ford, who ran the information desk at the Red Cross Club in Algiers. The rumor held that both men planned to divorce their wives and marry their newfound loves.

Butcher did exactly that, but Ike, in the face of pressure, chickened out. He wrote a letter to Gen. George Marshall, according to what President Truman told writer Merle Miller, "saying that he wanted to come back to the United States and divorce Mrs. Eisenhower so that he could marry this Englishwoman.

"Marshall wrote him back a letter," Truman recalled, "the like of which I never did see. He said that if he... if Eisenhower even came close to doing such a thing, he'd not only bust him out of the Army, he'd see to it that never for the rest of his life would he be able to draw a peaceful breath... and that if he ever again mentioned a thing like that, he'd see to it that the rest of his life was a living hell."

Truman then told Miller: "One of the last things I did as President, I got those letters from his file in the Pentagon and I destroyed them."

Several weeks ago I asked Margaret Truman Daniel, President Truman's daughter, if that story about her father and Ike and General Marshall was true.

"I think it was," she said. "My father wasn't the kind of man who ordered

The great love of Kay's life was Lt. Col. Richard Roberts Arnold, who was killed in Tunisia in 1943. Above, Arnold as a West Point graduate in 1932.

General Marshall around. He had great respect for him. But I think he suggested that it might be better if General Eisenhower's letter about divorcing his wife be taken out of General Eisenhower's file. I think that's true. I have always thought that was true."

Thus, there is much credibility to the belief that Ike at one time planned to divorce his Mamie and marry Kay.

Captain Butcher, who retired and lives the life of the landed gentry with his lovely wife Mollie in Santa Barbara, Cal., describes Ike's romance with Kay Summersby as "a diversion, a long diversion, which lasted three years."

Butcher knew Kay Summersby well. Both were members of Eisenhower's wartime overseas family. "If Ike had really been in love with her," he says, "if Ike had really wanted to marry her, then he would've gotten a divorce and married her. That's what I did. I was really in love with Mollie. Still am."

Mollie Butcher accuses her husband of "always protecting Ike. He always has and he always will," she contends. But Butcher insists that the Eisenhower-Summersby relationship was no "great love affair."

"The guy she was truly in love with," he maintains, "was this colonel [Arnold]. Everybody including Ike knew it. Ike even gave them his villa outside of Algiers so they could be together and make wedding plans.

"The colonel was a very handsome fellow, a West Pointer, and after spending time with Kay he joined his regiment. I think he'd been up at the front less than a week when he went inspecting in a marked mine area with a captain friend of his. The captain stumbled and set off a trip-wire. He was wounded and Kay's fiancé killed.

Ike breaks the news

"I got the news a few days later, and I told Ike, but it was Ike who broke it with great tenderness to Kay. She took it hysterically. She threw an Irish tantrum. She had the feeling it was all Ike's fault, that he had set the colonel up. But Ike had nothing to do with Dick Arnold's death. Dick had already been assigned to the regiment. And the regiment was up there and all.

"But Kay had a terrible time. She had divorced her husband, this fellow named Summersby who was out in India somewhere. She had lost the man she wanted to have as a husband. She was really fit to be tied. Ike nursed her through a rough period. He sent her out to his villa, something we called 'Sailor's Delight.' He had her ride his stallions out there. He was thoughtful, gentle, kind. He told her she was very necessary, that he had a lot of work for her to do. He told her that King George VI was coming to North Africa, and he needed her to drive him and the King. Ike really restored her morale."

'A yearning'—but

Butcher concedes that Ike had "a yearning" for Kay Summersby, "but there were never any circumstances," he asserts, "in the time that I was with General Eisenhower—and I was with him almost everywhere—that he could have maintained a sexual relationship with her. He was always working, always protected, always being watched. He had no time for fooling around. And as I say, if he really loved her enough for marriage, then he would have done what I did."

Mollie Butcher, who met Kay Summersby in Algiers in 1943, recalls clearly that Ike was deeply in love with Kay.

"Ike had a tremendous crush on Kay," she asserts, "and Butch knows he did, too. But Butch always tries to cover up for him. Ike was very much in love with Kay, and Kay was really sort of indifferent to it. I never thought she loved him; certainly she didn't love him the way she loved Dick Arnold. But there's no denying Ike was infatuated with her. He was really crazy about her.

"And jealous, too. I remember when we all went back to England to prepare for the invasion. Red Mueller, I believe he was a broadcaster for NBC, started giving the big rush to Kay. Not that he was really interested in her as a person. He wanted to get close to a news source. Ike was really burned up about that. He gave her such a bad time about Mueller that at one point Kay said to Ike, 'Why are you so jealous when you have nothing to be jealous about?'

'One-sided affair'

"Kay was a decent, honest, forthright woman. She was not flirtatious. My own personal belief is that after her beau died, she became incapable of feeling too strongly about anyone else, and that included Ike. I always thought that was how she felt, that her relationship with Ike was pretty much a one-sided affair.

"After all, he made her his driver, his secretary, his confidante. He arranged to have her commissioned a second lieutenant in the WAC's in the American Army while she remained a British subject. She was with him when he met most of the world leaders, Winston Churchill, President Roosevelt, King George, all the Allied generals. He sent her on trips to the States, to Russia, to Germany. No matter what Butch says, she was much more than a diversion."

Kathleen McCarthy-Morrogh was born in 1908 on the island of Inish Beg, not far from County Cork, Ireland. Her father was a retired army officer. She had three sisters and one brother. In the early 1930's she moved to London, worked as a bit player in British films

Eisenhower's closest male friend in the war was his aide, Capt. Harry Butcher, shown here in Santa Barbara, Cal., with his wife Mollie. Butcher did what Eisenhower feared to do. He got divorced from his wife and in 1946 married the girl he fell in love with overseas, Mollie Ford, a U.S. Red Cross worker.

Introducing Fact Menthol. The low gas, low 'tar'.

You might not know it, but cigarette smoke is mostly gas — many different kinds. Not just 'tar' and nicotine.

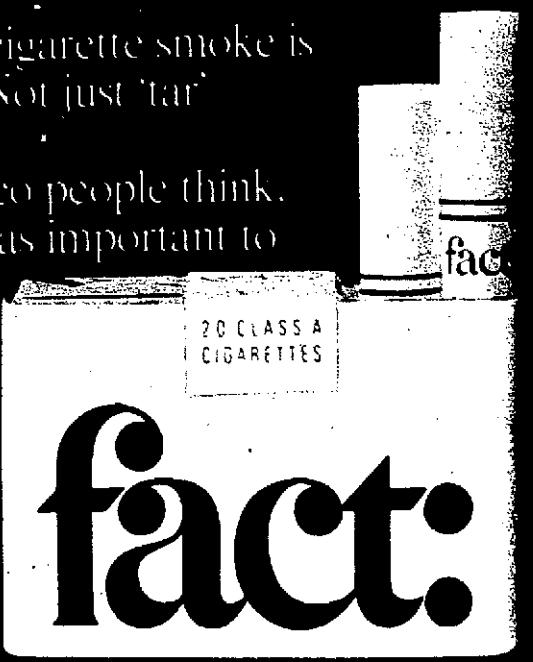

And, despite what we tobacco people think, some critics of smoking say it's just as important to cut down on some of the gases as it is to lower 'tar' and nicotine.

No ordinary menthol cigarette does both. But Fact does.

Fact is the first menthol cigarette with the revolutionary Purite filter. And Fact reduces gas concentrations while it reduces 'tar' and nicotine.

Read the pack. It tells how you get the first low gas, low 'tar' smoke with good, menthol taste.

And that's not fiction. That's a Fact.

Fact is the first menthol cigarette with Purite granules.

The selective filtering agent.

Selective.

That means it reduces specific gases in smoke that taste bad.

Without removing the elements that taste good.

So, for the first time, you get low gas, low "tar," and satisfying taste in a menthol cigarette.

Fact: The low gas, low "tar."

Available in regular and menthol.

Fact Menthol: The low gas, low 'tar.'

In 1952, long convinced that Eisenhower would never divorce Mamie, Kay married Reginald Morgan, a stockbroker. That marriage ended in 1958. Until her death Kay Summersby cherished the collection of autographed photos given to her by Ike, Generals Bradley and Marshall, Churchill, Roosevelt and others.

and as a model at Worth's of Paris near Grosvenor Square. In the late 1930's she married Gordon Summersby, an Englishman who was shipped out to India with the British Army.

When war came to Britain in 1939, she quit her modeling job and joined the Motor Transport Corps. She and her sister Evie drove an ambulance through the perilous 1940-41 period of the Luftwaffe blitz.

When the blitz ended in May, 1941, the U.S. Embassy in London asked the Motor Corps for a few drivers who knew London well enough to chauffeur some visiting American Army officers around the city; by then all its street signs had been removed.

The Motor Transport Corps assigned Kay Summersby the job. One of the first U.S. Army officers she drove was Capt. Richard Arnold, an engineer, then 30 and married. They fell in love, and both agreed to seek divorces in order to marry each other.

Invitation to lunch

A few months later, in the spring of 1942, Gens. Dwight Eisenhower and Mark Clark, having flown into Scotland and taken the train to London, were assigned Kay Summersby as driver. Eisenhower took an instant liking to her. After two days he invited Kay to lunch with him and Clark at the Connaught Hotel. She was 34, Eisenhower 52. When Kay drove both generals to Northolt Airport for their return to the U.S., Ike gave her a box of chocolates.

On his return to London as Supreme Commander of the Allied Forces, he gave her a basket of fruit, then stole her away from Gen. Carl "Tooey" Spaatz, who was in charge of the 8th Air Force. Ike assigned her as his personal driver. Later she became more than that.

The Eisenhower-Summersby liaison began at Telegraph Cottage in Kingston, outside London. It was a retreat of sorts where Ike could play bridge, relax occasionally, and enjoy a modicum of privacy. "After the first few evenings at Telegraph Cottage," Kay Summersby wrote, "Eisenhower decided that it was too much for me to drive back to London on the nights he decided to sleep over... so he requisitioned a billet for me at Bushey Park, which was very close, so that I could get more sleep."

Ike was apparently shy, reticent, and circumspect in his courting until Kay's fiancé was killed. After that Ike became more ardent, only to have his impotency defeat and frustrate him.

A letter to Mamie

At the time he projected the public image of a hard-working, war-weary commander who faithfully wrote to his wife back in the States almost every week. (His son, John Eisenhower, is in the process of editing a collection of those letters.) In truth, according to Summersby, she once typed out a letter to Mamie Eisenhower based on some notes Ike had given her. A quick reply from Mamie suggested that she was not particularly receptive to typewritten letters. From that point on the General wrote home by hand.

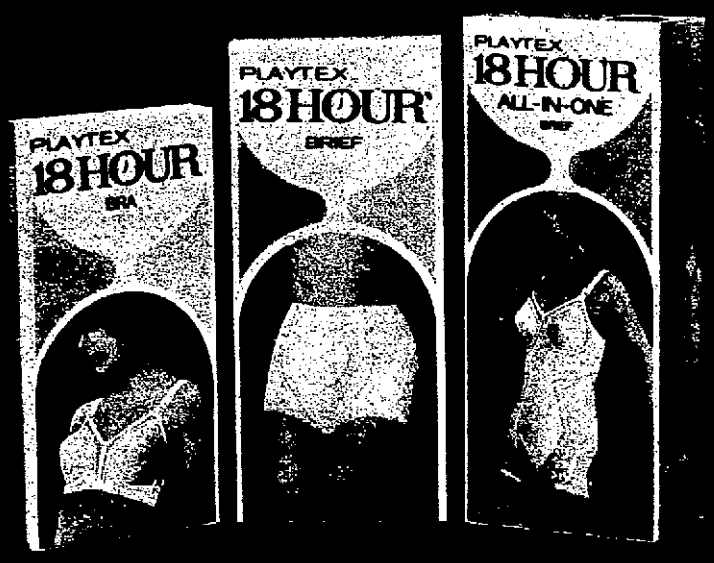

When World War II ended, Ike was called to Washington to take over from Gen. George Marshall, who had been ordered by President Truman to China on a special mission.

Kay Summersby expected to go along with Ike as a member of his personal staff. Inexplicably to her, she was dropped from his list at the last moment. Ike told her not to worry. "I'll be back, and we'll both leave for Washington around the first of the year."

"Ike never came back," Kay Summersby sadly remembered... "Nothing was ever the same again."

Her book tells how it was—to her.

La Bisquera '77
natural steak broiler

- Brand-new way to cook
- Fabulous gourmet discovery makes round steak taste like T-bone
- Broil hamburgers, fish, chicken, to succulence you never before thought possible

● From Tuscany, where good eating has been tradition since dawn of history, comes La Bisquera '77, revolutionary breakthrough in gourmet food preparation. This miracle cookware is made from unique volcanic rock, only found in that single spot on earth. In contrast to metal pans, La Bisquera '77 distributes heat evenly and slowly, prevents build-up of intense temperatures and thus keeps food tender and juicy. Porosity of volcanic rock miraculously drains out bitterness, fats and acids, leaving your broiled food with flavor so rich, so natural and delicious that you won't believe it until you take first succulent bite. You cook right on top of stove (gas or electric, it's all the same)—without adding grease, water, tenderizer, softeners—just goodness of natural food itself. And your food is self-basting all natural juices are preserved. Because of slow and even heat, shrinkage is minimal.

● Do not confuse revolutionary new La Bisquera '77 with similar looking cookware that you may have seen advertised. La Bisquera '77 is brand-new 1977 model, exclusively available through us in the United States. It is about twice as large as any previous models. It's a "rounded square" shape (measuring full 9"×9"), holds four big steaks, six big hamburgers, couple of chickens or any other good food to make gourmet meal for whole hungry family. It all comes out with flavor and juiciness you have never tasted before. And, La Bisquera '77 is easy to clean: use no soap and no brushes, just rinse out in water and it's ready for next gourmet meal.

● Join the gourmet revolution and become fantastic cook overnight. Your family will be delighted, and your guests will ask you for your "secret recipe." But there is no secret recipe—the "secret" is La Bisquera '77. Over one million older, obsolete models of this cooking discovery have been sold in the United States. Now you can own the advanced family size 1977 model—La Bisquera '77. Feed your family gourmet meals every day and save bundle on grocery bills besides. Your Nose Knows More Than You Know

by Charity Hopkins

Odors evoke past responses. The aroma of breast milk, associated with infant peace, may help adults relax to sleep.

A mother knows the smell of her own baby so well that even blindfolded she can pick it out of a nursery full of infants. The baby, in turn, knows the smell of its mother and, probably, its father.

Wives, however, cannot distinguish the smell of their husband's hair from that of an old dachshund, Dr. Orville Chapman discovered during an informal experiment in his home.

A professor of chemistry at the University of California, Los Angeles, Chapman became interested in odor perception while working with a student entomologist. Together they discovered that insects and other species communicate with each other via chemicals called pheromones.

For insects, pheromones not only constitute an odor language, but it is their best way of obtaining information about the outside world. Other animals rely less heavily on their sense of smell, with dogs about one million times less sensitive than insects, and man, at the lowest end of the scale, a million times less sensitive than dogs.

Even with that reduction, odor perception is operating all the time at a subconscious level, evoking an emotional reaction rather than an idea as sight does. The olfactory nerve is connected with the most primitive part of the brain; the message it sends—unlike a visual signal—is not filtered through the intellect. Communication from a skunk, for instance, is direct and persuasive. It's not something to mull over.

Think of new-mown hay, and sight-, smell- and touch-memory are all experienced at once.

Memories evoked

Déjà vu, the sudden feeling of familiarity in an unfamiliar place, Chapman believes, is the result of an unperceived odor evoking an old memory. If this is so, psychiatrists could capitalize on it by using odors to unlock a patient's blocked memories. In addition, an odor which suggested peace and security might be used to relieve anxiety. The odor of breast milk, the first smell associated with falling asleep, might develop into a replacement for sleeping pills.

Among most animals a certain pheromone in a particular strength must be present before mating can take place. The implications of this in human terms are sensational. Chanel No. 5, with a drop of human aphrodisiac pheromone, would assure the continuation of the human species.

It's certain that humans are attracted to each other, even now, for unexplained reasons, some just sensed. Personal odor, perceived subconsciously, may generate a special emotional whammo. It is known that perspiration from physical exertion is inoffensive and probably has an aphrodisiacal effect. Perspiration produced by tension, however, is always immediately offensive.

Link with immune system

"There's something here no one understands," Dr. Chapman says cautiously, "and I have some reservations about understanding it."

Within the body, Chapman believes, the immune system communicates by chemicals shaped like the pheromones of odor language. Small fat molecules—lipids—control the function of certain organs and systems. The ratio of these lipids may be each person's chemical fingerprints—his identity—or the balance that his immune system seeks to maintain. When a foreign substance upsets this characteristic balance, the immune system gathers to fight it, often, scientists believe, destroying early tumors before they are medically recognizable.

What attracts the immune system to the tumor and what turns the tide, causing the body to accept and allow a tumor to grow to lethal proportions, is something Chapman wants to investigate. He believes it's the lipids shaped like and structurally related to the pheromones of odor language.

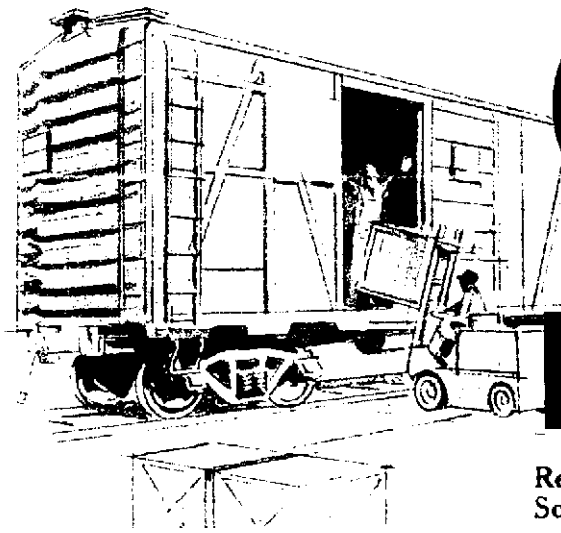

From memories of fresh hay to the body's immunity, it's as plain as the nose on your face that odors play a subtle and important part in our lives. Just how important, scientists like Dr. Chapman are only beginning to recognize. Those volatile lipids, those pheromones, may manipulate us in any number of ways—from curing cancer to explaining that funny thing called love.

Visit ANCIENT CHINA for 10 days free

as a guest of TIME LIFE GREAT AGES OF MAN

A people of inventors and discoverers, philosophers and soldiers, poets, artists and craftsmen, the ancient Chinese gave the world many of its most useful things: the compass, silk, mechanical clocks, fireworks, explosives, the harness, medicinal herbs, the first suspension bridge, paper, poetry, porcelain, printing and even the wheelbarrow.

The story of how all these achievements came about begins with the first of China's six ancient dynasties, around 2000 B.C. Although it is a tale as vast, complex and full of variety as the country itself, in Ancient China you will experience it in its most intimate, human terms—in the daily lives of peasants as well as emperors, in the ideas of benign philosophers as well as the ruthless pursuits of conquering generals.

You'll marvel at fabled cities, sumptuous palaces rising to the heavens, gardens simulating paradise. And you'll visit the most dazzling medieval metropolis in the world—the capital of the T'ang Empire—Ch'ang-an, whose beauty was compared to Babylon, Alexandria, and Rome in their greatest days. Its "Great Luminous Palace" was a city in itself where the emperor lived in fantastic splendors of landscaped lakes, libraries, an air-conditioned hall and a royal polo field.

And this colossal capital is only one of the many places you will visit in TIME-LIFE BOOKS' extraordinary re-creation of Ancient China. Written by the eminent authority on Chinese civilization, Professor Edward H. Schafer, Ancient China is your introductory volume to the Great Ages of Man—a series that shows you how the magnificent cultures of the past shaped our world. It is an exquisite example of all the other books in the series—a fascinating text, superb photographs, paintings and drawings, chronologies and bibliographies invaluable to students and teachers.

BECAUSE OF VOLUME OF MAIL RECEIVED, PARADE REGRETS IT CANNOT ANSWER QUERIES ABOUT THIS COLUMN.

CHOU EN-LAI'S WIDOW, TENG YING-CHAO, WITH THE NIXONS ON THEIR PEKING VISIT IN 1976

THE CHINESE WIDOWS One of the most popular and beloved women in the People's Republic of China is Teng Ying-chao, the 73-year-old widow of Chou En-lai.

Ever since the arrest of Chiang Ching, Chairman Mao Tse-tung's widow, Teng Ying-chao has returned to public life. Mrs. Chou had disappeared from public view last January--two weeks after her husband died of cancer and Mrs. Mao began a radical campaign against his protégé, Teng Hsiao-ping, driving him from office.

At one time, Chinese officials now say, Mrs. Mao conspired with the "Shanghai Mafia" in an attempt to assassinate Chou En-lai. Foreign sources say the attempt occurred in March, 1971, when the group, with Defense Minister Lin Pao, tried to shoot down the plane bringing Chou back to Peking from a visit to Hanoi.

Chinese sources say Mrs. Mao also ordered a group of doctors not to operate on Chou when they determined that his cancer was operable. And it was she who tried to hide the diagnosis of Chou's illness from party authorities, who were not told about his cancer until 1974.

How much of this is true or just anti-Mrs. Mao propaganda only the Chinese authorities know, and they refuse to be quoted on the subject.

What is true, however, is that Chou En-lai's widow is coming into her own. Although a member of the Central Committee, she always played the quiet, supportive, retiring wife of a national leader. Now, however, she receives foreign visitors and journalists and clearly is en route to celebrity status.

VW FORESIGHT Ever since July, 1975, the Volkswagen people in Germany have been road-testing 45 VW's that run on methyl alcohol, a derivative of coal.

Methanol is consumed at twice the rate of gasoline but costs half as much per gallon. This means the VW running on methanol needs an extra-large fuel tank.

If the price of gasoline becomes prohibitive, Volkswagen is capable of producing its alcoholic car on short notice.

NATURAL PARENTS DISCLOSED Adopted persons in Great Britain who never knew the identity of their natural parents can now obtain such information.

Under the new Children Act, passed by Parliament last year after extended controversy, an adopted person over 18 may apply for access to the original records of his birth and be given the address of his natural parents.

Adoption agencies view the new law with alarm. They predict it will cause much trauma and distress to natural parents who assumed that their past would be kept secret.

Says one social worker: "There must be thousands of women in this country who married without telling their husbands that they had a child in the past. Suppose such children suddenly appear on the doorstep and begin asking to see Mama. The situation could ruin countless marriages."

Dr. Nancy Bywaters, chief medical officer of an organization which supervises several adoption agencies, says of the Children Act: "I believe it will cause considerable hurt and worry in the early stages. But from now on, natural parents will have to realize that it cannot be a secret process, that their child will learn the truth and there will have to be much more openness.

"Natural parents will have to face up to their past, and this may be a more sound approach than pretending it did not happen."

Many adopted children engage in fantasies about their natural parents, and many conduct long and expensive hunts for the mother and father who rejected them. Now such hunts, at least in Britain, are no longer necessary.

GUINEA PIGS The World Health Organization (WHO) recently charged in Geneva that new drugs are being marketed in developing countries before being fully tested.

WHO declared: "Early clinical trials are to some extent shifting to nations without strong regulatory agencies. In addition, there are serious inconsistencies, worldwide, in the labeling and promotion of drugs."

CASH DISCOUNT Exxon is offering discounts of up to 5% to motorists in Abilene, Tex., and Charleston, S.C., who pay cash instead of using credit cards.

If the practice proves successful, Exxon will probably extend it to other filling stations, and other oil companies will follow suit.

Cash customers who don't receive discounts are helping to finance the credit system for credit card holders. Several months ago, the Center for Law and Social Policy filed suit against the American Express Company. Now American Express permits businesses which accept the American Express credit card to offer discounts to cash customers.

SWISS MAJ. GEN. JEAN-LOUIS JEANMAIRE

SWISS SCANDAL Switzerland is a peaceful country that hasn't gone to war for centuries. Surely it poses no threat to the Soviet Union. Why then would the Soviets plant spies there to ferret out Swiss defense secrets?

A short while ago, Switzerland's former air defense chief, Brig. Gen. Jean-Louis Jeanmaire, a stocky, silver-haired 66, was arrested for allegedly telling the Russians all about Swiss air defenses.

Jeanmaire, it seems, has been in contact with Soviet agents since 1959. Moreover, his wife knew of his activities and even helped him at one point.

Kurt Furgler, the Swiss justice and police minister, has told Parliament that Jeanmaire, who retired last year after commanding air defense forces for six years, also supplied information about military and political leaders to Soviet agents.

Jeanmaire will be tried by military tribunal and, if convicted, faces a possible 20-year sentence. His wife, Yvonne, has not been arrested because she is too ill to flee.

All of the Soviet embassy staff in Berne involved in the corruption of Jeanmaire have quietly departed Switzerland.

ORBITING EARTH There are now 800 man-made satellites orbiting the earth. Some 455 are communications satellites working 24 hours a day. Others provide weather forecasts and espionage information.

READY TO BLOW South Africa is rich in gold, platinum, diamonds and many metals. It is also rich in black labor, which it has exploited for years.

In the past 40 years, 27,000 lives have been lost in deep-level mining and in violent fights at the large bachelor compounds where thousands of black miners live.

A report published by the Southern Africa labor and development research unit at Cape Town University claims two major causes of disturbances are the living conditions in the bachelor compounds to which rural Africans are brought for one or two years of contract labor and the lack of worker representation.

The black miner has no trade union to represent him and "is employed in a society which does not offer him status, recognition, housing, security, education for his children, ego rewards, diversion or opportunity.

"Within this insulated, abnormal environment," the report continues, "the competition for the available women, the substitution of homosexual for heterosexual practices and the sublimation of erotic urges are extremely explosive ingredients.

"The matter for surprise is not that a wave of violence has erupted in recent times, but rather that it has been so delayed."

In South Africa approximately 500,000 black miners are drawn from South Africa, Botswana, Rhodesia, Transkei and Mozambique.

The war in Angola and along the Rhodesian front has heightened their political awareness. They are no longer docile. They are volatile, and their potential violence is ready to surface.

Observations™

Happy New Year. May 1977 be a year of joy—and fun—for you and your family. We hope you'll let us contribute to your pleasure by bringing you selected television programs we believe are something special.

Adventure. Some of history's great explorers were driven by ideals, others by greed, still others by simple curiosity. But all endured fear and discomfort, and all faced death. This month Mobil begins a 10-week series on famous and little-known explorers called Ten Who Dared. Narrated by Anthony Quinn, these hour-long documentaries, filmed on location, will take you on odysseys beginning with Christopher Columbus and climaxing with Roald Amundsen, who crossed a frozen continent in 1911 to reach the South Pole. Check your TV listings for the times and dates of the 10 episodes.

"I HOPE THE LITTLE GUY DOESN'T TURN INTO A RERUN BY JUNE"

Banjos and tambourines. Ragtime and blues, some authentic and some brand new, provide the background for a two-hour "Mobil Showcase" special, Minstrel Man, on CBS next month. Through the lives of two brothers (fictional, but inspired by real people and true events) Minstrel Man examines the roots of the black performer in America—and traces his early triumphs and some of his bitter frustrations.

Drama. With the Great War behind them, how will the Bellamys fare? They will encounter romances, scandals, tragedies, quarrels, politics and strikes. They will confront the hysterical gaiety of the Roaring Twenties in their usual unflappable manner. You can join them as "Masterpiece Theatre" presents a new series of Upstairs, Downstairs episodes. They begin January 16 on the Public Broadcasting Service. All made possible by a grant from Mobil.

Sports. The score was Green Bay 34, Dallas 27, with less than two minutes left on the clock and the National Football League championship at stake. Dallas, two yards from the goal, struggled through four downs, and couldn't tie the score. Green Bay won the 1966 crown. That memorable game is recreated on one of the 13 new episodes of The Way It Was, scheduled for broadcast on PBS starting next month. Three shows will cover the New York Yankee dynasty. Another will highlight the Joe Louis-Jersey Joe Walcott fights. Tune in for a sports show to remember.

EDITOR'S NOTE: *"Many comics," says Dale Grand Esq., "want to be singers because singers are considered sexy. Girls do not take comics seriously. I say to a girl, 'I love you.' Keeping Up... With Youth

by Pamela Swift

Walking Out on a Million

Pop star Ian Mitchell, 17-year-old guitarist for the Bay City Rollers, has quit the rock group—and the prospect of $1 million or more in earnings.

But Ian, who joined the Rollers last April, has no regrets. "What does money matter," he says, "when your sanity is at stake? The pressures I've undergone these last six months—you can't believe it. At times I almost felt like committing suicide. I even took a dose of too many sleeping pills one time. But I just ended up with a sore stomach."

Tam Paton, manager of the Rollers, believes Ian made a too hasty decision: "If he'd stuck it out with the Rollers for another year, even if he wasn't too happy, he could have been talking in terms of being a millionaire."

But Ian apparently has another sense of values. "A Roller's life," he explains, "is enough to drive one mad. I found myself wandering the streets at 3 in the morning from our hotel because I couldn't wind myself down." So a few weeks ago Ian returned home to his parents in Downpatrick, near Belfast. He told Tam Paton that he missed his family and friends in Ireland and that the Bay City Roller life was not for him.

Paton has already found a replacement in Pat McGlynn, 18, an unknown from Edinburgh, Scotland.

From Ireland Ian says, "I'm happy to be away from it all. When you're a pop star, the pressures are immense. Some can put up with it. Frankly, I can't. When we weren't on stage, we were literally locked up together inside four walls. I got more and more depressed as each day went on, and I decided to come back and maybe rejoin my old group, the Young City Stars."

IRISH GUITARIST IAN MITCHELL

Ian, whose father is a caterer for the Royal Air Force, earned $50 a week as a guitarist with his old group before he signed with the Bay City Rollers. He was brought in as a replacement for Alan Longmuir, 27, who had left the group. Longmuir also complained of the pressures.

Child Discounts

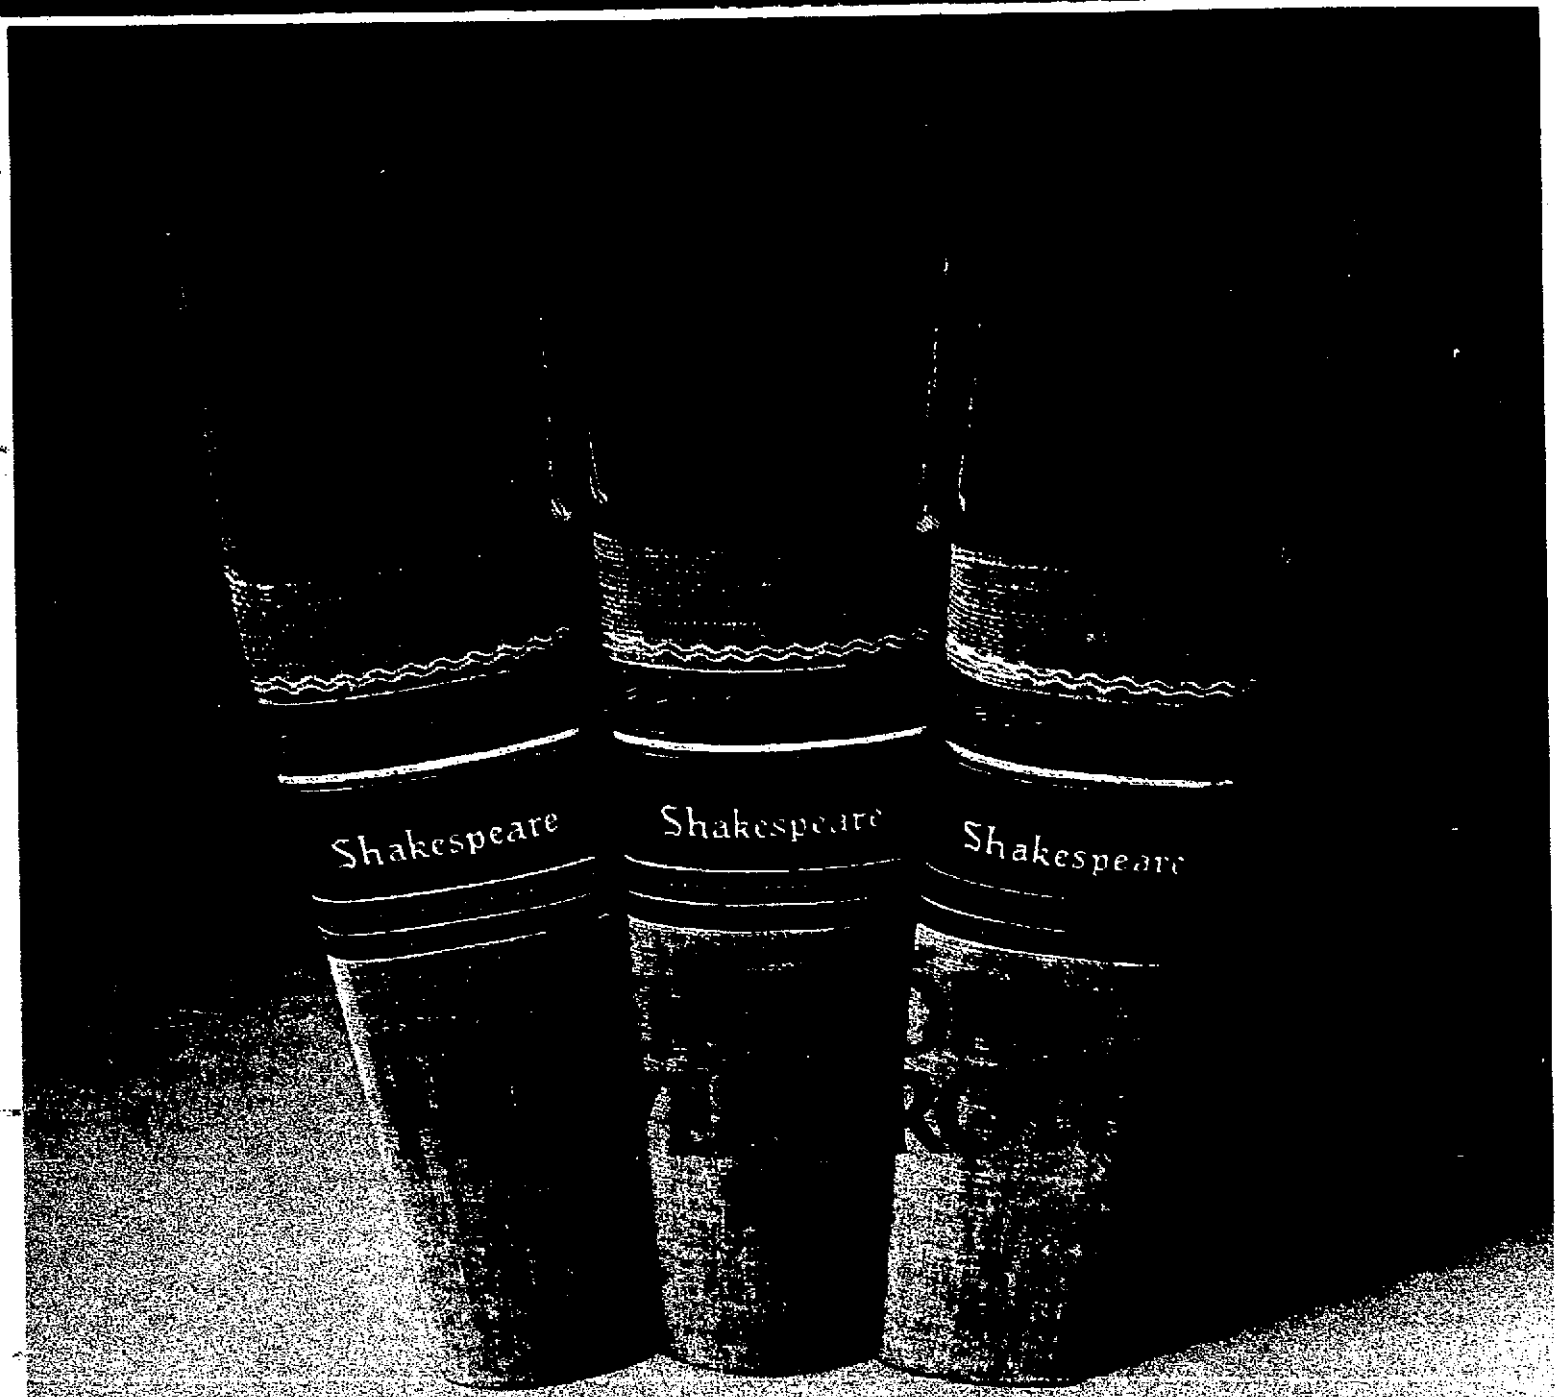

Under a new Amtrak plan, students in Grades 7 to 12 can travel on trains for 40 percent off. Students must travel in groups of 15 or more, and one adult escorting every 10 children will be eligible for the same discount.

Campus Reporters

Watergate has been to journalism what Sputnik was to the science boom of the late 1950's.

A new breed of aggressive journalists is being educated on college campuses throughout the country. These young reporters are investigating everything from the size of macaroni noodles in the school cafeteria to the activities of the school president.

They are so tireless and persevering that one Ivy League dean recently complained about "those damn kids who call during dinner demanding quotes."

Now you can own it all.

Everything Shakespeare ever wrote.

Every comedy. Every tragedy. Every historical drama. Every epic and romantic poem. Every finely-chiseled sonnet.

They're yours in three handsome volumes for only $1.00, as your introduction to The Classics Club.

The Classics Club is quite unlike any other book club. It doesn't offer best sellers that come and go. Instead, it offers its members a chance to stay young through great books that will never grow old.

These books include Utopia by Thomas More; the wisdom of Plato, Aristotle and Marcus Aurelius; Benjamin Franklin's Autobiography; Omar Khayyam's Rubaiyat; Walden by Thoreau; and other fresh, spontaneous, outspoken works that stretch your mind and sweep away the mental cobwebs that hold back most men.

You never have to buy any of these books. (To force you to buy a classic would be barbaric.) Take only those books you really want to own. And, at any time, you may cancel your membership, without penalty or hurt feelings.

The selections themselves are remarkable values. They're carefully printed on expensive paper stock. They're hard-bound in matched wheat-colored buckram, worked and stamped in crimson, black, and 23-karat gold.

And through direct-to-the-public distribution, we are able to offer our members these deluxe editions for only $4.89 each, plus postage and handling.

Interested? We'll send you the complete works of Shakespeare. Volume I, containing all his Comedies. Volume II, the Historical Dramas. Volume III, the Tragedies and Poems. Over 1300 pages in three matched Classics Club volumes. All three (regularly $14.67) for only $1.00, plus postage and handling.

We're betting that once you savor the words and thoughts that made Shakespeare the most quoted author of all time, you'll want to stay in the Club so you can meet some of the other great story tellers, philosophers, poets, and historians who, like Shakespeare, have lit our way and helped us to see life more clearly.

Don't send any money now. We'll bill you later. Just fill in the coupon now, while the invitation still stands.

Mail the coupon to The Classics Club, Roslyn, New York 11576.

Please enroll me as a member and send me at once the complete works of Shakespeare. I enclose no money now. After a week's examination, I will either keep my books and pay $1 (plus postage and handling) or return them. As a member, I will get a complete list of titles from which to select the books I want. For each volume I choose, I pay only $4.89 (plus postage and handling). I may return any book at the Club's expense and I may cancel my membership at any time.
